HEROES OF FAITH

Sunday School Lesson for June 13, 1909

Specialty Arranged for This Paper

LESSON TEXT.—Hebrews 11:1-3. Memory verses 24, 25.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."—Heb. 11:1.

Suggestion and Practical Thought.

Subject: What Faith Has Done for Others and Can Do for Us.

What Faith Is.—Vs. 1-3. How does the writer define faith? "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Faith is not hope, but underlies hope and renders hope confident. Faith is not the vision of mysteries, but that proof of them in heart and life which assures us of them without any sight of them.

How does the writer illustrate this faith? "By it the elders (not all men of ancient time, but those of special renown called 'elders') obtained a good report" (R. V., "had witness borne to them," i. e., in the Scripture). This verse sums up the long and splendid catalogue that follows.

What is the first example of faith? That of Abel the righteous (so called three times out of the four mentions of him in the New Testament; see Matt. 23:35; 1 John 3:12). His faith in God led to obedience, and thus he offered the kind of sacrifice which God approved and accepted, perhaps by fire from heaven.

What is the second example of faith? The patriarch Enoch, who "walked with God" (the Septuagint, used here, has it "was well pleasing to God"); "and he was not; for God took him." This proves his faith, for no one can go to God without faith in him.

What is the third example of faith? Noah, whose faith in God's warnings of the coming deluge led him to build the ark. "

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy sold on a guarantee that if you are not satisfied after using two-thirds of a bottle according to directions, your money will be refunded. It is up to you to try. Sold by all druggists.

Summerfield, Ala. June 12, 1909. Editor Banner—Please let me have a small space in the Banner to say a few words to the readers. The health of our little town is good.

The farmers have the blues on account of so much rain. The crops are indeed very sorry. Cotton is no good; corn not much better, although this is a fine farming country.

We have good church and school facilities here. We have a nine months school every year, taught by Miss Jennie Mixon, an accomplished lady.

The M. E. Church has an orphan home institution at this place which reflects much credit on the church and community. It is conducted by Miss Sadie Hunt as matron.

The literary school closed Friday with a lovely concert Friday night. The concert was a complete success, the program being carried out to a letter.

Mr. H. B. McCary and wife of Easley have been visiting relatives here; also Mr. Arthur McCary and a friend.

Success to the Banner. S. B. McCARY.

Card of Thanks. We desire to thank the kind people of Clanton for their kindness during the illness and death of our dear uncle, Prof. R. E. R. Hicks, J. P. GORR and WIRZ. June 15, 1909.

Mountain Creek

On Thursday, June 10, a party consisting of Mrs. E. V. Speer and little son Edward, of Chicago, and Misses Lilla Thornton, Nellie Gray, Mamie Baxley and Zula Coburn of Mountain Creek, Kathleen Snyder of Montgomery; Messrs. Will Snyder, Willie Wilson, Hazard Baxley, Sid Scott, Bonnie and Guy Roberts, Master Robert Thornton and Charlie Henderson of Mountain Creek, went out to "The a Round" on a picnic. A delightful dinner was served on the mountain. In the afternoon everybody went in bathing and swimming. About six o'clock the party returned to Mountain Creek, where they enjoyed refreshments and then departed for their homes.

Plotcher

Dear Editor—Please allow me a small space in the dear old Banner as it has been some time since I saw any news from here. Farmers are getting down hearted on account of so much rain, but we should all be submissive to our blessed Master's will.

The ice cream supper given by Mr. and Mrs. Reubuck Saturday night was enjoyed by a large crowd. Everyone seemed to enjoy it fine. Hope we will have the pleasure of another one soon.

Mr. J. T. Anderson and wife have been visiting relatives at Randolph. What has become of Blue Eyes? Come again, we are always glad to hear from you.

THE WEEPING WILLOW. HARRIED. JOHNSON-SUDDUTH.

On Wednesday afternoon, June 2, Mr. J. O. Johnson of Easley and Miss Florence Mae Suduth of East Lake were happily united at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Wilma Kilburn, Rev. A. C. Swindall performing the ceremony. A few friends and relatives attended. Mr. Johnson formerly resided in Clanton, and his friends here wish him and his bride many years of happiness and prosperity.

Mountain Springs. Editor Banner—Please allow me a small space in your valuable paper to say a few words.

Farmers are behind with their work on account of so much rain. Rev. Tom Rutherford filled his regular appointment at this place Sunday.

Messrs. Cable Moats and Tom Miller got disappointed Saturday night. Misses Mae and Ruby Williamson went to the river Sunday and I guess they had a fine time.

Soldiers Home

James E. Rasimi, the blind violinist of the Old Soldiers' Home, and one of the best known of Alabama's Veterans, died at the Home here Tuesday. Two weeks ago, as he wheeled the chair in which he lived, about the porch of the hospital at the Home, he fell down the steps, unable to see whither he guided himself.

Though no bones were broken, the shock was great, to one of his years and condition, and after two weeks' lingering, he died Tuesday. Rasimi, who lived in the hospital, in his sitting chair, was known to every visitor at the Home. All day he would sit with his violin under his chin and play.

He was in Montgomery during last winter, at a fiddlers' convention. James E. Rasimi was the only survivor of an old Mobile family of French extraction. His life was one of an artist and fraught with romance.

For years he was a dancing master, and with his skill with the violin, was a favorite. He played at all the dances and at many social functions. He served throughout the Civil War, a member of the 3d Alabama, Co. B, in the command of Colonel Harvey E. Jones of Montgomery.

After the war, he settled in Mobile, and a devoted son, lived with his mother. He never married. A few years ago his eyesight failed, and he became stone blind.

Even in his blindness he kept up his playing, until forced to call on assistance. He came to the Home a few years ago, and by his talent had become one of the bright spots in the lives of the lonely old soldiers. His mother died only a few years ago, just before he came to Mountain Creek, and this severance of the last tie brought about the decision to come to the Home.

TEACHERS' EXAMINATION. The next State examination for teachers in Chilton county will be held at Clanton, Ala., in the Clanton High school building, beginning on the first Monday in July, 1909. All applicants should be present at 9 a.m. so that they could complete the preliminary work by 10 a.m. and be ready to take up the regular work without delay. No applicants will be admitted after 10 a.m. except those holding second grade certificates and intend to turn such certificates in and take first grade.

J. W. MOORE, Co. Sept. NOTICE. At the expiration of two weeks from this date, application will be made to the State Pardon Board for the parole of W. J. A. Melton, convicted in 1905 in Circuit Court of Chilton county, of murder in first degree.

This 3d day of June, 1909. Women Who Are Bored. Those attractive women who are lovely in face, form and temper are the envy of many, who might be like them. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Consumption or kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. For all such, Electric Bitter works wonders. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion. Many charming women owe their health and beauty to it. 30¢ at Upchurch Drug Co.

Lawley

Thanks for a short space to say a few words from this part of the world.

So much damp weather, some people have very bad colds, but no serious sickness at present.

Last week the death angel visited the home of Mr. Clark Shoults and took from him his dear mother. She has gone where all is peace and joy; resting and waiting for her loved ones.

A storm visited this part of the world and lots of fence had to be repaired and trees cleared out of the way. Lots of corn was flooded and it was a very serious time, but we are very thankful no lives were lost.

We hear several of the farmers talking of planting wheat next year instead of so much cotton. If they will stand to that maybe there won't be so much rain. Then the speculators will have more breath for something else.

Grandma Mix has gone to Scottsboro to visit her step-son and grand-children.

Mr. Eugene McGee and family enjoyed Sunday at Mr. Frank Adams.

Mr. Neely Barnett and family from Scottsboro have been visiting relatives near Lawley.

Mr. Croff Shoults has moved in his new house.

Dr. Connell, the dentist of Stanton, has been on a business trip in our midst.

DIARRHEA—DO YOU HAVE IT? This is caused by the bile being reabsorbed into the circulation. To get rid of this trouble it is necessary to use a good liver medicine to eliminate the surplus bile from the system. St. Joseph's Liver Regulator (either liquid or powder) does this to perfection. Use it for all bilious troubles and you will soon feel better. Accept no substitute, but insist on having the genuine St. Joseph's Liver Regulator. Druggists and dealers sell it, liquid, 50 cents a bottle; powder, in tin boxes, 25 cents a box, five boxes for a dollar.

Have your weak eyes and dull headache stopped by having J. V. Higgins, the Jeweler and Optician, to fit you up perfectly with a nice pair of glasses. Perfect fit guaranteed.

Any mother who has had experience with this distressing ailment will be pleased to know that a cure may be effected by applying Chamberlain's Salve as soon as the child is done nursing. Wipe it off with a soft cloth before allowing the babe to nurse. Many trained nurses use this salve with best results. For sale by all druggists.

Last Thursday night some excitement was created in Clanton, about eight o'clock, by the report of two pistol shots, and it was rumored that burglars had been seen in the Peoples Savings Bank, but on investigation the rumor was proved groundless and there was nothing doing.

Poor farmers and cotton planters are getting too much rain and grass is growing freely. Cotton planters tell me there is no chance for them to work out the grass, it is too late to replant, and the prospects so far as cotton is concerned are gloomy in the extreme.

MADE TRIP AROUND THE HORN WITH BATTLESHIP FLEET.

A bugle was blown at this moment of the terrible game and three banderilleros and three toreros ran out upon the arena, floating red cloaks before the flowing, foaming, bellowing, pawing bull. Charging one after another, only to be blinded or distracted by the ever evading torero. Suddenly they withdrew from the center, leaving one banderillero holding two banderillos in his uplifted hands. Seeing the seemingly defenseless man alone in the center, the bull charged, only to miss the man and receive the banderillos in his thick neck, one floating the Stars and Stripes and the other the Peruvian Ensign. The deafening cheers were renewed. Three times the bull charged, and six more banderillos were left standing in the poor animal's neck, which was now badly torn and spattered with blood. The bugle again called and the matador, with sword and bright red cloth, ran out upon the arena, and walking up to the presidents box, asked permission to kill the bull. Permission being granted, the matador advanced to the center flaunting his red cloak. Seeing the new adversary, flaunting the offending color, the bull charged again and again, only to miss the little body of his tormentor and return more desperate than ever, his flanks heaving with labored breathing. Suddenly the matador faced the bull, and drew his sword to a ready and met the on coming animal, planting the weapon to the hilt between the shoulders down through the neck. A flood of blood a stagger and the lord of kine is dead. A team of horses galloped into the arena, a toggle was made fast and the dead animal was dragged away to be cut up and given to the poor. The crowd went into hysterics, the band played and pandemonium reigned. Money, jewelry, canes, etc., were showered upon the matador, toreros and banderilleros.

Six bulls were thus killed, some more mercifully than others, some at the first thrust, while others were only killed after two or three futile thrusts. The second bull threw a torero, piercing and fatally injuring him. The fifth bull caught the matador twice, the first time almost trampling him to death and the second time in the neck under the chin, with his horns, severely injuring him. On the morning of the 29th the president of Peru stood out into the bay on board a small yacht and taking up a position at the entrance reviewed the fleet as it steamed out on a way to Magdalena Bay, Mexico. As the Georgia prepared to take her position in the column she hoisted the signal "man overboard," dropped a life boat and swung clear of the other ships. The man was soon picked up and the Georgia resumed her position upon clearing the harbor. After an uneventful trip of 13 days, land was sighted off the starboard bow, and noon found the fleet anchored in Magdalena Bay. During the entire trip drilling at the great guns had been carried on and the ships were now prepared for target practice.

Hampton Schoolhouse

What is Sunday school for? It is to study and teach God's word. Then why not go? I think if those who are older would go and take more interest in Sunday school, and the study and teaching of God's word, the we who are younger would become more interested in going. How can we expect the young people to be moral and religious, if the older people do not set a good example for them. Parents, what is your hope for your child if you do not lead a sober and christian life? If you have any love for your children (and what father and mother has not) then you will do all in your power to train them up to be God loving and God fearing children. Teach them the way of truth and life while they are young, and while you are with them, for you know not how soon God is going to call you from this world, and from your dear children. Then why not begin now before it is too late to teach them of the Savior, who loved us so well that He not only left His home in heaven for us, but gave His own precious life that we might be saved from sin. Then if He loved us so much, why should we not love Him? And if we appreciate the great love He had for us, we will prove it by doing something for Him, and for the up building of His cause and kingdom. Then take your children to Sunday school, tell them the benefit of going, and why they should go. Point out to them the right way of life, and help them to go that way. Ob! parents, wake up and take more interest in your children. Teach them that there is a God, and that He should be honored and respected. Then children, let us take more interest in the worship of our Savior. Let's go to Sunday school and to church, and whenever we go and where ever we go where God's worship is being carried on, let us, as loving, kind and respectful children conduct ourselves in a way that will not only be an honor to our parents, but also to our God. We cannot do too much for Him. If all our lives are spent in service for Him, we cannot half repay Him the great debt we owe, for He gave His life for us. Then let us not be so unappreciative as to not try to do something for Him. Let us put on the Armor of God so that we will be able to stand against the devil and his temptations. Christ is the way of salvation. If we expect a home in heaven, we must accept Him. Then let's not wait. Now is the time. There is none who are willing to go into an endless hell. There is only two places for us; one is heaven and the other is hell. Which will you take? For the sake of your souls accept Christ now, before it is too late. Oh yes, there's a room in heaven above, room for every sin-sick soul. Yes, there's a room for you and me, room for both old and young. Sinner, won't you heed the call? Jesus stands with beckoning hands, awaiting those who heed the call.

One in hopes of eternal life, ONLY A GIRL.

1:45. Our District Association, D. S. Robinson, President. Minutes of last convention. Miss Strook, Secretary.

2. The Sunday school as an Educational Force, Miss Gibson. The Sunday school as a Moral Force, Judge Lewis H. Reynolds. The Sunday school as a Spiritual Force.

3:30. Five minute talks by the superintendents on the following subjects: Blackboard work and maps in the Sunday school. What are some of the simplest ways of putting new life in a school? How widen the horizon of superintendent and Teacher if they are in a rut? What new successful feature has been introduced into your school during the past year? Adjournment.

All the schools in this district are requested to be represented at this meeting. Especial attention is called to the fact that a report and a small contribution is necessary from each school before we can reach the "Bazaar Standard." It is hoped that all the schools will comply with these conditions.

Many of our citizens are drifting towards Bright's disease by neglecting symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble which Foley's Kidney Remedy will quickly cure. Up church Drug co.

The following comprised a jolly party that departed on No. 2, Tuesday morning for Mostellers station, near Talladega Springs: Dr. and Mrs. P. I. Hopkins, Mrs. Gamma Anderson, Misses Minnie Latham, Eula McAdams, Estella Morgan, Patti VanDerwee and Edwina Moore; Messrs. J. H. and J. O. Middleton, S. C. Matthews, H. G. Reynolds and L. R. Sawyer. They will spend several days fishing on the Coosa river.

Messrs. Sam Johnson and Durcan Strook visited Verbena this week.

Sometimes you may be told that there are other things just as good as DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. That isn't so. Nothing made is as good as DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills for any ailments of the kidney or bladder, which always result in weak back, backache, rheumatic pains, rheumatism and urinary disorders. A trial of DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills is sufficient to convince you how good they are. Send your name to E. C. De Witt & Co., Chicago, for a free trial box. They are sold here by Upchurch Drug co.

Mr. Judson Strook spent Sunday with his parents at Verbena.

Mr. Sam Hookins is spending several days at Bessemer.

Mrs. S. Goodwin of Montgomery is visiting Mrs. R. E. Luckie.

Mrs. A. E. Burns of Montevallo was a visitor to Clanton Tuesday.

Mrs. Tipton Mullins is visiting in Birmingham.

Miss Ethel Toland, after a most successful year here, left for her home at Oxford-Friday, to the regret of her many friends and patrons.

Mr. Edward C. Burke of Montgomery, is spending a few days with his friend, Mr. Wm. M. Adams.

Will McCary, a negro prisoner, gave Deputy Sheriff J. F. Palmer a lively chase Monday afternoon. While being taken to jail he jerked loose from the Deputy and started out at a fast clip for the swamp. Mr. Palmer succeeded in capturing him before he had gone very far.

If you are not satisfied after using according to directions two-thirds of a bottle of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, you can have your money back. The tablets cleanse and invigorate the stomach, improve the digestion, regulate the bowels. Give them a trial and get well. Sol by all druggists.

Why Take Alcohol?

Are you thin, pale, easily tired, lack your usual vigor and strength? Then your digestion must be poor, your blood thin, your nerves weak. You need a tonic and alternative. You need Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only Sarsaparilla entirely free from alcohol. We believe your doctor would endorse these statements, or we would not make them. Ask him and find out. Follow his advice. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Kodol

For Dyspepsia and Indigestion

If you Suffer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gas on the Stomach, Belching, Sour Stomach, Heart-burn, etc., a little Kodol will Relieve you almost Instantly

Kodol supplies the same digestive juices that are found in a healthy stomach. Being a liquid, it starts digestion at once. Kodol not only digests your food, but helps you enjoy every mouthful you eat. You need a sufficient amount of good, wholesome food to maintain strength and health. But, this food must be digested thoroughly, otherwise the pains of indigestion and dyspepsia are the result. When your stomach cannot do its work properly, take something to help your stomach. Kodol is the only thing that will give the stomach complete rest. Why? Because Kodol does the same work as a strong stomach, and does it in a natural way.

So, don't neglect your stomach. Don't become a chronic dyspeptic. Keep your stomach healthy and strong by taking a little Kodol. You don't have to take Kodol all the time. You only take it when you need it. Kodol is perfectly harmless.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 16 times as much as the 50c bottle. Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

How to Cure Your Piles

Due Often To Carelessness or Neglect and Stubborn to Cure

"The knife is not always necessary to cure even desperate cases of piles," says a physician whose years and experience make him an authority. "Indeed," he says further: "I have known some very aggravated cases of long standing cured by a simple home remedy that restored to the bowels easy natural daily movements."

And the doctor is right, as many letters from cured people in various parts of the country prove. If sufferers from piles, rectal tumors and ulcers would try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin they would often save themselves the terrible pain and danger and the heavy expense of a severe surgical operation.

Piles are often due to constipation and are always aggravated by it. Easy natural movements of the bowels such as are invariably produced by this famous laxative without pain or griping do much to restore a normal healthy condition to the bowels and thus cure piles.

M. H. Miller, Mowesque, Ill., says: "I have been troubled all my life with piles brought on by constipation. I tried many doctors' and numerous remedies, but found no relief until I used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I have used it as a laxative and stomach remedy for the past nine years and have no more troubles with piles." H. N. John, Minneapolis, Kan., says he suffered for four years with piles which were so bad that he could not work. Four bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cured him, and he says he has not been bothered since.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a safe sure remedy for constipation, restoring easy natural daily movements in the worst old chronic cases, yet so mild and pleasant to take mothers give it to their babies with splendid results. It is sold by all druggists at 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Pepsin Syrup Co., 302 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill., will send a free sample to anyone who has not used it and will give it a fair trial.

NOT A MATTER OF LOYALTY.

Simple But Insuperable Reason Why Subject Could Not Kneel Before His King.

One family that four types of men, from time to time, have afforded royalty more amusement of a quiet sort than provincial mayors of England. From the Foreland to Penzance, by the Holland, contains the story of a mayor of Weymouth who, during one of the visits of King George to the town, was destined to afford "comic relief" to a ceremony of some importance.

The occasion was the presentation of an address of welcome to the king, and we are told that the mayor, on approaching to present it, to the astonishment and dismay of all, instead of kneeling as he had been told to do, seized the queen's hand to shake it as he might that of any other lady.

God, however, the master of the ceremony, hurriedly told him of the faux pas, saying: "You should have knelt, sir."

"Sir, I cannot," was the reply.

"Everybody does, sir," hotly asserted the official.

The mayor grew red, and evidently much upset, exclaimed: "Confound it, sir, but I've got a wooden leg!"

History records that "a smile sufficed the face of her majesty, and the king laughed outright."—Youth's Companion.

According to the fifth annual report of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, at its convention held in Washington, May 1935, there were in the United States on May 1 over 280 associations whose special objects are the prevention and relief of tuberculosis. Three hundred sanatoria and hospitals are devoted to the treatment of tuberculosis. Besides these, there are 223 special tuberculosis clinics and dispensaries, where tuberculosis patients may receive medical advice and home treatment.

OVER THE FENCE Neighbor Says Something.

The front yard fence is a famous council place on pleasant days. Maybe to chat with someone one along the street, or for friendly gossip with next door neighbor. Sometimes it is only small talk but other times neighbor has something really good to offer.

An old resident of Blair, Texas, got some mighty good advice this way once.

He says: "Drinking coffee left me nearly dead with dyspepsia, kidney disease and bowel trouble, with constant pains in my stomach, back and side, and so weak I could scarcely walk."

"One day I was chatting with one of my neighbors about my trouble and told her I believed coffee hurt me. Neighbor said she knew lots of people to whom coffee was poison and she pleaded with me to quit it and give Postum a trial. I did not take her advice right away but tried a change of climate, which did not do me any good. Then I dropped coffee and took up Postum."

"My improvement began immediately and I got better every day I used Postum."

"My bowels became regular in two weeks, all my pains were gone. Now I am well and strong and can eat anything I want to without distress. All of this is due to my having quit coffee, and to the use of Postum regularly."

"My son who was troubled with indigestion thought that if Postum helped me so, it might help him. It did, too, and he is now well and strong again."

"We like Postum as well as we ever liked the coffee and use it altogether in my family in place of coffee and all keep well." "There's a Reason." Read "The Road to Wellville" in Figs.

WISE FOREST CARE

President Findley Advocates Scientific Methods by Owners.

President Findley Official Tells of Necessity of Judicious Management of Southern Woodlands.

That the wise management of the forests is regarded by President W. W. Findley of the Southern Railway as a necessity in the development of the south is strongly brought out in his recent address to the student body of the University of Georgia.

"In my opinion," said President Findley, "the economic importance of the management of our southern forests is to be secured from them the largest present profit consistent with their preservation cannot be overestimated. In addition to their influence upon stream flow, tending to diminish the destructiveness of floods and to obtain higher water for navigation, the generation of power in the south, they form the foundation of our woodworking industries."

In comparatively recent years the North Atlantic states predominated in lumber manufacturing and other woodworking industries. Timber supplies in that section have been almost exhausted and these industries are turning the rapidly-receding forests into the south and west, greatly increasing the value of the timber lands.

"If southern woodworking industries are to thrive in years to come, they must be assured of a constant supply of their raw material. This can be brought about only by the adoption of scientific methods of forestry by the owners of our woodlands."

The front yard fence is a famous council place on pleasant days. Maybe to chat with someone one along the street, or for friendly gossip with next door neighbor. Sometimes it is only small talk but other times neighbor has something really good to offer.

An old resident of Blair, Texas, got some mighty good advice this way once.

He says: "Drinking coffee left me nearly dead with dyspepsia, kidney disease and bowel trouble, with constant pains in my stomach, back and side, and so weak I could scarcely walk."

"One day I was chatting with one of my neighbors about my trouble and told her I believed coffee hurt me. Neighbor said she knew lots of people to whom coffee was poison and she pleaded with me to quit it and give Postum a trial. I did not take her advice right away but tried a change of climate, which did not do me any good. Then I dropped coffee and took up Postum."

"My improvement began immediately and I got better every day I used Postum."

"My bowels became regular in two weeks, all my pains were gone. Now I am well and strong and can eat anything I want to without distress. All of this is due to my having quit coffee, and to the use of Postum regularly."

SEPARATE STALL FOR CALVES

Greedy Little Animals Must Be Restrained While Feeding to Prevent All Kinds of Trouble.

When one has quite a few calves to raise by hand it is very essential to have some way of fastening them while they eat. They are such lively and greedy little creatures that they will cause no end of trouble if a man has no other way of holding them while they eat than by straddling their necks. This drawing shows a stanchion that is very easily made and proves very effective.

Poles are fastened to the floor so that they will rock back and forth between two horizontal pieces placed four feet above the floor. A peg is placed at the proper point in these two pieces to hold the pole perpendicular.

A three-cornered board is placed as indicated in the cut to keep the calf from getting his head through the wrong hole. The little fellows soon learn their place, and one can lock them in their stanchion and know that they will mind their own business until he lets them out.

NEW DISEASE AMONG SHEEP.

Owners in Southwest Suffering Much Loss by Ravages of "Pinque" Among the Flocks.

For several years past the sheepmen of the southwest have suffered serious losses from a disease known among the Mexican herders as "pinque."

"Pinque" is popularly supposed to be caused by eating either leaves or roots of a plant which has in the last few years been quite prominent in the public eye as the "rubber plant" or "rubber weed."

Whether this plant is a true rubber plant or not, is a matter which does not interest the sheepmen so much as some remedy for the sickness that follows its eating by their sheep. On the Carson National Forest in New Mexico, Forest Ranger Bert Phillips, in whose district a great many sheep had recently died from pinque, after making a study of the sickness, suggested to the sheepmen whose animals were dying with it, that drenches of hot water and salt might prove efficacious.

The materials for the remedy were so quickly obtained and the remedy so easily administered that several of the owners gave the plan a trial. The sick sheep were drenched every hour with liberal doses of the mixture, with the result that animals which, before drenching, were unable to stand, were inside of 24 hours, eating and running around with the rest of the herd, apparently as well as ever.

While the government experts have not yet made a study of this disease, or given the suggested remedy official sanction, the remedy itself is so apparently harmless and unobjectionable that, considering the results obtained by its use, there seems to be no possible danger in giving it full publicity.

Cause of Sour Milk.

Sour milk is from a growth of bacteria. No bacteria, no sour milk. Milk left at animal temperature will be sour in 12 hours. No bacteria will grow for about six hours if cooled to 70 degrees; then they will make the milk sour in 36 hours. When milk is cooled at 50 degrees immediately after milking, bacteria grow so slowly that it will remain sweet for four or five days. But though it may not sour, some other bacteria have been growing at this temperature, and will give bad flavor to the milk. So it is best to use it before that time—say not later than the third day. That is long enough to hold milk for ordinary use.

Feeding Hay.

It is a mistake to fill the mangers full of hay and allow the horses to eat all they will at all feeds. The only time a horse should be allowed to eat a full feed of hay is at night, while he is resting, and when there is a long time for digestion. Hay is a bulky feed and distends the digestive organs. A horse with his stomach stuffed full of hay must undoubtedly suffer discomfort in working under such conditions. Hence, the morning and noon feeds of hay should be light, so that the horse may not be compelled to work with a sense of undue fullness all day.

Unprofitable Cows.

The unprofitable cow may be a product of her owner's lack of wisdom in feeding her, or she may be naturally of a beefy kind and unfit for milking in any case. If the first be the cause it can be mended easily by change of methods. If the last be the reason, the remedy lies in exchanging her for cold cash at the butcher's or stock yards. Many a good cow does not pay her way because she is not fed right.

ONE THING THAT WAS CERTAIN

No Doubt in the Baggage Man's Mind as to Contents of What Looked Like Coffin.

In an emergency the manufacturer of Limburger cheese was forced to use strategy with a shipment. Ordinarily his product went in special cars, but in this instance no car was available and the order must be filled. Two hundred pounds of the fragrant comestible was put in a rough, oblong box, and taken to the railroad baggage room. Then the manufacturer bought a ticket for himself and the box, and entered the train. At the first stop he went ahead to the baggage car to see that there was no trouble. He stood by the box in a disconsolate attitude and shaded his eyes with his hand. The baggage man was sympathetic. "A relative?" he asked. "Yes," answered the manufacturer. "It is my brother." "Well," said the railroad man, philosophically, "you have one consolation. He's dead, all right."—San Francisco Argonaut.

TORE HIS SKIN OFF

In Shreds—Itching Was Intense—Sleep Was Often Impossible.

Cured by Cuticura in Three Weeks.

"At first an eruption of small pustules commenced on my hands. These spread later to other parts of my body, and the itching at times was intense, so much so that I literally tore the skin off in shreds in seeking relief. The awful itching interfered with my work considerably, and also kept me awake nights. I tried several doctors and used a number of different ointments and lotions but received practically no benefit. Finally I settled down to the use of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, with the result that in a few days all itching had ceased and in about three weeks' time all traces of my eruption had disappeared. I have had no trouble of this kind since. H. A. Kruskoff, 5714 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., November 18 and 28, 1937."

Logical Reasoning.

A certain young man's friends thought he was dead, but he was only in a state of coma. When, in ample time to avoid being buried, he showed signs of life, he was asked how it seemed to be dead.

"Dead?" he exclaimed. "I wasn't dead. I knew all that was going on. And I knew I wasn't dead, too, because my feet were cold and I was hungry."

"But how did that fact make you think you were still alive?" asked one of the curious.

"Well, this way: I knew that if I were in heaven I wouldn't be hungry. And if I was in the other place my feet wouldn't be cold."

Quite True.

Marian, a little three-year-old, is very stubborn. One day, when she was fretful, her mother, wishing to engage her mind, attracted her attention to a cow in a vacant lot and asked what it was.

Marian replied, "boss" (horse) and stubbornly refused to give in. Her mother, wishing to get a correct answer without scolding, asked: "What eats grass besides a horse?" "More boss," was the quick response.—De Lineator.

CRIPPLED WITH SCIATICA

Caused by Disordered Action of the Kidneys.

Samuel D. Ingraham, 3405 E. Main St., Lewiston, Idaho, says: "For two years I was crippled with sciatic rheumatism in my thighs and could not get about without crutches. The kidney secretions became irregular, painful, and showed a heavy sediment. Doctors were not helping me so I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. I improved soon, and after a while was entirely free from my suffering. I am in the best of health now and am in debt to Doan's Kidney Pills for saving my life."

As the Boy Saw the Lesson.

Prof. Charles Zeublin of the University of Chicago was discussing at a dinner the greatest paintings of the world.

"The legends that are beautiful and immortal," he said, "have in them turth that we all, according to our kind, take home. This is true in pictures, poems, songs. For different people they have different messages. For instance, in my native Pendleton some of the mothers used to cut the children's hair. They did it with shears and a bowl. The operation was often painful, and the result was never elegant."

In Sunday school a Pendleton teacher once told her pupils the tragic story of Samson and Delilah. Then she turned to a little boy.

"What do you learn, Joe," she said, "from the Samson story?"

"It don't never pay," piped Joe, "to have a woman cut a feller's hair."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Is Tired of Praying.

A little girl in St. Louis the other evening was going through the usual form of prayer: "God bless mamma, and papa and make me a good girl," and so on, when all at once she seemed to come to a decision. "Now that is the last time I am going to say that prayer," she said, very gravely, looking at her mother. "You are older than I am and it is your place to ask for all those things and I don't see any use in two people's asking the same thing." Since then she has firmly refused to pray, insisting that it is her mother's place to ask God for blessings.

SPIRITUAL TRAINING.

Teachers, consider this question: Do you carry the spiritual teaching into every lesson? As far as teaching a Sunday school lesson is concerned, any person, matters not how wise a sinner he may be, can teach a lesson, that is, from a worldly view of the question, and to the literary light, but can any person teach a lesson spiritually? Can any person teach a lesson as Jesus would have taught it had he condescended to have used that subject? Can any person throw on the lesson the spiritual light and give their pupils the spiritual blessing that they should have? I say, no. The wonderful power of the Holy Spirit of eloquence, the learned men of modern times may stand amid their fame, the men of knowledge may stand before throngs and make that speech which would be pleasing to the human ear, and a person may teach a lesson and not have behind that a loving and earnest heart, from which flows that fount of truth and meaning, and yet, all those wonderful words, and all those efforts put forth to draw attention would be fruitless for O God, without them we can do nothing. It takes that person who is a friend of God to apply a lesson so that a sinner may get from it that spiritual benefit for which our great men of the past and the present have labored over so long. We may obtain those things that God only can give through earnest efforts and longing hearts. Many, many teachers have gone to their class on Sunday morning and had no idea for what purpose that lesson was given. And also many pupils have come to and gone from a class and yet have never known what that lesson taught or why that lesson was given, for it seemed too simple to be spiritual and seemed to go hand in hand with worldly pleasures, all because the teacher did not teach it spiritually. Why didn't she or he teach it spiritually? She is a good woman or he is a good man. Yes, probably so from our view, morally, but he didn't let Jesus do not stand, nor before his banner does not wave. Why? Because that individual does not, in his or her prayers, ask that "I may be given power to show my pupils the spiritual life of the coming lesson." Do you suppose kind friends, that Jesus in his days, taught lessons that applied to a sinner worldly, or do you suppose he merely taught or gave a lesson so that it might sound to a sinner (as the sinner might say) eloquent? No. How, then, would he teach a lesson? Would he use eloquent language that only the learned could understand? No. He would and did teach a lesson so that a little child could understand each word. Time may come and time may go, great men live and die, great deeds be done, and inventions be made, but never, never, as long as the weary ages of eternity roll, can a mortal invent that device by which a lesson may be applied spiritually, or human souls be saved, except through spiritual training and teaching and that can be had, only by those that trust in God.

Teachers, do you tell your class each Sunday of the mighty love of Christ? Do you show them the spiritual side of a lesson? Do you show them the things that might be a help to their weary souls? If not, why waste your time and theirs by telling them something that the wisest sinner on earth could tell them? LALLA SKEL.

MAN ON THE CORNER

One of the Rights He has, and Some He Has Not.

A gay crowd of young people from Clanton went to Verbena last Saturday night to the opening ball at the Clifton Hotel, where they were royally entertained by Hostess and his wife. Music was furnished by the Clanton string band and dancing was indulged in to a late hour. Everyone declared it to be a most enjoyable occasion.

It is but seldom that Clanton enjoys such singing as that of last Sunday at the court house. There was a large attendance in spite of the rain. Old-time singing from "Christian Harmony" and "Sacred Songs" was ably led by a number of gentlemen, and the voices of the large congregation swelled in unison, ascending in grateful praise to the Most High. It was an intellectual feast.

Lift up the heart, lift up the voice, rejoice, again, I say rejoice.

MAN ON THE CORNER

A gay crowd of young people from Clanton went to Verbena last night to the opening ball at the Clifton Hotel, where they were royally entertained by Host and his wife. Music was furnished by the Clanton string band and dancing was indulged in late hours. Everyone declared it to be a most enjoyable occasion.

It is but seldom that Clanton enjoys such singing as that of last night at the court house. There was a large attendance in spite of the rain. Old-time singing from the choir of the United States district court, led by a number of gentlemen, and the voices of the large congregation swelled in unison, ascending in grateful praise to the Most High. It was an intellectual feast.

With up the heart, lift up the voice, rejoice, again, I say rejoice.

IN BANKRUPT COURT.

Joseph Phillip VanDerveer, of Clanton, Chilton county, engaged in the business of running an electrical plant, filed a voluntary petition of bankruptcy yesterday in the Clerk's office of the United States district court for the middle district of Ala.

What a Blessing it is to have a balance in our credit at the bank, so that whatever happens, there is always something to rely upon.

A dollar saved is a dollar gained; a dollar may be easily saved by depositing in the bank, and can be had again immediately when wanted.

If you have not tried this plan, now is a good time to make a start.

LIFE OF HEEL FLY

ITS GROWTH AS DESCRIBED BY ENTOMOLOGIST HERRICK.

Interesting Document on Birth and Propagation of This Irritating Little Insect; Annoys Horses and Cattle.

Prof. Glenn W. Herrick, state entomologist and professor of entomology of the Agricultural and Mechanical college of Texas at College Station, who is soon to go to Cornell in a similar position, has contributed an interesting document to the discussion regarding the heel fly, in answer to a question by the editor of the Stockman and Farmer of San Antonio. Prof. Herrick says:

"Your letter, accompanied by a fly in a bottle, received. Yes, indeed, there is a heel fly, or more properly known as the bot fly or warble fly, because it is this fly that causes the so-called warbles or wools along the backs of cattle. This fly lays its eggs sometimes upon the heels of cattle, but it does not bite the latter, as is the popular notion. A similar fly lays its yellowish eggs upon the front legs and shoulders of horses, attaching them to the hairs. No doubt every farmer has seen these eggs, which are very conspicuous on horses in the summer time. These flies do not sting or bite the horses, although when they are flying about, the horse will stamp and throw up its head, as though it were being injured by the fly. As a matter of fact, this movement of the horse is evidently instinctive to prevent the fly from depositing its eggs, rather than from any harm the fly actually does at the time. Exactly so with the heel fly. Cattle stamp and run when these flies are trying to deposit their eggs, not because the cattle are actually stung by the flies, but evidently as an instinctive movement of protection against the deposition of the eggs."

"These flies have a very curious and interesting life history. In the case of the horse, the eggs are licked off and hatch in the mouth, where the grubs or larvae pass to the stomach and attach themselves to the lining of the stomach and constitute the so-called bots of horses. When these bots have attained growth they pass out with the dung, bore into the earth a short distance, and in 30 or 40 days come out ready to deposit eggs again in a short time."

"In a similar way the eggs of the heel fly are deposited on the hair around the heels of cattle and are licked off by the animal into the mouth. Here they hatch into grubs or larvae, which actually pass through the walls of the gutlet, and get just under the skin of the neck. From here they actually work their way between the skin and the flesh, through the loose blubbery tissue, to their position along the sides of the backbone of the animal. Here they are known as wools. Each grub has an opening through the skin for air, and they may be killed by stopping these openings with grease. After the wools complete their growth they come out of the skin, pass through the pupa stage and eventually develop into an adult fly, thus completing their life history."

HOW TO MAKE GURLER SILO

Illustration and Instructions for the Construction of Pit for Packing Fodder.

There are several silos made on the plan that is suggested in this connection and the style is commonly known as the Gurler. If properly constructed, it makes a very good receptacle for preserving corn. The accompanying illustration shows the kind of lath which may be used.

Remedy for Halter-Breaking.

A troublesome habit is that of halter-breaking. Once a horse finds it can break the halter it is everlasting at the job. To cure the habit is not nearly so easy as to prevent the horse from learning it. Horses that are inclined to pull and break their halters when fastened in the stall have often been cured in the following way: Two straps are lightly attached to a rope which passes through a ring fastened in the end of the halter strap. The halter strap passes through a ring in the stall. If a horse endeavors to go backwards the greater is the tendency to draw the forelegs from under the animal. A few attempts will cure even the worst halter-puller.

Transplant in Evening.

In transplanting any vegetable plants let it be done in the evening if possible. Press the soil firmly about the roots and water well. If after the water disappears dry earth is covered over the wet it will prevent baking of the soil about the roots when the sun comes out next day.

HOW TO GET RID OF RODENTS.

Government Biologist Gives Several Methods for Extermination of Rats in Rice Fields.

Dr. A. K. Fisher, who has charge of the economic investigation department of the United States biological station at Washington, has written an interesting letter to Frank M. Miller, president of the board of commissioners for the protection of birds, game and fish, on the extermination of field rats.

Some time ago several planters of St. John the Baptist parish complained of the ravages by rats in their fields, which are principally of rice, and asked the game commission to help.

Mr. Miller took the matter up with the government authorities and Dr. Fisher wrote the following reply:

"In reply I would state that the specimen of rat which is devastating the rice fields in the parish of St. John the Baptist and which you furnished for identification is the common brown or wharf rat, Mus norvegicus."

"It is a very difficult problem to destroy noxious rodents when attractive food is in abundance. If it is practicable at the present time to flood the infested areas, large numbers of young rats may be destroyed by this method. It is probable that you could make a very effective vehicle for poison by making a simple rice pudding, consisting of boiled rice, with molasses for sweetening. The pudding should be prepared in the following manner: Boil 25 pounds of rice until it is pretty well softened; drain off the water and add a quart of molasses, together with one ounce of sulphate of strychnine, previously dissolved in a pint of boiling water. After this mixture has stood for ten or twelve hours it may be placed in suitable localities in the evening, out of the way of domesticated animals and wild birds."

Investigate Rice Pests.

Dr. W. R. Dodson of the state experimental station, and William Newell of the Louisiana crop pest commission are spending much time now at the new rice experiment station at Crowley. Both have visited the station and they report that splendid progress is being made in the experiments, especially in view of the fact that this is the first year that the state has operated the station, and it took hold of the work this year rather late.

Dr. Dodson does not have to visit the station much now, as he has an assistant director in charge, who is looking after the detail work of carrying on the experiments in the growing of varieties, which is principally the line of work that is being followed this year. Mr. Newell, however, is conducting the investigations relative to the injurious insects that attack the rice, a complete study of which in Louisiana has not been made. Mr. Newell, so far, has not found a serious number of insects around Crowley.

However, he does not confine his work to the Crowley farm, but will go anywhere it is convenient in the rice belt to investigate insects that are reported to the crop pest commission as attacking the plant.

Amount of Oil Meals.

Cottonseed meal and linseed meal are both excellent dairy feeds, yet they must be fed with moderation. These oil meals are very rich in nitrogen, and highly nitrogenous foods should never be taken to excess, as they place heavy burden upon the kidneys. A cow, for instance, is able to appropriate for milk production a limited amount of cottonseed meal, and any eaten in excess of this amount goes to waste and is a burden rather than a help.

The average dairy cow is able to digest and appropriate for milk production from one to two pounds of linseed or cottonseed meal. In connection with these, of course, must be fed hay and other feeds. Oil meal mixed with ground corn, either with or without the cob, is about the best mixed heavy feed that can be given a cow. These meals are expensive feeds and the highest returns can be secured from them only when they are given in limited amounts that the animals will utilize to the best advantage. Find out by testing just how much each cow can utilize to advantage, and never give her any more than this amount. When measured, a rounding pint measure makes a good feed for the average cow."

STAIRWAY FOR WIRE FENCE.

This makes it easy to get over a barbed wire fence.

Transplant in Evening.

In transplanting any vegetable plants let it be done in the evening if possible. Press the soil firmly about the roots and water well. If after the water disappears dry earth is covered over the wet it will prevent baking of the soil about the roots when the sun comes out next day.

MAKES HOT RELISH

CURRY ADDS TO Piquancy OF VARIOUS DISHES.

Chicken and Veal Are Particularly Adapted for This Form of Seasoning—Curried Eggs for Luncheon or Sunday Tea.

Curry, the Hindoo sauce or relish whose making is one of the mysteries of the art, is the foundation of a vast number of dishes, more particularly in India and Persia, by means of which the housewife can curry favor with her dinner guests.

Onions, garlic, pepper, turmeric, ground coconut and fermented mango are only a few of the simples which enter into the composition of the hot Hindoo condiment—which has most so-called national dishes, including our own American mulligatawny, owed its original invention to some accident, famine or emergency. It comes in powder form.

Almost any flesh food can be curried to the queen's taste, but chicken is the most popular. For this dish procure a good-sized stewing pan, also, if desired, a couple of pounds of veal cutlet. Skin the fowl and cut the meat in pieces. Slice an onion and fry in butter, to which a tablespoonful of curry powder has been added. Then put in the meat, pour in some water, cover the kettle and let simmer by the hour over a slow fire. It may be well to reinforce the curry flavor by adding another spoonful of powder, as the boiling proceeds. Keep it irrigated, so as not to burn or scorch. Just before serving put on a blanket of "thickening," made with either flour or cornstarch.

Rice is boiled in the eastern fashion as follows: Throw half a cupful of rice into a large kettle two-thirds full of salted boiling water; leave it to boil 20 minutes, strain through a colander, then steam five minutes over a tea kettle, until the separate kernels are light and dry. Rice, thus prepared, accompanies all curries.

The curry should be placed in the center of a large platter, with the rice piled around it as a border. Cut narrow stripes of sweet red Spanish peppers and place in crosses on the rice as a garnish. Green peppers also can be used to enhance the color scheme.

Serve also a dish of grated young coconut, a dish of chutney, some Madras pickles and possibly a scoop of guava jelly.

Bombay duck (which is no duck at all, but a small dried fish), is another Hindoo delicacy hot relish, which doubtless is more popular with accidentals if it did not smell so heaven when warmed up in the oven.

In making beef curry the round is used, the process being the same as with chicken, except that a not so tart apple or two may be utilized for the thickening, being stewed with the meat after it has been boiled three hours.

An artful luncheon or Sunday tea dish is made by currying eggs. Make a white sauce, to which has been added a tablespoonful of curry powder, and pour it over hard-boiled eggs cut in quarter sections.

Almost all shellfish, too, can be curried in a way to make the most average gastronomic eat out of your head.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Edited and Controlled by
W. J. MORGAN,
Springfield, Missouri.

If the farmers did half as much thinking as the politicians they would increase their profits in proportion. While the farmer is doing his better with the product of his land, he is not receiving such high prices as we read about in the papers.

The way for the farmer to do is to go ahead and win. That will convince the politicians that we know what we are doing.

Progress doesn't come from marching to the men who are doing how at the first defeat. It comes from the men who are doing better that win the battles.

Unionism is not in the name. It will conquer the world by the close of this century. It is acting in good training.

With the Armour's stealing from the city of Chicago and the farmers' stealing from Uncle Sam by false manipulation of the scales, the captains of industry are setting a bad example to the youths of our land.

When the farmers of the country are once convinced that they ought to have something to do with setting a price on the products of the farms, and get together for that purpose, there'll be something doing.

E. H. Harriman, the great railroad king, says the railroad is not new regulating. He says that it is the government that needs regulating. The railroad companies have apparently taken the job in hand, the seem to have already regulated several federal judges.

The prices we hear about are too most and in some instances where the product is in great demand the price is abnormally and unusually high. The price paid by the consumer, after the product has passed through the hands of several middlemen, is no criterion by which to judge what the farmer receives. The selling value of the thing awells rapidly after leaving the hands of the farmer.

FARMERS WILL NAME PRICES

Convention at Springfield (Mo.) Takes First Step to Throttle Speculation in Farm Produce.

Pledging themselves to dispose of their field products collectively through the American Society of Equity, which is closely allied with the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union, the delegates in attendance at the convention of grain growers and cattle raisers, recently held at Springfield, Mo., took the first step in an attempt to down the buckshot and boards of trade over the United States.

The resolutions adopted followed the address of Thomas G. Nelson, national organizer, who stated he had arranged for 1904 meetings of grain growers in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Iowa, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, to be held before July 26 and that many more will be arranged before that date.

The meetings will be held in country school houses and at the various shipping points where arrangements will be made for storing the grain until there is a market demand, at which time the society and the Farmers' Union will set the price, which, it is stated, will be equitable.

"With the Farmers' Union and the Society of Equity working hand in hand," Mr. Nelson stated, "the doct of the speculator and the useless middleman, both of whom are a detriment to the grain grower, will be ended."

Caustic resolutions, scoring the buckshot and boards, which are responsible for the gambling in grain were adopted, as well as resolutions opposing legislation which aims to control railroad rates by ignoring state control. Such legislation, it alleged, will react on the farmers.

Alton W. Summers, an attorney of Dallas, Tex., who advised with the convention, and who had just returned from Washington, where he appeared before a number of committees, advocated the establishment by the government of a national system of grading farm products, such as wheat, corn and cotton. A committee was appointed to consider his ideas, and under present conditions the majority of all grain is graded by boards of trade, whose opinion, it is alleged, meets the demand of the buyer and not the seller.

Owing to the near approach of the harvesting season the proposed election of elevators and packing houses was not taken up this year. It has been decided as impracticable under present conditions.

Why Iowa Farmers Succeeded.

Why does the average Iowa farmer make nearly eight times as much per year as the average Mississippi farmer? The Iowa farmer keeps plenty live stock and puts the measure on his land. He rotates his crops, grows leguminous crops, and thoroughly prepares his land. He cultivates about fifty acres of this highly-productive soil by the use of strong teams at labor-saving farm implements. He soil is three times as productive as he cultivates three times as much acre—Union Advocate.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Edited and Contributed by
W. S. MORGAN,
Springfield, Missouri.

If the farmers did half as much thinking as the politicians they would have their profits 50 per cent.

When the farmer is doing much better with the products of his farm he is receiving such fabulous profits as we read about in the papers. The way for the Farmers' union to do is to go ahead and win battles. That is, convince the most skeptical that we know what we're here for.

The farmer doesn't owe its onward march to the men who sit down and wait for the first defeat. Its stick is in the battle.

The union is yet in its infancy. It is a new thing in the world before the dawn of this century. It is just getting its feet under it.

RECENT "CORNER" IN WHEAT.

Kansas Papers Comment on Reasons for High Price of Breadstuffs and Gain by Speculator.

The Wichita Eagle, one of the leading papers in southern Kansas, has this to say about the recent "corner" on wheat:

"Last year thousands of bushels of 80-cent wheat were shipped to Kansas City and put in elevators because Wichita had no room for it. Today it is being bought back at $1.40 a bushel. The difference in the excess amount being paid to-day would have built a million bushel elevator and paid for it in this season's saving alone."

The Eagle is right, but, say, has it heard from the politicians yet? Will it stick to its text when the time comes? Suppose the farmers of that country should take a notion to build the elevator, or several of them, wouldn't the Eagle flop over and say they were forming a trust? Now, Mr. Eagle, don't get tangled up in this affair prematurely, for building the elevator is just what the farmers of that vicinity are going to do. And they are going to put their wheat there and hold it until they can get a remunerative price. And they are going to do the same thing all over Kansas and the northwest. Yes, sir, they are going to put their wheat in elevators and hold it till the cows come home if that much holding is necessary in order to receive a remunerative price and keep it out of the hands of the speculator.

Why, anyone can see that it is the proper thing to do, and if the politicians and speculators will give their consent it's going to be done.

Another Kansas paper, the Ottawa Herald, commenting on the situation which caused the price of bread to soar upward, says:

"An extraordinary pinch in the grain market has brought every man back to the realization that he lives off the soil, and that showers, snows, clinch bugs and hot winds are the elements which give and take from him his daily bread."

If the writer of that paragraph understood the subject thoroughly he would see that the worst element is the speculator. That everybody lives off the soil is true, and this being the fact the farmer has it in his power to control the situation. The wheat which the Kansas farmer grows passes through several middlemen's hands before it reaches the miller. Then the flour passes through several agencies before it reaches the consumer. None of these middlemen add a single cent to the value of the product, yet they each exact a toll from it. There can be some way devised by which the millers could buy direct from the farmer, and sell his flour more directly to the consumer. In this way the farmer would receive a better price for his wheat while the consumer would pay less for his bread, and no one would be hurt except the middleman who is neither a consumer nor producer in the strict sense of the term. To do this it would be necessary for the farmers and millers to own their own elevators. In this way the grain would be kept out of the way of the speculators, gambling in futures would be practically stopped, and the grain, going on the market just as the consumers' demand required, prices would be much more stable than they ever have been. Of course, the farmers would practically fix the price of wheat, but the same is a fact with all great combinations which manufacture the things that the farmer buys. The farmer has a right to fix the price on his own labor, especially so long as that price is not exorbitant.

The Farmers' union points out this method of combination and co-operation. It is a practical and business method, but so many special privileges have been bestowed upon corporations and trusts, and so powerful have they become in thwarting every attempt to escape from their extortions. It is necessary for the farmers all over the country to unite in an effort to carry the plan into effect. In sections where banks array themselves against the farmers must, as the grange has in some states, have banks of their own and prepare to finance their own crops. All this cannot be accomplished in a day or a year, but if the farmers will do so they can make themselves masters of the situation.

The Peerless Cowpea.

At the head of all legumes, from every imaginable standpoint, is found the peerless cowpea. Imported into this country about 150 years ago, and first planted in South Carolina, they have continued to spread until their cultivation now extends into nearly every state in the union. There are in general use over 100 varieties, and wherever grown their praises are sung.

The cowpea is the great soil renovator of the south, superior to any of the clovers, and will grow and thrive on land too poor for anything else. Old worn-out hillside have been reclaimed and made productive within a few years by growing annual crops of peas on them, and turning under the vines early in the fall. On soils already productive, the better plan is to cut and cure the vines for hay. Feed this to the stock through the winter and carefully preserve the manure.—Cotton Journal.

Soot is a good and safe fertilizer for nearly everything, and scattered around the stems of plants, making the soil black, acts in the first place as a slug antidote and in the next as a plant food.

As a shot, said Maj. W. B. Martin, the Olympic rifle champion, he was discussing a millionaire—"the man is unspeakable."

"He leased a place in England for pheasant shooting. There is one very bad wood on the estate, and boys are employed to beat it. 'Stops,' you call them, and you require a lot."

"Well, last year, when he came to shoot over this particular wood, he found the 'stops' were all grown men. That would mean a big extra expense, and he took his head keeper to task about it."

"How is it," he said, "that you don't give me boys stops this year?"

"Well, you see, sir," said the keeper, touching his cap respectfully, "the fact is, sir, that ye shot the boys down rather close last year, sir."

FIVE TIMES HIGHER THAN NIAGARA.

The above is a photograph of the Kaeteur fall on the Potaro river, Essequibo, British Guiana. The perpendicular height of the fall is 741 feet, or nearly five times that of Niagara. The width varies from 350 feet in the dry season to 400 feet in the rainy season, and the depth of water passing over similarly ranges from a few feet to 20 feet. Even in very dry seasons, the river has a depth of 35 feet about a quarter of a mile above the fall. The face of the fall is of sandstone with a capping of harder conglomerate. It is suggested that the falls may be used to provide power, and it is pointed out that the chief fall alone would supply 2,125,000 horsepower.

WANTS MEN FREED

Aged Minnesota Ex-Judge Would Ease His Conscience.

After Thirty-Four Years He Seeks Release of Two Negroes Whom He Prosecuted and Had Convicted.

St. Paul, Minn.—Bowed and bent and only a memory of his former brilliant self, Judge James Egan has lifted a weight which has lain upon his conscience for 34 years by appearing before the state board of pardons and pleading for the release of two negroes, serving life sentences for murder. They were incarcerated when Judge Egan was only a young prosecuting attorney. Between the day of their judgment and now lies a lifetime, and now the prosecutor confesses that they were unjustly imprisoned and asks their freedom. Behind an act which casts a shadow on an exceptionally brilliant career lies a dramatic story.

The two negroes, R. L. Underhill and George Washington, were arrested and tried principally upon circumstantial evidence. A house upon Summit avenue had been robbed and the burglars, escaping in the darkness of a storm and overcast night, shot at a policeman who attempted to intercept them. He died without being able to make a coherent statement. Later, after two vagrant negroes had been jailed by the police, a woman living in the house where the robbery had occurred, identified them as the burglars. She admitted that she had caught but a glimpse of the men at work, and that in the dark.

As Prosecuting Attorney Egan vigorously pressed the case against the two men, and with the city deeply stirred by the crime convicted them and sent them up with life sentences.

Years passed and the prosecuting attorney became a judge, noted for his keen wit, his marked ability and a clear far-seeing judicial mind. After many years Judge Egan retired, and for nearly a decade had not been a figure in public life. Before the pardon board a bent and enfeebled old man, his mind clouded on many subjects, but entirely clear on this, begged that the governor and the members of the pardon board free his soul from the weight of the knowledge that the two men were frightened into making false confessions and upholding them with life sentences.

New Crop Not Yet Grown. "As a shot," said Maj. W. B. Martin, the Olympic rifle champion, he was discussing a millionaire—"the man is unspeakable."

"He leased a place in England for pheasant shooting. There is one very bad wood on the estate, and boys are employed to beat it. 'Stops,' you call them, and you require a lot."

"How is it," he said, "that you don't give me boys stops this year?"

"Well, you see, sir," said the keeper, touching his cap respectfully, "the fact is, sir, that ye shot the boys down rather close last year, sir."

Justly committed to a life of harsh confinement. The board was astounded by the confession and has taken the case under advisement, to thoroughly investigate it.

Baroness Goes to Poorhouse. Pittsburg.—Baroness L. F. Lagerfelt, who in her youth was universally admired as "the lovely Mollie Doty" of Steubenville, O., and whose father, Calvin B. Doty, was one of the wealthiest men of this section, has been admitted to the poorhouse at Altemheim, W. Va., at her own request.

She married Baron L. Frederick Lagerfelt, scion of a fine old noble Swedish family, vice consul of Sweden here, December 12, 1884. Five years afterward Baron Lagerfelt disappeared, and three years later his broken-hearted wife divorced him. She spent her last penny three weeks ago.

HOTEL GOES BEGGING

Star and Garter Auction Fails to Bring Out Bidder.

House Once Was Resort of Dandies and Many Royal Persons Have Been Entertained in the London Hostelry.

London.—For the second time within two years the Star and Garter hotel, Richmond, was offered for sale by auction the other day at the Mart, following the sale of the furniture of the hotel three months ago. There was no bidding and consequently no sale.

Albert Chancellor, the auctioneer, made an eloquent speech, referring to the hotel as "a far-famed hostelry, a palace of pleasure crowning the hill of delight."

"The view from this spot is," he said, "the finest in England, perhaps in the world. You can motor down from London in a few minutes."

"Yes," interposed one of the company, "and got locked up."

The hotel had cost $700,000 and could be used equally well as hotel, hydro or skating rink. As a provisional bid the auctioneer suggested the "trifling sum" of $150,000, and then $125,000, but there were no offers and the item was declared not sold.

It is just 100 years since the Star and Garter was opened, after being for five years left to decay. Perhaps some clever hotel-keeper may find a good augury in that circumstance. In 1509 Christopher Cream, who had been the duke of York's cook, became proprietor of the hotel, even then 70 years old, and he succeeded in making it a favorite resort of the period—the period of bucks and dandies, of heavy gambling and quick quarrels, of four-hour dinners and wonderful feats in the consumption of port.

The popularity of the hotel continued throughout the century. Queen Victoria and the prince consort, Louis Philippe, Napoleon III, and Emperor Maximilian were among its many royal patrons.

In the '60s and '70s the Star and Garter attained the zenith of its fame. Thackeray mentioned it more than once in his novels; Meredith made Richard Feverel talk to Hellena there, and W. E. Norris makes it the scene of some of his cleverest chapters. But the real revealer of the charms of the Star and Garter was "Ouida."

Who can forget that page in "Under Two Flags" in which the water party at Richmond, who pay seven guineas apiece for their dinner, are pelted with brandy cherries by Zu Zu, have their best cigars "thrown away half smoked by pretty pillagers" and listen to Lauri Lelas singing a barcarolle? And who does not remember that even more dramatic scene at the Star and Garter in which beauty meets Lady Guenevere?

Find Old Fort Became Barn. Greely, Col.—Fort Latham, built near here in the early '60s for defense against the Indians, was not destroyed years ago, as has been supposed, but is still in existence and is used as a barn. A few days ago the fort was found on the ranch of O. A. Gordan. It is built of sod.

WELLS IN THE DESERT

By REV. A. C. BEER, D. D.,
Pastor of the Chicago Ave. Moody Church, Chicago.

"Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee. In whose heart are the highways, who passing through the valley of Baca, make it a well; $1 50. The desert usually lacks but one thing to make it a garden in southern climes it has light, heat and often very fertile soil. Water is the one need. And frequently there is abundance of water a few feet beneath the surface, rivers that flow through their hidden channels. The thirsty traveler has only to dig deep enough and he will find the cool, refreshing stream."

Christians come to desert valleys of Baca in their experiences and there is a process by which the wells may be made and their thirsty, drooping spirits refreshed. The secret is in the words, "Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee, in whose heart are the highways." No human strength can dig such a well. It is our reliance upon the strength of God that makes a well in the desert, and if in our hearts are the highways of love, peace and joy the well will never go dry.

Sin wastes and withers every flower and shrub. After the murder of Abel the ground refused to bring forth its fruits for Cain, and up to that time he was a prosperous farmer. Sin made earth a desert for him. A prosperous merchant forgoes the name of his rich neighbor to just one check; his reputation for honesty is lost and his business goes to pieces. Sin has made a desert for him. The home which is a very garden of God can be turned into a desert by sin. A life as fair as the flowers of spring can be turned into a desert full of loathsome reptiles. Drink, lust, lying, any sort of sin, can turn any life-garden of purity and beauty into a desert of villainy and moral ugliness.

But a well can be made even in the desert caused by sin. "If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Confession digs the well of forgiveness and cleansing, which fills our souls with the refreshing waters of peace and joy. "Life that believeth on the son hath everlasting life." Faith in Christ digs in our hearts the well which springs up into eternal life. "Behold the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world." A vision of Christ as sin bearer digs in our hearts the well of consciousness that the sin question has been settled, our guilt is removed and "there is, therefore, now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus."

A friend of mine, prosperous in his profession, discovered that he had a bad case of tuberculosis, and, leaving his beautiful home, went to Arizona to seek health, while his business fell to pieces. Life, at first, seemed a desert waste; but when I saw him a few weeks ago he was drinking of the waters in the wells of resignation and patience, which God on whose strength he leaned had made in his desert experience, and in his heart were the highways of faith, hope and joy. There lived in New York city a young woman who had given herself to Christ, and was anxious to be useful. But disease paralyzed her body, so that she could not rise from her bed, though she could use her hands in writing. For more than 40 years she lived in a little brick cottage without leaving her room a single time. The city of New York built its high houses around this little cottage with its helpless invalid, and the friends who would see her must pass through the side door of a saloon. It was like going through hell to reach heaven. That room of invalidism was a holy of holies; a miniature paradise. One could easily imagine the rustle of angels' wings as he listened to the mellow, sweet voice from the pillow telling of God's abiding presence with her, and when she prayed it was like friend talking with friend, so real that when you opened your eyes and looked up you almost expected to see God with whom she spoke. The rich and learned came to that little room for comfort and strength, while the poor of the neighborhood knew who was their best friend, and every Christmas the turkey came as the gift of the Christ child through her. Men and women who believed in the power of God to heal urged her to seek healing of him, but she refused, saying that it was clearly revealed to her that her mission was to witness the fact that one can be sick and at the same time happy and useful. God was her strength and in her heart were the highways of contentment and joy. The faith and love of Hella Cooke made wells in the desert of invalidism from which her own soul drank, while she shared its waters on to thousands of others.

God never fails to hear the prayer of him whose strength he is and in whose heart are his highways. The seeming evils from beneath combine with the good from above to bless him. "Get right with God" through Jesus Christ, keep right through constant fellowship with him and every desert will have its well, while the showers of grace from above will refresh your soul.

The thirty-eighth annual session of the Alabama Press Association at Dothan last week was a genuine success in every way. The people of Dothan, and of the Wire Grass section generally, are hospitality personified, and nothing was left undone to make the visitors feel at home and thoroughly enjoy themselves.

The papers read were excellent, especially the "Address on Journalism" by C. F. J. Mooney, of the Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Another interesting paper was "The Government as a Competitor in Envelope Printing," by S. L. Deal, of the Dothan Home Journal.

Following are the officers elected for the ensuing year:

President—C. G. Fennell, Gunterville Democrat.
Vice-President—Bruce Kennedy, Montgomery Advertiser.
Secretary—Jacob Pepperman, Southern Oddfellow, Montgomery.
Treasurer—Frank Crichton, The Banner, Clanton.

Clanton, June 21, 1909
Editor Banner—We are told that in the Union of last week there appeared a program for an all-day singing at Macedonia, signed "Committee," and that from 10 o'clock until 2 o'clock they were to use the Harp and Harmony. We do not know who "Committee" is, nor did our people understand that the above books were to be used, but that "New Glory Songs" was to be used. It was announced we would have an all-day singing the 4th Sunday in June, but nothing said about singing in the Harp and Harmony, nor was there a committee appointed. Now we have no prejudice against the old books, but I think "Committee" ought to give us more time in the new books, and I believe they will. So come and bring your new books and let us try to spend the day pleasantly and profitably.

Yours for good music,
J. C. VEZEY.

An Author's Initials.
Initials are sometimes the resort of the writer who is anxious to conceal his identity, and a glance through any one of the 700 volumes that comprise the catalogue of the British museum reading room will discover some strange instances. A theological book, entitled "Inquiry into the Meaning of Demonicity in the New Testament," is attributed to T. P. A. P. O. A. B. L. C. O. S. Its real author was a certain Arthur Sykes, and the initials reveal his position as the preacher and prebendary of Alton Borealis in the church at Salisbury.—London Chronicle.

Several days were consumed in coaling and laying out the target ranges, and the 17th of March found the the Vermont, Kansas, Alabama and Maine at their respective ranges throwing their 3. 5. 6. 7. 8. 12 and 13 inch projectiles from their guns over the 1000 yard range through the canvas screens 17 feet by 20 feet with the usual accuracy so characteristic of the American gun pointers, many of whom had never before seen the flash of the great charges of smokeless powder, heard the deafening roar or felt the concussion caused by the great gun at his side as he, with one hand on the training wheel, eyes to the telescope, and the other hand on the pistol grip, kept the cross wires on the mark and pressed the firing key, as the ship steamed at a ten-knot speed over a buoyed mile course. Target practice for the fleet took up the better part of a month, and as each ship came in off the range another went out to take her place. Ships finishing target practice were given mining practice, after which entertainments, such as vaudeville and minstrels, were given on each ship by its own talent. Base-ball teams went ashore each day and race boat crews were in training all the time.

DOTHAN—THE GATEWAY TO THE GULF

It is somewhat singular that the youngest county in Alabama should be able to boast of one of the most progressive county seats in the State. And yet it is so. Houston county was created quite recently, in 1906 to be exact, and Dothan was selected as the county seat. Its growth has been phenomenal, while the prospects for the future are gratifying in the extreme. Judging its growth from the past—in 1890 the population was 347; in 1900 3,475, and at the present time it is estimated at 10,000, the white population being largely in the majority, and unquestionably in the immediate future the population will be largely increased.

Twenty years ago Dothan consisted of two or three storehouses, a few dwellings, and presumably a place of worship, but of the latter we could not learn any particulars.

To day we find a well built city of several streets with substantial storehouses of brick and stone, numbering about 300, many of them elegant in design and architecture, prominent among which should be named the First National Bank building, just approaching completion, and, on the opposite corner, the Dothan National Bank. Both are buildings of architectural worth that would do credit to any city.

Dothan is to be commended for her elegant church buildings, among the most prominent of which is the Foster Street Methodist church, a superb ecclesiastical structure which would adorn any city. The First Baptist church is another fine building of which any city might well be proud. All told there are eleven church organizations in Dothan, and the Sunday schools are well attended, showing the deep religious tendencies of the community.

In full accord with the progressive spirit of the age, educational facilities are well to the front in Dothan, the main school building, at the corner of Newton and College streets, being a magnificent structure, equal to and in many instances, surpassing those of most cities of much older growth in the State. Dothan evidently recognizes that in the education of the young lies the first principle of success in the future, and that good school buildings, and the best tuition obtainable are the elements of a successful hereafter. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it," is the motto apparently of the people of Dothan, and that every opportunity is afforded the child is shown by their splendid school buildings. And later on as the child progresses to manhood he can acquire a business education at the Dothan Business College.

Then Dothan, up-to-date, has one daily newspaper and three weekly newspapers, all of which materially add to the educational facilities of the town.

At an elevation of 355 feet, and an annual mean temperature of 65 degrees, Dothan, with its electric lights, water works and sanitary sewerage, is a healthy place in which to dwell. The convenience of its inhabitants is added to by free delivery mail service.

The county court house, erected at an expenditure of $60,000.00, is a fine building, while a Federal building to cost $100,000.00 is now under construction. Law and order require no further guarantee in Houston county.

In the neighborhood of Dothan and the whole of Houston county, farming is carried on successfully; the soil is sandy in some places, and requires commercial fertilizer, but on the whole produces good crops of cotton, corn, potatoes, sugar cane, fruits and melons, the latter of which it is said in Chicago are the best that go to that market.

A paid fire department looks after the protection of the town from fire, and a good public library attests the literary proclivities of the people. Saw mills, planing mills, two large compresses, two ice factories, three fertilizer factories, all show the commercial importance of the town, while an efficient telephone service and first-class hotels are all important factors in its prosperity.

It is only necessary to look into the near future for the further advancement of Dothan. With the opening of the Panama canal, new avenues of trade must of necessity come into view, and it appears that Dothan must necessarily become the gateway to the gulf and that streams of merchandise will pass through her gates. The future is great with possibilities for Dothan, and there is no doubt but that her citizens are fully alive to their advantages.

Dothan is prettily situated, well built, healthy, with all modern conveniences, and is an attractive place for business or pleasure.

Mountain Creek

The two Mr. Madden's, the doctor and the druggist, are improving weekly; they will soon be able to open up the drug store again, which has been closed for two weeks on account of their illness. They both are more than anxious to get able for business once more.

The health of this community is improving nicely. But oh my! the farmers are in the grass from one side of the field to the other. But by the way, I for one, am still in hopes; trust in the Lord and everything will come right some day. He has promised as bread if we will do our part; but it looks more like grass than bread this time. Enough for the weather this time.

Now I must say something in regard to the Southern Union Singing Convention, which was held here the second Sunday in June. It was a grand success. Owing to sickness and other things, can't say what, dinner was a little scarce. The program for the day is as follows:

This was a call session of the Southern Union Convention, which convened with Mountain Creek Baptist church, June 13, 1909. Bro. T. L. Robinson, president; R. T. Grant, vice-president. Convention opened by Bro. R. T. Grant. In the absence of Bro. T. L. Robinson, song and prayer by Bro. S. M. Yates, Jr. In the absence of standing committee, moved and seconded that a committee be appointed by Bro. R. T. Grant, for the day, as follows: E. L. Jones, chairman, Joel McDennis and S. B. Sometimes you may be told that there are other things just as good as DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. That isn't so. Nothing made is as good as DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills for any ailments of the kidney or bladder, which always result in weak back, backache, rheumatic pains, rheumatism and urinary disorders. A trial of DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills is sufficient to convince you how good they are. Send your name to E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, for a free trial box. They are sold here by Upchurch Drug Co.

Got the Number.
Police Captain—You say that an automobile containing several persons sped along the street and struck down an old man? New Officer—Yes, sir, Police Captain—And that after chasing this auto for several blocks you finally succeeded in getting the number? New Officer—Yes, sir, Police Captain—Good! What was the number? New Officer—There was five people in the car, and I forgot the number.

Positive Reasons.
The Minister—Mackintosh, why don't you come to church now? Mackintosh—For three reasons, sir. Firstly, I don't like yer theology; secondly, I don't like yer singing; and, thirdly, it was in your kirk I first met my wife.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

One of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

A century and one-third is but a span in the history of the world, but might have been the changes made in the history of nations since the birth of the young giant of the west one hundred and thirty-three years ago. Then, the struggling infant, lusty and strong in its infancy, proud of its youthful achievements, started out on its destined mission of unparalleled success—the hope of the oppressed, the joy of the wretched, and the glory of its glorious citizenship. And nobly has that mission been fulfilled; the present being but a prelude to the glorious future.

To-day, among the mighty nations of the earth, the United States stands pre-eminent, her council is sought, her advice is heeded, her power is feared. And, withal, a genuine feeling of respect and admiration is shown by all other nations, who admire the disinterested position of the States in all international questions.

The grand position in the world of the United States makes it possible for all to join in a glorious celebration of the Fourth, which this year falls on Sunday, and may be observed either on Saturday or Monday.

After the excessive rains we have been having, which had almost brought our farmers to despair, the few hot, sunny days were blessed with delight, and work has been vigorously pushed. Cotton bolls are being reported on all sides. John Hayes, of Pleasant Grove, had one last Friday, June 25, each Culp, two miles west of Clanton, brought in one Saturday, and O. C. Durbin, of Fairview, another on Monday, the latter being taken from a six acre field planted April 14.

One dollar and six cents per pound for cotton is a right good price for the lucky man who got it. The bale, though, and it is not unexpected that price will hold. At Houston, Texas, on Monday, the first bale of this season's cotton was sold at auction on the cotton exchange for the neat little sum of $1.36, the bale weighing 368 pounds. Two minutes afterwards came the second bale, and that brought only the regular figure.

A young man had been calling on a great regularity upon a charming lady for a year, and he had discovered that a box of candy helped the evening along not a little. The last time he called he was admitted by the small brother, who observed a box of familiar size and appearance under the young man's arm.

"More candy for sis?" he repeated. "Yes! Wish I was a girl." "Does your sister like to have me come every time I come?" the young man queried, seeking inside information.

"You bet she does!" Johnny responded. "And I heard the fellow who goes to marry tell her he did it—and it just saves him that heart-breaking what they are going to do with housekeeping!"

Math, Hope and Charity are the graces—but the dis-graces are numerous to mention.

Fourth of July Hop. A dance will be given at the Hotel, Verbeena, on Saturday night, July 3, in celebration of the Fourth. A special invitation is extended to Clanton and Mound Creek people to participate. Very low hotel rates are offered for those staying overnight.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Gurley, Ala., June 26, 1909

Editor Banner—Through your kindness I shall be glad to say a few words to the people of the county. Perhaps there are some who would like to hear a word from this part of the State. We people have been having lots of rain here as well as in other parts of the State. This is a fine farming country and especially for corn. Much of the corn that has been planted has not been worked out on account of the excessive rains. And a great deal of the finest corn land in the bottoms has never been planted and the farmers are wondering what is going to become of them just like they are in many other places. But I believe there will yet be time to make some kind of a crop. Some of the farmers say that they are going to plant corn yet if the weather clears up any time soon. I am always glad to get the Banner. Sometimes I think we Chilton county people do not appreciate the Banner as we ought. It is one of the best of its kind in the State and our editor has always done all he could for the good of the county and he deserves our hearty co-operation in his work. I have never done much for him, but I have been a subscriber to the paper as long as I have been away from home and I expect to keep my subscription paid up as long as I am able to keep any paper. Will say for the benefit of a few of my friends who might like to know that I am here as pastor of the Baptist church since I finished at Howard May 26. Thanking the Banner for its kindness, I am Yours truly, J. TOY WILLIAMS.

THE CHILTON COUNTY SINGING CONVENTION NO. 1

to be held at Samaria church, about two miles southwest of Clanton, Saturday and Sunday, July 10-11, 1909.

PROGRAM.

10 a.m. Devotional exercise, N. J. Calloway.
10:15. Welcome address, N. J. Calloway.
10:30. Response, Zack Lowery.
10:45. Would it be for the advancement of the cause of sacred song to have the fundamental principles of music taught in our public schools? James Franklin and R. A. Rasco.

11:30. Will there be singing among the righteous in the day of judgment? S. M. Adams.
12. Dinner.

1:30. The best way to work up an interest in a church choir, R. D. Durham and M. C. Crumpton.
2. Is it absolutely necessary to use the Italian syllable names of the tones in teaching vocal music? H. M. Eagle.
2:30. p.m. Roll call and reports of teachers and leaders, concerning work done since last meeting. General business. Adjournment.

Sunday will be devoted altogether to singing. Prof. A. J. Showalter will be present both days, and will help in the discussions and singings. The members are all requested to be present, and the committee cordially invites all singers to come and bring their dinner and song books. The Showalter publications will be used exclusively.

There never was a surer way to get behind the bars, than to stand too much in front of them.

Thorsby.

John L. Winslow is shipping about fifty crates of fine peaches to foreign markets every day. His orchards contain some 14,000 trees, 4,000 of which have been picked, some a second time, and a third picking will be had in a few days.

The 4,000 trees are all of the Carmen variety, among the earliest of Southern peaches to ripen. The other varieties will ripen later. Mr. Winslow has eighty-five acres in peaches, and the yield is better than that of last year.

The crop will be shorter this year than it should be, from the fact that the blossoms on several hundred Elbertas and Slappys were killed in spraying for the San Jose scale. The scale was killed alright, and the trees have improved wonderfully, and the prospects for the future are bright.

Thorsby had an excellent crop of strawberries this year, large in size and of fine flavor. Now, with a good crop of peaches, while it is not as large as was hoped for, yet the shortage is not so great as other peach growing communities complain of, the outlook is flattering.

Thorsby has demonstrated beyond all question its suitability for fruit raising when gone into in the correct manner, and with a few more good harvests it will become the envied spot of Chilton county.

HAS HAD ENOUGH OF WATER

Pony's Experience Taught Prospector in Yellowstone Park to Avoid the Flood.

"I had a little experience with mules and water myself," spoke up another whose attire did not speak of the traveling man, but rather of the native Montanan.

"I used to be in the Yellowstone National park before there was ever a road there or a forest guard in the park. In fact, I helped pick out the routes by which the lumbermen of the present day see the wonders of nature and occasionally the wonderful scenery of the highways. Naturally the old trails led along a different course from the present roads, for we used to take the shortest way across and where we could not ride we would walk and lead our ponies."

One day I was riding between the upper and the lower geyser basin and my pony and I came to a creek which looked as if it would be pleasant to taste. I stopped the nag to taste the water but the pony beat me to it. He had his muzzle buried up to his eyes in an instant and in less than half that time he had it back out with a roar of pain that could be heard a mile away. The water was boiling hot, but the heat of the ground near the earth kept the steam from rising. The pony jerked away from me and went bucking and bawling through the trees, carrying my blankets and grub with him.

It was two days before I found him and caught him again. Then all of the hair was off his muzzle from his eyes to his nostrils. I grieved his head with bacon fat and made the nag as comfortable as possible. It was necessary that I should ride him, for I had an appointment on the banks of Yellowstone lake with the rest of the party, and I turned his nose gently in that direction.

Next day we came to a stream which came directly out of a snow bank and the pony, depending upon that sign of coolness, put his head down and took another drink. The result was that his mouth and nostrils shrunk up so that he could no longer whinny or breathe. Within two minutes he was dead. Investigation showed that he had drunk from an alum spring, what we believed to be snow was alum crystals. I stripped the saddle from the horse and packed it ten miles to camp.

"From that day to this I have never tasted water on my occasional trips to the Yellowstone park, and I do not see how I can be blamed for my action either." Anaconda Standard.

The Impulse of Courage.
In many cases courage is merely instinctive. Many a man has distinguished himself in the performance of some act of heroism the thought of which caused him completely to collapse when the danger was over. The same instinct which leads a man to dodge when about to be struck will lead him without waiting to take counsel of his judgment, to risk his life in the performance of some heroic act. The impulse of courage is just as natural as the impulse of fear, and, however much cultivation may lead individuals to dislike physical danger, so long as there are Carnegie medals to distribute there will probably be no lack of persons worthy to receive them.

Gaelic Disappearing.
In submitting a report to the Gaelic synod (Church of Scotland) on the liquidation of a bequest which provides scholarships for Gaelic-speaking divinity students, Rev. P. Mackintosh lamented that, whereas 35 years ago candidates were drawn from the whole of the Highlands, they were now restricted to the western seaboard and the Hebrides. The church must keep in mind, he said, that large numbers of the peasantry still used Gaelic habitually, but the feeling was growing that to make use of it publicly was an indication of lowered social and scholastic position.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Edited and Controlled by
W. J. MORGAN,
Springfield, Missouri.

The decisions of those federal judges make good propaganda for organized labor.

In order now for some one to speak for his blind feet and tell which is the most of the regulating, the government or the railroads.

Practical matters are made out of the same kind of mud as other people, but how some of them do need educating.

When the farmers get to figuring on passenger rates he will take into consideration the price which has been grafted in on the proposition.

It is estimated that the want of good roads in this country cost the farmer $100,000,000 in excess of the cost of the products of their farms to market. The whole country is interested in the good roads question.

When the farmers get their warehouses and elevators built there will be time for the poor, tired middleman and speculator to take a vacation.

When the farmers succeed in being able to hold their crops and speculate on the products of their own labor, he will be the "worstest man ever."

A million-dollar business institution through which to dispose of their farm products and buy their supplies is what the farmers of Mississippi have organized. This includes forty-three warehouses already built. This is cooperation right, and we are going to have a lot more of it.

If you have been a union man once and have "slid back," now is a good time for you to "slide up" again. There's going to be the biggest fight you ever saw and you don't want to be either a skulker or a camp outler. Come to the front and help make the fight.

The farmers of the northwest already have a great many elevators and warehouses and have good organizations in localities. Now, the time is to do is to mobilize the farmers all into one organization and move forward all along the line.

KEEPING TAB ON LEGISLATORS

Farmers' Union Watching Lawmakers and Electing Only Those Who Do Their Duty.

There is every indication that the farmers are keeping closer watch on the men whom they elect to the state and national legislatures than they have in the habit of doing. In many states the farmers' union has a legislative committee present during the whole session. There is also a national legislative committee which has been present at the national capital a portion of the time. It is the business of these committees to look after the interests of the farmers and report how the members vote on matters in which the farmer is interested. This plan is very effective and will become more so after the next primaries and elections are held. What the union going into politics? Well, it is in a way. You see it's just going to call having good laws made and bad ones repealed. It's going to do it in a business way. Heretofore the farmers have come about this matter by the petition route and they have been lambasted to a finish. The parties have said, but they have too many burgles and bellwethers in them to get business for the farmers to properly as the occasion demands. Now, we're not thinking of organizing a new party, we are going to get the rotten rotten timber that are in the old ones, and put some new timber in. We're going to do a good deal of work and when Prof. Politician comes along and begins to sing a song of violence, a bottle full of rye, four cents, blackbirds baked in a pie, and so on the pie was opened—

What the professor there we're going to in. The professor that the pie has been opened, for the farmers, and we've decided to send a gang of men there to see if there is any more of the aforesaid pie, and if there is a slice of it dished out to the fellows who pull the bell-rope of the pie's tail. Selah!

What Horses Need.

Horses should have exercise daily. Riding tied up with the halter day after day often causes trouble.

The horse needs water every day in the winter and more than once each day in summer as well as summer. Horses need proper food in order to keep in good condition, and the ideal food for horses is good oats.

See that the cracks in the barn are closed, and don't let the horse shake to get warm. Be more humane.

Get out a frosty bit in the horse's mouth on a zero morning. The skin on the tongue is there for a purpose.

Watch the little things in horse-keeping and the horse will be lacking in a greater one. Keep your eyes

PRESIDENT NEILL A POPULIST

Texas Reporter Makes Wonderful Discovery That Head of Union Belonged to Political Party.

A reporter for one of the Fort Worth (Tex.) newspapers has made a discovery. He gives out the astonishing information that T. J. Neill, president of the Texas Farmers' union, was once a Populist. This announcement did not shake the Lone Star state from its roorings, nor did it give the reporter who made the discovery a world-wide prominence. His name is yet known to the cashier who issues checks weekly for payment of the employees of the paper. But the reporter should not be discouraged. He should redouble his efforts to peep behind the curtains. Perhaps some day he will be able to find some other union official who has been a Republican or a Democrat. Then the cap of his joy would be full, and the paper for which he is working might increase his salary ten or fifteen cents a week. Or, he might dig up the remains of the grand and noble founder of the Farmers' union and hold a post mortem examination. He might discover the fact that he, too, was once a Populist. Then if he would diligently pursue his investigations further it might eventually dawn upon his mind that the declaration of independence, the constitution of the United States and the spirit of all our free institutions confers upon man the right to belong to any political party he pleases, and ought not to have his honesty and sincerity questioned because he exercised this right of a free man.

It is not stated what the politics of the reporter is, but whatever he is, he was no doubt born that way, and will stay that way all the remainder of his life. When one is born wrong, it requires a lot of good hard sense to get one's self right.

The Farmers' union is made up of men from all political parties. Their interests, however, are the same. They recognize the difficulties of accomplishing anything for themselves so long as they remain isolated and unorganized. They are not in dirty partisan politics. They have quit playing the game of "Simon says thumbs up; Simon says thumbs down." They are asking only justice, and that, protection which governments are supposed to guarantee to them, but seem to be monopolized by a privileged few in this country. They are asking the aid of all good people in their efforts to secure that protection and justice. If the aforesaid reporter does not class himself with the good people it is not the fault of President Neill, or of the Farmers' union.

The writer of this does not know to which of the political parties Mr. Neill is allied, but he does know that he is a loyal union man and an able, honest and aggressive leader. It is to the credit of Mr. Neill that he has been fought fiercely by the foes of the Farmers' union in Texas. He can be known by the enemies he has made as well as by the friends.

The animus of such a charge against President Neill is clearly apparent. It is one of the old tricks of the enemies of all farmers' organizations. It is made in order to create dissension and distrust. But the union will not be led into any such trap. It cares as little about what party its officers belong to as it does the men whom farmers hire to plow their land. It requires only that men chosen to official positions shall be honest and efficient and loyal to the organization. The union is not intended to build up or destroy any political party or to set politicians up in business.

What the Farmers' Union Is.

The Farmers' union is not a federated organization, but a co-operative one. What is the difference, you ask. Well, here is what Webster says about the two words:

Federation—An organization composed of states or districts which have only subordinate or limited sovereignty.
Co-operative—To concur in action, effort and effect; operating together to an end.

Now which do you think the Farmers' union is? The one means that all the authority, or pretty much all, is in the head and not in the people. The other that the people have the authority and co-operate for their mutual good, that is, in action by direct consent, such as the referendum. Should the union once lose its right to control and the head get in absolute control, then it would be no longer a people's movement, but that of an oligarchy.

The Co-operative is speaking of a national organization. The nearer the organization is kept to the people and in their hands the less danger of trouble from designing men who hope to benefit themselves by trying to turn the organization from its true course into strange paths that are beset with pitfalls and traps to catch the unwary, by interested "interests" that fear the effect of honest efforts of the union, knowing that success for the farmer means death to the "interests" schemes of pillage and despoliation. Are there any such Judases in the Farmers' union?—National Co-operator.

Raising Calves.

Not every heifer calf, even from good or registered stock, will be worth raising for the dairy herd. Some unfortunate mating, years back, may obtrude itself to the disgust and loss of the breeder. The experienced breeder can tell before the calf is two weeks old whether it is adapted to dairy purposes or not.

OLDEST SON OF SECRETARY KNOX.

HOLDS ODD RECORD

Long Life Is Habit of Members of This Family.

Brother in Missouri Tribe Is 108 Years Old—His Sister Has Reached 105, While a Niece Is Only 102.

Chillicothe, Mo.—There is living in Chillicothe a member of a family which for longevity probably holds the world's record.

Zacharia Hamilton, a resident of Highview, is 73 years old, but the spry manner in which he shovels coal at the light plant and performs other labors and his general appearance would never betray his age. He is the juvenile member of the family.

A brother, William Hamilton, who lives in Franklin county, Kansas, is 99. He owns a large farm near Ottawa and is active in assisting with the work. He is in good health and very active. But this is not odd, either, for this remarkable family. A sister, Mrs. Sarah Byrnes, a resident of Rushville, Ill., is 102 years old. Her health is perfect and she is very active for one of her age.

The oldest member of the Hamilton family but one, is Mrs. Mary Ann Bolcourt, who is a resident of Mobile, Kan. She is 105 years of age. She is an aunt of the Chillicothe man. An uncle, James Hamilton, who resides in southwest Missouri, is 108 years of age.

Mr. Hamilton says the long lives of his family are due to their taking proper care of themselves. Not one of the family is addicted to drink, but the men chew and smoke moderately.

"We have had to work hard all our lives," said Mr. Hamilton, "but we have taken good care of ourselves. We make a practice of retiring early and rising early. The morning air is healthful. When I go home after work I hard all day. I always rest a short time before eating my evening meal. When one is tired a meal does not build up the system and strengthen one. I made it a practice when I was young of rising before daybreak and getting the fresh air of the morning."

"My aunt, Mrs. Ann Bolcourt, has preserved herself well during her lifetime. While she has had to work hard, she never neglected to care for herself. At her present age she does a great deal of work around the house. Her eyesight is good and she can read newspapers and letters. She believes she will live to be 120. She lives on a farm and assists in attending to the chickens and sometimes milks the cows."

"Mrs. Sarah Byrnes, my sister, who now resides on a farm near Rushville, Ill., like myself, was thrown out of a home when an infant. She had to work hard during her early life and until she was married. She is at present enjoying the best of health and attends to the household duties."

PHONE POPULAR WITH INDIAN

Red Men Fond of Long Distance Talks with Any One Who Happens to Be at the Other End.

Dallas, Tex.—The Indians are great on using the telephone. They have little or no use for the local boards, their calls being over the long distance. They do not put in a call for the individual. They do not ask for White Eagle at Canton or Flying Cloud at Darlington. The call is for "Any Cheyenne." The same is true as to the Arapaho. Any member of the tribe serves.

An Indian puts in a call for any member of his tribe at Canton, Darlington, Colony, Lawton or any point. It is "up to" the manager to go out in the street and pick up an Indian. Any

THE COST OF LIVING

Lower in 1908 Than in 1907, Say Government Experts.

Bureau of Labor Bulletin Shows Prices Generally Advanced 36.9 Per Cent. in Last Ten Years—August Cheapest Time.

Washington—In its annual report on whole-sale prices, made public recently, the bureau of labor, taking as a basis 258 representative staple articles, shows that these prices in 1908 receded as a whole from the high level of 1907, the year of highest prices during the period of 19 years, and were only slightly in excess of the prices for 1906.

The average price for 1908, it is stated, was 52 per cent. below that for 1907. As compared with 1897, the year of lowest prices during the 19-year period, the advance in 1908 was 36.9 per cent. As compared with the average for the ten years, 1900 to 1899, the advance was 22.5 per cent.

The decline from the prices shown by the October, 1907, data continued without interruption until August, 1908, with the exception of a slight advance in July.

Prices were at their lowest point of the year 1908 during the month of August, when they were 1.1 per cent. below the average for that year, and 7.3 per cent. below the average for October, 1907, the highest point in the 19 years covered. The prices in December, 1908, show an advance of 1.8 over the prices in August.

Of the 258 articles for which whole-sale prices were obtained, 162 show a decrease in the average price for 1908 as compared with 1907, 33 showed no change and 63 showed an increase.

Of the nine groups in which the commodities were classified, seven showed a decrease in price in 1908, as compared to 1907. In farm products, taken as a whole, there was a decrease in price of 2.9 in 1908 below the average for 1907, this decrease being the least of any of the seven groups showing a decrease; food increased 2.4 per cent. in price; cloths and clothing decreased 7.7 per cent.

Fuel and lighting decreased 3.1 per cent.; metals and implements decreased 12.6 per cent.—which was the heaviest decline of any of the groups; lumber and building materials decreased 9.4 per cent.; drugs and chemicals increased seven per cent.; house furnishings goods decreased 3.8 per cent. and the miscellaneous group decreased 5.7 per cent.

The average whole-sale price of raw commodities for 1908 was 5.9 per cent. below that for 1907, and the average whole-sale price of manufactured commodities for 1908 was 5.9 per cent. below that for 1907.

Of the 258 articles included in the report the prices of 107 were at the highest point during the year in January, while only 29 articles attained their highest in December.

NATURAL OIL NEAR SURFACE

Burns Like Kerosene, and Doesn't Have to Be Refined to Be Saleable.

Ithaca, N. Y.—That there is plenty of natural oil not far from the surface of the earth in the town of Groton, Thompsons county, is being demonstrated frequently. A few days ago a number of workmen engaged in erecting a cement wall in a creek on land belonging to A. T. Hoyt discovered a quantity of oil just below the surface of the bed of the creek. As they were removing the concrete from it they noticed that a piece of wood that had been sunk into the ground was saturated with oil. One of the men thereupon drove the handle of his pick several feet below the surface and the natural oil flowed freely.

This spot is an eighth of a mile from the well of Miss Marion Good year of New York city, which has been filled with oil for several months past. A peculiar feature of the Groton oil is that it burns about as bright as kerosene and does not need to be refined in order to be saleable. A company that was formed to develop the Goodyear property expects to sink a shaft in the near future.

The Shifting Fashions.

"In ancient times they used to slit noses and crop ears." And yet some people think this year's styles are extreme.—Kansas City Journal.

NEW SENATE OFFICE BUILDING.

United States senators now have magnificent offices in this new building which is connected with the capitol by an underground tunnel. Electric automobiles run between the two buildings.

THE OPEN SEPULCHER

By REV. A. C. DEEM, D. D.,
Pastor of the Chicago Ave. Church, Chicago.

The open sepulcher proclaims the foundation fact of Christianity that Christ rose from the dead. Paul said: "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." His real body was placed in a real sepulcher and his real body came out of this real sepulcher. He was pronounced dead by the disinterested officials who were sent to examine him. His friends believed him dead, for some of them came with spices to embalm him. The fact of his resurrection is as well attested as the fact of his death and burial. Peter and John find the tomb empty without any evidence of robbery, for every thing is in order. He showed himself to Mary, who at first takes him for the gardener. Then he appears to the two disciples on the way to Emmaus. Again, while the doors are shut he appears in the midst of his disciples. Then more than 500 brethren see him at once. To one who accepts the Biblical record as authoritative the fact of the resurrection is proved beyond the shadow of a doubt.

The open sepulcher, in the second place, confirms the fact of the deity of Christ. If he did not rise from the dead, he was, of course, a mere man and his death was that of a victim and not a king, and the world is benighted no more by his death than by the death of any other martyr to a noble mission. But the open sepulcher proves that all he claimed of deity for himself and all his friends claimed for him was true. He was declared to be the Son of God, with power, by the resurrection from the dead.

The open sepulcher, in the third place, is the fulfillment of prophecy. He rose from the dead according to the Scriptures. We read in Psalms 2:7: "The Lord hath said unto me: thou art my Son; this day have I brought thee forth." And we learn in Acts 13:33 that these words predict the resurrection of Jesus. The words of Hosea: "In the third day he will rise up and we shall rise in his sight," point forward to the resurrection of Jesus and of all his people with him. In Psalm 16:9, 10 Peter tells us in his Pentecostal sermon David refers to Christ: "My flesh also shall rest in hope, for thou wilt not leave my soul in hades, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption." Thus, as Peter tells us, the spirit of Christ did signify in prophecy "when it testified before-hand the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow."

The open sepulcher, in the fourth place, is itself a prophecy. It predicts the resurrection of all the dead. "Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept."—1 Cor. 15:20. "Every man in his own order, Christ the first fruits; afterward, they that are Christ's at his coming."—1 Cor. 15:23. The body of Christ came out of the sepulcher and our bodies will come out of their graves. The hour is coming in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of judgment.—John 5:28. The Christian will come forth in his glorified body "Sown a natural body; raised a spiritual body." "Sown in corruption; it will be raised in incorruption." "Sown in weakness; it will be raised in power." "Sown in dishonor; it will be raised in glory." The open sepulcher of Jesus is a prophecy that the bodies of my loved ones whom I buried beneath the sod will come forth, leaving behind them all carnality, corruption, weakness and dishonor. There has been a restitution of all things they have lost through sin.

The open sepulcher, in the fifth place, comforts us in apparent failures. Every appearance indicated that Jesus was a failure and that his life work would count for nothing. He had been crucified as a malefactor. His disciples were discouraged and scattered. His body, pronounced dead, was guarded by the Roman seal and a band of Roman soldiers. The sun of Christianity, to be sure, had gone down in gloom, and there is no star in the sky of its night. But suddenly the angel appears, suddenly the earthquake breaks the Roman seal, suddenly the stone is rolled away and suddenly Jesus walks out of the sepulcher. It is a sunrise at midnight. Jesus is in the midst of his disciples filling them with faith and hope.

The open sepulcher, in the sixth place, gives us a story to tell. The angel said: "Go quickly and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead." The disciples all believed that Christ had died, but the fact of the resurrection was needed to give them assurance that his death was more than ordinary, that he died as a king and not as a victim of circumstances. The resurrection confirms the merit of the death of Jesus. If he rose from the dead his blood atones for all my sins, but if he rose not we are yet in sin.

Rheumatism

Do you want to get rid of it? If so, take Dr. Miles Nervine modified as directed in pamphlet around bottle. In addition to the direct curative properties
it has a soothing effect upon the nervous system by which the rheumatic pains are controlled, and rest and sleep assured.
It has made many cures
of this painful disease,
some of them after years of suffering. If it will cure others why not you.
If your case is complicated, write us for advice, it costs you nothing and might save you prolonged suffering.

I have been crippled that I could not move. After having my share of suffering, I could manage to get around the pain. The Nervine has done for me what no other medicine could. I have been in pain all through my life. My doctor told me I had rheumatism. I read about Dr. Miles' Nervine and bought a bottle and I found it better from the start.
In the past six months I have been able to move and am able to do my work.

Kodol

For Dyspepsia and Indigestion

If you Suffer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gas on
the Stomach, Belching, Sour Stomach, Heart-burn,
etc., a little Kodol will Relieve you almost Instantly

Kodol supplies the same digestive
juices that are found in a healthy stomach. Being a liquid, it starts digestion at once.

Kodol not only digests your food,
but helps you enjoy every mouthful
you eat.

You need a sufficient amount of good, wholesome food to maintain
strength and health.

But, this food must be digested
thoroughly, otherwise the pains of indigestion and dyspepsia are the result.

When your stomach cannot do its work properly, take something to help your stomach. Kodol is the only thing that will give the stomach complete rest.

Why? Because Kodol does the same work as a strong stomach, and
does it in a natural way.

So, don't neglect your stomach.
Don't become a chronic dyspeptic.
Keep your stomach healthy and
strong by taking a little Kodol.
You don't have to take Kodol all
the time. You only take it when you need it.

Kodol is perfectly harmless.

Our Guarantee

A black and white sketch of a man in 18th-century attire, with his right arm raised. The sketch is signed "by MARIE EVERTON WOODRUFF" in the upper right corner. The man is wearing a long coat and a cravat. The background is simple, suggesting an interior setting.

The delegates were not anxious to consider the rebellious resolution, but Mr. Lee was so earnest and had won a few of the giants to his cause, and though the delegates had expressed the hope of considering the step on June 8 at 10 in the morning, nothing was done until June 10, when, after a few warm speeches for and against, the resolution was held to come before the congress July 1. Lee anticipated that a committee might be appointed and he had prepared an outline of the grievances setting forth the attitude of the colonies—in fact, he knew he would be named the chairman of the committee on declaration, and was busy preparing himself for the colossal task of drafting the Magna Charta of the disturbed colonies, when by "stage mail" he was informed of the sudden and severe illness of his wife. His devotion to her was proverbial, and the great Lee now "stood between love which were worn did not protect the legs, which were covered by thin silken stockings, and the stings of the insects caused a most uncomfortable condition, impelling many to pray for a speedy adjournment. But Hancock, Adams, and other enthusiastic supporters, added warmth to the occasion by their fiery eloquence, and prevented an adjournment until the resolutions of Lee were respected and a proclamation of independence declared. In this furnace of heat from both sun and tongue were added the irritating perplexities of troublesome insects, whose activities provoked the members to hastily accept any penalty rather than longer suffer physical and mental annoyance of hungry flies. In fact, the occasion presents the appearance of the old-time fable of "dumb animals and flying insects are man's best friends," for they continually produced the "sires of old" into doing a duty to man-

Mr. Carroll demonstrated his fearless, patriotic impulse prior to signing when he in 1781 wrote to a member of parliament these stirring and rebellious words:

"Your thousands of soldiers may come, but they will be masters of the spot only on which they encamp. They will find naught but enemies before and around them. If we are beaten on the plains we will retreat to the mountains and defy them. Our resources will increase with our difficulties. Necessity will force us to

Where Jefferson's first or original draft of the declaration may be he is not known. He practically admits this in a letter written later in life. He copied the original, with its corrections by the committee, a number of times and mailed some to several people, one copy going to Richard Henry Lee, others to his home and friends, but the one that was prepared on parchment and signed on August 2, 1776, is safely stowed away in a large steel safe in the vaults of the department of state at Washington.

"I know Postum has been self and the other members of family, but not in so marked degree as in the case of my mother she was a victim of long standing. Read, 'The Road to Wellville.' phage. 'There's a Reason.'

The New York police department granted a month's leave of absence with pay to Acting Captain Kuhne, head of the Brooklyn detective bureau, who must shortly begin serving thirty days' imprisonment for contempt of court in connection with the photographing of an accused banker some months ago.

The fifth anniversary of the Slocum disaster, in which 1,200 New Yorkers lost their lives, was observed in New York. Flags on the city hall and other public buildings were at half-mast and memorial services were held in St. Mark's which lost several hundred members in the burning of the old excursion steamer near Hell Gate.

In a decision handed down Monday, the supreme court of Mississippi declared that no beverage can be sold in the state that contains any percentage whatever of alcohol. This decision will stop the sale of "near beer" in Mississippi.

Secretary Ballinger, designated 93,628 acres in Millard county, 39,617 acres in Teoole county, and 357,749 acres in Box Elder county, Utah, as object to entry, except where otherwise reserved or appropriated under the provisions of section 6 of the act of January 19, 1909.

Rev. Aaron S. Watkins, of Ada, O., in 1908 candidate for vice president on the Prohibition ticket, has accepted the office of president of Asbury college at Whitmore, Ky.

Lieutenant Shackleton, leader of the South Pole expedition, which attracted much attention recently, arrived in London, with several members of his party, and was welcomed by the president and members of the Royal Geographical society.

District Attorney Langdon of San Francisco asked Judge Wood to dismiss the case against John Claudine, charging him with dynamiting the home of former Supervisor James L. Gallagher. An order was signed by the judge. Lack of evidence was the reason assigned for the action.

The Philippian Jailer

Sunday School Lesson for July 11, 1909
Specially Arranged for This Paper

LESSON TEXT.—Acts 16:16-40. Memory verse, 25-31.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house."—Acts 16:31.

TIME.—About A. D. 50. The same period as our last lesson.

PLACE.—At Philippi in Macedonia.

Suggestion and Practical Thought.

I. The Story of the Frenzied Girl. Her Mental and Physical Trouble. Paul's Faith. Her Deliverance.—Vs. 16-18. The missionaries frequently went from Lydia's house within the city to the place of prayer beyond the walls by the river side. On several occasions they met in the streets. "A damsel possessed with a spirit of divination." This girl gave forth strange utterances and mysterious cries in her frenzied condition, which her masters interpreted as they wished.

"Cried, saying, These men are the servants of the most high God," etc. She seems to have been impelled to tell the truth, as some demoniacs were in Christ's time.

"But Paul, being grieved said to the spirit as distinct from its victim. 'To come out of her,' and go away from her, not to return. 'And he came out the same hour.'"

II. The Missionaries Thrust Into Prison; Their Faith; Their Deliverance.—Vs. 19-26. The masters, having lost their source of gain, like the makers of silver shrines in Ephesus, stirred up a mob in the city and dragged Paul and Silas before the magistrates. The charge presented was that of throwing the city into confusion and anarchy by trying to convert the Romans to a new religion.

The clothes of Paul and Silas were torn off and the men were "tied up to the stocks," and beaten with the flogging sticks upon the naked body (see 2 Cor. 11:25-1 Thes. 2:2), till their backs were torn by the merciless blows. Why did they not escape by means of their Roman citizenship, as they did the next morning? Probably the clamor of the mob gave them no opportunity to be heard, and if they protested, their protests would be disregarded by the excited people. Then, all mangled and bleeding as they were, they were thrust into the inner prison and their feet placed in the stocks.

Songs in the Night.—25. "Paul and Silas prayed and sang praises." "And the prisoners heard them." This was the beginning of the furtherance of the gospel through the suffering of the missionaries.

26. "And suddenly there was a great earthquake." This was the Lord's answer to prayer, whether it came by miracle, or was timed by special providence. "All the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed." Either by the action of the earthquake, or by the same supernatural power which produced the earthquake.

III. The Conversion of the Jailer, Deliverance from Sin and Death. Through the Faith of the Jailer.—Vs. 27-34. "The keeper" would have killed himself, because by Roman law he was responsible for the safety of the prisoners, and he would avoid by suicide the disgrace of an execution.

28. "Paul cried, 'We are all here.' Thus saving the jailer's life, for there was no longer a reason for his committing suicide.

29. "Called for a light." The Greek is plural, lights, torches or lamps. "Fell down before Paul and Silas."

30. "Brought them out" of the inner prison, into the open court, or into his own house. What was the jailer's motive in asking, "What must I do to be saved?" The motive was a consciousness of sin, of danger, of need, and of the goodness produced in Paul and Silas by their religion.

31. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Saved from sin, from its punishment, and to holiness and heaven. "And thy house." By leading his family to the same faith.

IV. The Missionaries Released and Sent on Their Way.—Vs. 35-40. The next morning the magistrate, learning what had taken place, sent officers to quietly release Paul and Silas, as the easiest way to save trouble. But Paul knew a better way, and stood upon his rights, quite as much for his himself, as for the young church as for himself.

"They have beaten us openly, uncondemned, without trial, and legal decision that they were guilty according to Roman law. 'Being Romans,' and exempt from stripes and torture. 'Let them come themselves and fetch us out.'"

38. "They feared, when they heard," etc. The crime was regarded as treason, and those who committed it were liable to degradation from office, confiscation of property, and perhaps death. As the result, the magistrates apologized, and requested them to leave the city, which they did with dignity, and for the peace and good of the infant Philippian church.

Had they remained, there might arise useless opposition; while by leaving Luke with the church (as we learn from the change of pronouns "we" to "they"), there was a peaceful but large growth of the Christian community. From a comparison with what follows it appears that Timothy went with Paul and Silas.

"Two words of Jesus in this lesson can mean everything to every one of us." Follow Me. What will your answer be to-day? He calls you now. Will you follow him trustfully into danger, into safety, into glorious service?

BOLD BANK ROBBERY

MOST SENSATIONAL HOLD-UP
AT FORT WORTH, TEX.

Bandit Takes $8,100 From Cashier
at the Point of a Pistol and Makes His Escape.

Fort Worth, Tex.—Walking into the Waggoner Bank and Trust Company, a well-dressed stranger compelled Cashier Walter E. King, at the point of a six shooter, to turn over the $8,100 which was piled in front of him, and made good his escape.

The hold-up was the most sensational robbery pulled off in Fort Worth in a quarter of a century. There was no one in the bank at the time, with the exception of the cashier, who was busy working on the cash balance, and had the bills in a roll, ready to take them to the company's central bank, at the corner of Houston and Eighth streets. Cashier King was the only man in the branch institution at the time, and paid little attention to the stranger when he walked in. He looked up from his work to stare into the muzzle of a six-shooter.

"Make a move or a noise of any kind and I'll kill you," said the stranger, in a low tone. "Now, push that pile of money to the window here."

With the alternative of death if he did not comply, the cashier obeyed, and after stuffing the $8,100 into his pocket, the stranger backed out of the door, still pointing the gun at the cashier's head and threatening to kill him if he made an attempt to follow him.

GETS VERDICT FOR $15,000

Cora Sinclair Winner in Breach of Promise Suit.

New York.—Cora Sinclair, the "and snipe girl," was awarded a verdict of $15,000 against Samuel S. Laird, Jr., son of a wealthy Philadelphia manufacturer, whom she sued for breach of promise to marry.

Laird met Miss Sinclair, whose real name is d'Allo, in 1899. Their acquaintance ended in his renting a flat for her in New York City, where they lived from 1900 to 1908. Laird, she alleged, promised that if she'd die this he would marry her when his trial over a hundred love letters written to Cora by Laird, all assuring her of his affection for her, were introduced in evidence.

Throughout the trial, Laird's wife, formerly Mrs. Lillian G. Hayes, of Philadelphia, sat beside her husband and aided his defense by notes she made. She also testified in his behalf.

HOGS SOLD AT $8.10.

Highest Since 1893—Two Dollars Above Last Year.

Louisville, Ky.—Hogs sold at $8.10 per 100 pounds in the Louisville market Tuesday. This is the highest price since 1895, and is $2 higher than a year ago at this time.

The prices ruling for hogs are attributed to the high prices of corn and feedstuff and to the scarcity of hogs.

Lambs continue to bring fancy prices. The best were in demand today at $8.50, and, while receipts were large, the demand was unsatisfied. Receipts of lambs and sheep during the past five weeks have aggregated 150,000 head, which is away ahead of any corresponding period in the history of the Louisville market.

GETS ANOTHER LION.

Newest Bag Made by Roosevelt is Record for Size.

Naivasha, British East Africa.—All the members of the Roosevelt expedition at present in camp on the Loietta plains, in the Sotik district, are in excellent health.

Theodore Roosevelt has shot another lion, while a very large, tawny-maned lion has fallen before the rifle of his son, Kermit. This animal holds the record for size on the present expedition. Kermit also has killed two cheetahs. In addition, the party has secured three giraffes, two eland, six topi and a large number of minor antelope. All the skins are being preserved for the Smithsonian institution at Washington.

Drinking on Increase.

Detroit, Mich.—Notwithstanding the prohibition wave that has recently swept over the country, there is every reason to believe that the alcoholic habit among business men is steadily on the increase, declared Dr. Frank C. Richardson, of Boston, in an address before the Society of Neurology and Psychiatry. Dr. Richardson declared that the strenuous American business life is producing in many of its followers a nervous prostration of the character of neurasthenia, psychasthenia and hysteria.

30 PROSTRATED IN NEW YORK.

New York.—It was 90 in the shade Tuesday. As dusk came, a fresh breeze brought relief. More than twenty prostrations occurred, and at least two suicides were caused by the high temperature.

House Stuffed With Cash.

Sperry, Ia.—The administrators of the wealthy estate of Mrs. Elizabeth Farrier, of this place, have finally solved the mystery of the disappearance of the money of the deceased, by taking up the carpet in the parlor and finding the floor under it fairly peppered with bank notes. Nearly $1,000 were thus discovered. Other sums were revealed about the house in an old organ, in the walls and other out-of-the-way places. In fact, the house was fairly lined and stuffed with cash, and the administrators are still searching and finding money.

THE TRIAL OF JESUS

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D.,
Pastor of the Chicago Ave. Moody's
Church, Chicago.

"What shall I do with Jesus who is called Christ?"—Matthew 27:22. Jesus was tried before the tribunal of grasping greed with Judas as judge, and the sentence was, "I will sell him for 30 pieces of silver." This is a striking contrast with a Japanese young man in New York whose father offered him $50,000 if he would give up his Christian nonsense and return to the faith of his fathers. The reply was "Jesus is worth more than $50,000 to me. I cannot sell him for that." Are you, as judge, estimating Jesus at so low a rate that you are willing to sell him for paltry present indulgences?

The next tribunal was that of religious prejudice represented by the Jewish Sanhedrin. One of the greatest enemies to Christ is religion. The matter with China, India and Africa is to a large extent religion which worshipping monstrous idols brings its votaries down to their level. The matter with people calling themselves Christians who are satisfied with elaborate ritualistic observances, while in their daily lives they are bad, is that they have a large religious nature which has not been purified by the blood of Christ and mastered by his life. Their religious prejudice often bars their hearts against the entrance of Christ.

Jesus came also before the tribunal of patronizing pride with Herod as judge. Herod would like to see him perform some miracles and asked some questions which Jesus treated with dignified silence. There are Herods of wealth and scholarship living to-day who assume a patronizing tone toward Christ.

Pilate represents the tribunal of conscientious weakness. He is convinced that Jesus is innocent and he would like to release him, but he lacks the moral courage to assert his conscientious convictions.

The world is full of Pilates who know their duty toward Christ while they lack the moral courage to do it. If some of them had stamina enough to take the advice of their good Christian wives, they would do right and be happier.

The tribunal of weak faith with Peter as judge decided against Christ under stress of great temptation, but one earnest, loving, compassionate look from the eyes of the prisoner convinced the judge that he was wrong and caused him to reverse his decision, while it sent him out into the dark to weep over his blunder.

I have described these tribunals before which Jesus was tried. But after all I am mistaken. Jesus is really the judge and these men are the prisoners before him. He is trying them. Judas is found guilty of base treachery and executes judgment upon himself. The Jewish Sanhedrin and the mob, full of religious prejudice, have judgment passed against them. The prayer "His blood be upon us and our children" has been answered and I hear the execution of the sentence in the tramp of the Roman army and in the thud of battering rams beating down the wall of the sacred city.

Herod's patronizing pride took him to Rome in search of a kingdom, but he received instead a decree of banishment and died a miserable death. Such will be the end of all pride which merely patronizes Jesus, while it refuses to accept him as Saviour and Lord.

Pilate was summoned to Rome, and, though his vacillating weakness would evade the issue, he must go and answer charges made by his enemies. Seeing that he will be condemned, he commits suicide. A legend tells us that his body was thrown into the Tiber and in a storm was cast upon the Rhine, but the river would not hold it. It was at last cast into a Swiss lake and once a year the devil takes it out and makes it go through the process of washing its hands in the presence of the people. The weird legend has in it a suggestion of truth. Those who know the right and refuse to do it can never find peace. The soul that is convinced of the truths of the claims of Jesus Christ but refuses for any reason to take his side will be restless and storm-tossed, a plaything, sooner or later, in the hands of the devil.

After his resurrection Jesus said: "Go, tell my disciples and Peter," as if he knew that Peter after his backsliding would not consider himself a disciple, unless he should receive such a personal assurance. Peter, restored to fellowship and power, preaches at Pentecost with a tongue of fire and 3,000 are converted in one day.

Reader, you are a judge before whom Jesus stands, and you must answer the question: "What shall I do with Jesus?" He is on your hands and you must do something with him. Will you sell him like Judas? Will you let religious prejudice cause you to reject his claims upon your faith and love? Will you patronize him like Herod? Will you vacillate like Pilate and refuse to be true to your convictions? Will you deny him like Peter?

Edythe Ballow, after a visit to friends in Clanton, returned to her home at Demopolis.

S. Johnson has returned to her mother, Mrs. S. Johnson, in Nashville.

M. Gowen, Mr. J. H. Moore, Mrs. Emma Anderson, Mrs. Edwards Moore and Mrs. Ballow attended the picnic at Mountain Creek last Saturday.

Mrs. J. O. Johnson of Clanton visited the former's mother, Mrs. Belle George, the day before last.

Mrs. G. O. Foster and Miss Mame, spent a very pleasant day at Mountain Creek.

Mr. Lonnie Teel of Clanton was also there with his family.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

First, let us decide what domestic science is not. It certainly is not the dreary kitchen work—the drudgery of food pans. When we study it, domestic science takes on a deeper significance, and there comes the realization that it is the matter of the most importance, for it involves the whole of life problems, whether relating to the home, to business, to the nation or to the state. SUCCESS IN BREED

CARE MUST BE EXERCISED IN SELECTING STOCK.

Farmer to be Prosperous in Growing Livestock Must Exercise Good Judgment and General Intelligence in Caring for Animals.

To become highly successful in breeding and growing farm animals one must love the animals he works with. He must have an inborn or acquired sympathy for them and ever be on the alert to make them comfortable and happy with feed, shelter and other necessary things for healthy growth and perfect maturity.

The man who is not content day or night till he knows that his farm stock is cared for in the best possible manner is sure to succeed with them. As the man thinks and works, so will his results be. Even when all things are right he will light the lantern after supper on winter evenings and go to the barn and other buildings to see the animals and know positively that they are warm and comfortable for the cold night. He will do this, not because he suspects neglect in some line, but because his heart is with them, and because he cannot help doing it. Going the rounds of the stalls and stables he talks to each animal as to a human being, and each animal seems to appreciate the human sympathy extended. It is a good way to make friends with the animals and gain their complete confidence. The men who do this from right motives and kindness are good stockmen.

The successful growing of live stock on the general farm requires good judgment and general intelligence on the part of the farmer. The animals require good shelter, proper amounts of right kinds of nutritious feeds and their physical structure must be understood in order to handle them in breeding and maternity. The grower should be able to determine diseases and other ailments, their cause and cure. To make profitable gains he should thoroughly understand feeds, with their composition and nutritive value and balanced rations. He should know what feeds will produce the highest returns with each kind of animal kept, and know what feeds to buy in order to get the best results from the feeds grown on his own farm. With judicious management and correct knowledge of farm stock and feeds the general farmer can buy feeds and use them with profit, besides adding extra amounts of manure to his land, which represents a part of the net gains. It is better farm practice to buy feeds than to sell them, and the farmer who keeps much live stock is able to do this to advantage.

With the growing demand for pure bred animals of all kinds, the general farmer can make extra money on the same amount of land by keeping pure bred animals only and selling a part of them for breeding purposes.

Of course, there is some extra expense in doing this, but the returns will justify the extra expense, and the pleasure in growing them is compensation in itself, an important point overlooked by many. It is a pleasure to keep animals that one is not ashamed of and which others are always eager to buy. When one has established a reputation for only a short time and breeds special utility stock he will soon find more buyers than he can supply. He need not go to them; they will come to him, and that makes a difference.

Horses, cattle, sheep and hogs all have their merits, but the general farmer should breed and grow all of them, with perhaps some one kind of animal, his special favorite, as a leader. It is possible under favorable conditions to make a specialty of several kinds and make a success of all of them, but as a rule it is not best to try to handle too many. It goes without saying that horses are valuable and very essential farm animals.

Every farmer should keep a few mares to raise colts for his own needs, and if possible some for sale. Nearly all of the farm work can be done with mares which raise colts nearly every year, and by keeping mares only for work and breeding them regularly the farmer can make double profit out of his horses.

Cabbage Worms.

A southern correspondent says that the best remedy he ever tried for ridding cabbage of worms and lice is air-slacked lime. It can be sprinkled on thickly and evenly by putting the lime in an old gusso sack, then shaking the sack over the cabbages. It is better to put it on early in the morning while dew is yet on the cabbage. It may be used once or twice a week until the worms disappear. Cabbage will thrive, and the heads grow firmer and whiter after using it. Air-slacked lime is also valuable for sprinkling on young squash and cucumber plants to protect them from the ravages of insects.

KEEP ONLY FOWLS THAT PAY

No Profit in Feeding a Lot of Old Hens That Have Outlived Their Usefulness.

Some hens are not worth their keep; others produce enough to cover the cost of their handling. The hens that pay are those that more than meet the expenses of money and time necessary to make them worth while. There are three classes of hens and the last is the one that we all desire and the one that we can have if we are willing to pay the cost.

What is necessary to own birds that pay? It takes more than money. You can buy birds that can pay but it is another thing to have them pay you.

White Cochins.

after you own them. Not only must you have the right kind of a hen, but you must use time and thought in caring for her to make her the paying kind.

They paying hen is usually hatched from a paying strain. The paying hen that comes out of a flock of good for nothing birds is seldom met and is not worth hunting for. It takes time, it takes money, it takes born sense to produce a flock of paying hens. It takes very little neglect to send this flock back to the class of nonpaying birds.

Paying birds are a delight to the eye. You like to show them to your friends and linger in your description of what they are and what they have done for you. The class of birds receive thought and attention from you. You gladly take good care of them; you are willing to properly mate and feed them; you look for fresh blood to improve them.

As a pet or object of fancy breeding no breed of fowls calls forth more admiration than the abundantly feathered Cochins.

Paying birds make up a large part of your flock when you sell the cream of the chicks every year. Money making flocks are made up of the best you raise, always letting the second quality go to the market. Paying birds live in houses free from vermin and supplied with pure air and water. They get feed that is needed to bring the profit to the proper point. Cheap feed—because it is cheap—never helped to produce the paying hen or kept her running to the nest. Hens that pay can be yours if you are willing to do your part.

TO INCREASE VALUE OF FARM

Proper Application of Energy and Skill Will Reward Farmer in Working Farm.

The first thought, on buying a farm, is how can its value be increased? This, naturally, will mean more profit. While making the soil richer is the solution, it is not so easily done, when the entire farm is considered, while constantly cropping and selling produce from it, says the Philadelphia Record.

In a great many instances the farmer engaging on new land endeavors to make it more productive, and in his efforts lessens the soil fertility. For a long time the farm may be steadily growing poorer and yet annually producing bigger crops.

All the manure applied has its value returned in one or more crops, and these rob the soil of some kind of fertility that the manure itself did not supply to them. Wherever potash and phosphate have become so exhausted that each crop is an indication that the soil is becoming poorer. The farmer manures for crop rather than for the land, and is satisfied if in each crop the money value of the fertilizer used is returned, with reasonable profit.

But there are other methods than making land rich to increase its value. Some times better cultivation alone will accomplish this, though always with this better cultivation comes more rapid soil exhaustion. In order to secure his living, the farmer must exhaust fertility. Fertility is the raw material that nature supplies, and the farmer turns it into as many forms as he chooses, and of kinds that will most likely give him a profit. Here, then, is a call for energy and skill, and if these are properly applied, the farmer receives his reward and the farm becomes more valuable. Every farmer should endeavor to find new and profitable crops, so that he may secure a much greater income from his land.

Grow Pure Bred Corn.

In cooperation with the county fair associations over 50 bushels of pure seed corn was distributed free by the University of Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment station to the young people who grew small plots and exhibited their product at local fairs. This work has been introduced into 26 counties, and has proved of immense value in interesting young people in agricultural matters.

PICKLES THAT WON'T SHRINK

Cucumbers Put Up in This Way Will Be Found Excellent When Brought Out for Table.

Wash cucumbers, clean and place them in a stone jar, then cover with a brine made of one pint of salt to six quarts water. The water should be boiling hot. Place grapes on top, weight down and let stand overnight. Pour the brine off, then place alternate layers of grapes, leaves and cucumbers in the pickling kettle. Pour over them a quart of water made of one teaspoonful of powdered alum to each quart of water. Boil the alum in cold water. Allow the cucumbers and come to boiling point. Let the whole stand over covered on the back of the stove for two hours, then drain and place in a jar a layer of leaves and one of salt, until all are packed. Pour about one pint of salt over the medium-sized pickles. Pour the water over and cover with grape leaves. Heat this brine and pour it over nine mornings. Let the cucumbers dry and place in a jar. Pour over but speed vinegar and heat at once.

The vinegar to be prepared by boiling. To each quart of vinegar add two strong) allow two strong) add each of cinnamon and cloves. Boil a spoonful each of mace, cardamom, a few thin slices of horseradish, one ounce mustard seed, one ounce of black pepper, a pinch of red pepper, and one cupful of sugar. Boil spices in a thin muslin bag, bring vinegar to boiling point and add for 15 minutes. Then pour over pickles.

The Home.

Wring a cloth from vinegar and wrap it several thicknesses around cheese to keep it from molding or drying.

A perfume bag to keep months away is made as follows: One-half ounce each of cloves, nutmeg, caraway seeds.

Add a teaspoonful of sugar of lead to the water in which fine silk hosiery is washed, to prevent the delicate color from fading.

Wipe off screens with a duster each morning and beat with a soft brush. This beating should be done lightly or the wire may be bulged.

Cold water, a teaspoonful of ammonia and soap will remove machine grease when other means would not answer, on account of colors running.

To wash water bottles or any raw having a long neck, fill with clean hot water and tiny bits of torn paper. Shake well and rinse in cold water.

A small piece of window glass will be useful for holding the leaves apart on a cook book and one can read the recipe and not soil the book by too much handling.

Emery powder and oil made into a paste is an excellent mixture to clean steel. Rub on well and polish after which rub with an oiled rag, and then polish up again with a clean duster.

Delicate Pudding.

Put into a double boiler three eggs mixed fruit, juice and water. When it reaches the boiling point stir in four rounded tablespoons cornstarch stirred smooth in a little cold water, a half-teaspoonful salt and sugar to taste, dependent upon the kind of fruit juice employed. When it has cooked and thickened take from the fire, stirring in at the same time the stiffly whipped whites of four large eggs. Pour into a mold and set where it will chill. Make a custard, using a pint and a half milk and the yolk of four eggs with sugar to sweeten and flavoring to taste. Chill also and serve both every cold.

Close up the ranks, there are no fighting out, but there are many in the line.

Some of the short stories are about fighters, but they are not the kind of fighters that the union needs.

The Texas veterans are proud of the hardest fighting they have done when the cotton picking comes again.

The Mississippi union will have their $1,000,000 warehouse completed soon. They will be ready to meet this year.

From everywhere comes word of the progress of the union. In Virginia it is sweeping everything before it.

Much has been done in the past, advancing union principles and extending the organization, but much remains to be done yet.

The hardest blow the union ever suffered was from the panic and the knowers but what it was precipitated for that purpose. But the union will be here long after the panic is gone.

The union is built upon a foundation composed of the rocks of justice and not on a rope of sand. Its principles are in accordance with the Golden Rule, and not that of selfish commercialism. It is built to endure the combined attacks of predatory capitalism.

A general system of union labels should be devised and adopted as soon as possible. Union labor should be recognized in all organized labor forces. In this way its usefulness would be largely extended.

When a member of the union makes the discovery that he is good material for some office of trust before anyone else does you may put him down as a politician that will do to let alone. Good men do not push themselves forward.

VITAL NEEDS OF THE UNION.

Efficient Officers with Well Equipped and Disciplined Army of Men Brings Strength.

The strength of any organization lies in its compactness, education and discipline. Numerical strength is its own weakness if unwieldy. An army of well drilled men, disciplined and ready and willing to obey its proper officers is much stronger than one that is without discipline, without confidence in its officers, and without willingness of purpose to make it effective. In the Farmers' union, as in all other organizations, education should begin with organization. Not only the purposes of the organization, but the way to accomplish them should be taught by every member.

Without unity of purpose there can be no unity of action. Without confidence in the officers there will be a lack of discipline. The time is drawing near when the union will choose state and national officers for the coming year. Great care should be taken not only to choose men of honesty and integrity, but men whose ability to cope with a resourceful enemy is unquestioned. Fitted against the union is no fight for a higher price for cotton are men of superb business ability, backed by abundant means. To cope with these men requires not only courage and caution, but a practical mind, quick in perception and ready in resources. The officers chosen should not only possess the above qualifications, but should be men who can command the respect and confidence of the members of the union.

There is nothing so demoralizing in an organization as finding fault with the officers. If a poor officer is chosen it is the fault of the members. The eloquence of candidates is too often mistaken for ability. It is not often that a really eloquent man makes a good executive officer. You can put him down almost as a rule. The man is successful in the affairs of a great organization is one who has succeeded in his own business. Such a man not only commands the respect and confidence of the members, but of the public generally. It is a good investment to pay remuneration enough to secure first-class men.

Choosing Delegates.

In choosing delegates to the state and national meetings of the union great care should be exercised. The men sent to these meetings will not only elect officers but decide upon a line of action for the coming year.

The kind of men to choose is such of brains and good business ability. They should also be men of courage. It is too often the case that men are chosen for positions of importance because they are good talkers. This is a mistake. There never was a convention held but what there was too much tongue, and generally too little brain. A small amount of tongue will go a good ways if backed by a sufficient amount of brains. But a brainless tongue is really harmful. It is calculated to create dissension and check the progress of the convention.

There are plenty of men who will make a speech on a question when they know it will pass either with or without their talk. What's the use? Why not let it go and save the time? Close the brainless tongue at home.

The vinegar to be prepared as follows: To each quart of vinegar (not too strong) allow two teaspoonfuls each of cinnamon and cloves, one teaspoonful each of mace, celery seed, a few thin slices of horseradish, one ounce mustard seed, one saltpetre of black pepper, a pinch of salt, red pepper, and one cupful of sugar. Put spices in a thin muslin bag, bring vinegar to boiling point and let boil for 15 minutes. Then pour over pickles.

the quiet was more to him than a thunder peal in the turmoil. You could not have won the woman at a yell in a crowd. If Jesus had spoken to her in the presence of others she could have been embarrassed and perhaps embittered. The eunuch has been in the crowd in Jerusalem. He had doubtless heard the apostle preach, but it took the quiet chance with Deacon Philip at his side, talking in conversational tone, to win him to the Lord.

REDI'S EXPERIMENT.

Out of It Grew the Great Fabric of the Germ Theory.

It was a fixed belief of the ancients that many living creatures could come into existence in a spontaneous fashion, to which attention has often been made. The true beginning of the germ theory arose out of a ludicrously simple observation made by Redi, a Florentine physician, about the middle of the seventeenth century. He debated with his confreres in Florence the question of the origin of the maggots appearing in decomposing meat. The old view held, of course, that the maggots were bred within dead and putrefying substances. Redi, taking a piece of meat, covered the mouth of the jar in which it was contained with a piece of fine gauze. He beheaded the flesh flies, attracted by the smell of the decaying meat, coming to deposit their eggs, after the manner of their kind, in the decomposing substance. The gauze, however, kept them from effecting this natural object, with the result that the eggs were laid on the surface of the gauze and the maggots there hatched out, while the decay of the meat went on uninterrupted without a single maggot appearing in its substance.

On this childishly simple experiment the great fabric of the germ theory of today was founded, for if the law of universal parentage applied to the case of maggots and meat it was clear, argued Redi, that it must apply universally. Subsequent experimentation proved the words to be true, and so today, when our attention is focused upon germs or microbes, so minute that we might accommodate many hundreds of thousands of them on the surface of a postage stamp, we again come face to face with Redi's first principle that each germ could only have sprung from a preceding and parental organism.—Brooklyn Eagle.

MISTAKES IN TITLES.

"Love's Discourses" Has Nothing to Do With Cupid's Pranks.

It is interesting to collect certain of the instances of mistakes in regard to the titles of books. Thus the old farmer who asked for "Edgewood" (the Irish Bull) got no doubt something he did not expect, and the dainty youth who applied for "Love's Discourses" did not really wish a volume of sermons by Christopher Love. If application is made by messenger, mistakes of a different sort may occur. An excellent one once asked for Bishop Cocks and then "Earnest Communion," he meant Bishop Cocks' "Communion." Similarly by Warren's "Moral Cookery" he meant his "Model Cookery." A maid forgot all about the title of the book she had been sent for except that it was "something like tomato soup." She was served with "Red Potatoes."

It may have been a fault of pronunciation on the part of the purchaser who asked for "rubber bands" but he received a copy of "Robert Burns," but it was certainly the bookseller who was at sea who referred an applicant for "Voca's Logarithmic Tables" to the "Voca's department." In cataloging booksellers frequently err. Thus Mr. Mehan, the Oxford scholar, who wrote a grammar and dictionary of the Swahili language, had those works cataloged as "Madam Swahili's Grammar" and in the line beneath, "Do do Dictionary." Recently, too, a book of Mr. Lucas', "A Swan and Her Friends," giving an account of Miss Seward, "the swan of Lichfield," was classified as "Annie Swan and Her Friends."—Manchester Guardian.

That Settled It.

The commissioners in lunacy were nonplussed. The man on whose mental condition the courts had appointed them to pass seemed perfectly sane in spite of all testimony to the contrary. His every action, his every remark was rational. They were about to give up in despair when matters took an unexpected turn. "Oh, doctor, permit me to return the umbrella I borrowed from you last week," said the patient. And then, at the thought of earning their fees with no quinquies of conscience, the learned men decided that any one who would voluntarily return a borrowed umbrella should be placed under restraint.

This slaps the proven how trifles will ever mold our destinies.—New York Times.

He Followed Directions.

Red tape leads one to curious lengths. A writer in the Columbus Dispatch tells of a street railway car that picked up a young helper on its fender and carried it some distance through the street.

In making out the required report to the superintendent the employee wrote in answer to the query on the blank form, "What did the victim say?" "She was carried along on the fender and then rolled off and ran away without saying a word."

The Way Out.

"Think, love," said Mrs. Gobsa Golde. "I ordered a dinner gown, and that dressmaker has sent me a travelling suit."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" Gobsa Golde demanded. "The only thing is for us to go abroad again," she sighed.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Amiable.

"They say Thelma's husband is a very amiable man." "Amiable? I should say so! I have known that man to laugh at a joke when he was taking down the stove-pipe."—Baltimore American.

It is impossible to make your conduct perfect, but it is easy to make it better than it has been.—Aitchison Globe.

How to Cure Liver Trouble

Keep Your Bowels Regular and Your Stomach Sweet

People sometimes imagine when they have liver trouble or are bilious that the main thing to do is to take physic. Taking pills and keeping your bowels regular are two very different matters. The use of a violent cathartic does not mean the cure of constipation or the establishment of regular movements. A physic is an emergency remedy, but never a bowel treatment. If the bowels do not move regularly there is a reason deeper seated than the mere clogging up that is removed by a dose of salts or pills.

When that drowsy, tired feeling, with the coated tongue, the dull head pain, the sour stomach, the sallow complexion, constipated bowels and touches of fever come on it is time to take a medicine that will act on the bowels gently and mildly, cleansing and strengthening them, stir up the liver and aid the stomach in digesting the food.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin does this every time. Take a few doses and see how quickly the drowsy feeling leaves, regular bowel movements come back, with a good appetite and perfect digestion, and you soon feel like your old self. It does not gripe nor pain, it acts smoothly, mildly and is very pleasant to take. Wm. Hinckman, Mesick, Mich., says: "I was troubled with indigestion and liver trouble. I have used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin with fine results. It is a perfect laxative and bowel feeder, acts strong and well as formerly." Wm. Block, Natick, Ill., says: "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best remedy I ever used for liver complaint or constipation."

McR. B. Brown, Adairsville, Ind. Ter., was troubled with torpid liver and constipation. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gave her prompt relief. All druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Pepsin Syrup Co., 304 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill. is glad to send a free sample to anyone who has never used it and will give it a fair trial.

Fight With Shark.

A special from St. Andrews says that while out late Monday afternoon Henry Munson, a well known resident of that place, was attacked in the bay by a large leopard shark, which injured him to such an extent that he is hardly expected to live.

Mr. Munson had waded out from shore in the bay, a distance of about twenty five yards and was in about three feet of water when the shark made its first lunge at him. He fought the shark and called for help, but so quick was the shark in its attacks that the man was almost disemboweled when a crew of a fishing smack leaped into the water and with bars and spikes fought off the hungry shark. The latter followed the men with the wounded man clear to the water's edge and frequently made attacks upon them but was beat off each time.

But for the quick arrival of the rescuing party, Mr. Munson would have been killed by the shark.

How soon we get accustomed to things. A year or so ago we were used to dark streets at Clanton night, and thought nothing of it.

Thursday night something went wrong with the electric light and our streets were for a time in total darkness. It seemed strange, and was most decidedly a novelty.

Two little boys, attracted by the light of McNeill Springs were seen of seeing for themselves and appealing to their parent and guardian, Guy Higgins, he gave permission to go, provided they walked there. Nothing happened there. Unless a better understanding is brought about between manufacturers and operators Lynn, Mass., will lose her prestige as a shoe center, and the bulk of the country's shoe-making will gradually drift to the Mississippi valley, where already the chief shoe city, St. Louis, claims to be outstripping her Eastern rivals. This seems to be the opinion of most of Lynn's shoe manufacturers. Western manufacturers have been cutting into Eastern fields more or less of late in such a way as to cause some consternation.

When Arlie Powell, convicted of horse stealing, was brought into court at Nowata, Okla., to receive a sentence of one year in prison, Judge Thomas Brown said to him: "You are too good a boy to be sent to prison. I'm going to allow Rufe Riley, the sheriff, to make a man out of you. In three months I will return to prison I am going to instruct Rufe to keep you here in jail. If, when I come back, you have learned by heart the Ten Commandments, the Lord's prayer and some of the Psalms, I will turn you out again. If you can not do these things you must go to prison then."

Cobb Barnett, who died at McAlester, Okla., in a will bequeathing an estate of $200,000, left $80,000 to the two Methodist Episcopal churches of South McAlester for the construction of new church edifices. He made Col. J. J. McAlester, corporation commissioner, his executor and left him a handsome legacy. One nephew, his only relative, receives $5. Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

W. J. MORGAN,
Springfield, Missouri.

The consumers of flour are not in Mr. Patten's wheat corner game, but they are paying the freight all the same.

The corner on wheat is a great object lesson to the consumers of bread. It shows up the beauties of the system of dealing in futures.

Talk about "regulating" the trusts and corporations. If there is any way in which this can be done it ought to be put out where the people could see it.

When the government gets in a tight place the corporations and trusts squeeze it for all it is worth, but when the corporations get into close quarters they appeal to the government for aid and protection.

A man up in Wisconsin who belongs to the class that "know all about finance" has spent $107,000 trying to secure a $50,000 office. If a farmer was to make a deal of that kind they would spell his name Reuben with a little "r."

The farmer who cannot see the benefits of organization and co-operation must be very blind, indeed. All other classes are organized for the protection and promotion of their interests and the unorganized farmer is the prey of all.

Some people want the government to step in and break up the corner on wheat. That would be no more than just, but the cry of paternalism would be raised against such action. If a gang of commercial pirates want to "hold up" the people what business is it of the government?

When one federal judge can practically set aside a law which required a year's time for congress, with the aid of the best legal talent in the United States, to prepare and pass it, it is time for the people to inquire what's the matter in "regulating" the corporations, and "busting" the trusts?

FARMER IS IDLE TOO MUCH.

He Puts in Five Months of Work While Banker and Business Man Works All the Year.

While talking about raising home supplies, vegetables and fruits, let us carry that question to the end and find something profitable to do during the entire 12 months. This is the key to the trouble with southern farming. We do not work enough to accomplish the desired results. This is a fact that might not be admitted, but it is true nevertheless. The average southern horse or mule works about five months in the year, and the farmer works about seven months in the year. The horse or mule is idle about seven months in the year and the farmer about five months. All this goes to the expense account heavily, and nothing to profit account. Not only is this true of the farmer and his horse, but his land is idle also. Take these leading crops, cotton, corn and small grain. The land that is planted in either of these is idle five or six months in the year. It stands to reason that no business can succeed with two of its main factors idle two-thirds of the time.

The banker works 12 months in the year and his capital works at the same time. The merchant works his full 12 months in the year. The farmer may say: "There is seed time and there is harvest time; how can I work 12 months in the year?" Study the fundamental principles of the Farmers' union and let them become as second nature, then your hands will find something profitable to do every work day in the year. Brains and muscle must work together in order to bring results. The real business farmer will plan by night for work by day. He applies the best means to accomplish the best results. Neighborhood gossip, politics and petty yarns are as chaff to the real genuine business farmer. Everything upon the farm is made profitable, even the walnuts and hickory nuts in the bottoms are put upon the markets. The hustling business farmer has set his stake and day by day he works to it with renewed hope that he will accomplish his desired results.—Union Farmer.

Get in Line.

Just think about it for a moment, had the farmers of the grain belt organized compactly and held their grain for demand of prices what the man behind the plow would be making to-day? Instead of that, one man is making his millions. To-day there is a universal flour famine and even the farmer is buying back his flour at a broad margin. This is all bad business to the producer, and financial success to a few. Mix brains with your fertilizer, mix it with your every effort. Get in line for co-operation and brotherly love.—Union Farmer.

Grabbing Cotton Options.

Right to-day the speculators are grabbing at your October cotton sales for 11 cents. They have found out that this warehousing, cotton reduction, hogs and hushy means business and that they must get busy early in order to get a half slice.—Union Farmer.

SPECULATORS GET MONEY.

Gamblers in Futures Secure More Benefits Out of Wheat Than the Farmer.

"Patten makes more money out of wheat than the men who raise it," says the Springfield leader.

That is true of every speculator or gambler in futures. And the unsuccumbent one is just as much of a commercial parasite, just as avaricious as the successful one. It is simply a game where the speculators get control of the visible supply of whatever product they want to speculate on and then proceed to skin the lambs as well as the innocent public who need wheat or corn or cotton or other product which is "cornered."

A million negroes might have been playing crops while the wheat "corner" was on and the public would not have suffered one-tenth the loss and inconvenience caused by Patten and his co-conspirators in putting up the price of wheat and consequently flour and bread. Yet, if the negroes had been half as public in playing their game as Patten and his crowd were in theirs, the negroes would have been put in jail. Patten's victims number millions. With thousands it means hunger. It is the worst kind of gambling. It robs innocent people as well as those in the game. Yet, the gamblers go free. What can be said of a government that permits such a thing as this to be carried on under the name of commerce? Can it be said that we are a Christian nation to permit and legalize moral crimes like this? Yet it is said that some of the men who indulge in these games are prominent members of the church. So much the worse for the church.

Such men as Patten and his co-conspirators ought to be in the penitentiary. This incident reminds me of a story I heard when I first went south. In the neighborhood where I stopped there had been a number of illicit distilleries. These had been discovered and broken up a year or so previous to the time I arrived there. One day a preacher who was selling bibles and other good books stopped at the house of Uncle Billy Williford. In the course of the conversation the preacher asked Uncle Billy for a list of the best citizens in the community. Uncle Billy hesitated a moment and then said: "Well, sir, I'll tell you, about the best citizens we had in this community are in the penitentiary."

And it wasn't so far from the truth. Some of the leading men had been sent to prison for having some connection with the moonshine distilleries. So in the case of the men who organize "corners" in the necessities of life, about all there is between them and the inside of prison bars is the want of a law founded upon justice, prohibiting gambling in futures, making it a special crime, and that law faithfully executed.

Some people want the government to step in and break up the corner on wheat. That would be no more than just, but the cry of paternalism would be raised against such action. If a gang of commercial pirates want to "hold up" the people what business is it of the government?

When one federal judge can practically set aside a law which required a year's time for congress, with the aid of the best legal talent in the United States, to prepare and pass it, it is time for the people to inquire what's the matter in "regulating" the corporations, and "busting" the trusts?

National Banks Falling in Line.

The states of Oklahoma and Kansas have laws requiring the banks to pay a certain per cent. on all their deposits into a fund for the purpose of guaranteeing the safety of all moneys deposited in the banks. It seems that these laws do not include the national banks, and for the first time in the recollection of the writer the national banks are trying to get in under cover of these state laws. Of course the banks opposed the passage of the law. They made all kinds of faces at it and called it all kinds of names. But in spite of all their opposition it became a law, and the people began to take their funds out of the national banks, to which the law did not apply, and place them in the state banks. When the national banks found they could not come in under the provision of the state law they began to organize a guarantee association among themselves. The states of Oklahoma and Kansas are pre-eminently farming sections, and it was the farmers who forced the enactment of these laws. They urged that what was sauce for the goose ought to be sauce for the gander; that when they went to borrow money they had to give security, and the banks should be compelled to do the same thing on its deposits. The law worked so well, and became so popular, that the national banks had to fall in line or quit business, as banking is not much good without deposits. This is only a start towards some more legislation of the same nature.

Patience.

The farmer must learn patience in the conduct of his business. He must not expect the Farmers' union to uproot the vicious business systems at once that have been in operation for years.

The battle will be stubbornly fought all along the line. Every inch of advantage that can be contested with advantage will be contested. The farmer need not expect an easy victory. It will be a test of endurance. The other fellow expects that the farmer will become impatient and will abandon the fight and return again to the flesh pots of Egypt.

Many of the business systems in vogue are crude, expensive systems that should have been abandoned years ago. The demand for reform is great and if the farmers hold steadily on there is no question but that they will win. The Farmers' union system of handling cotton is simple, well nigh inexpensive one, that will give satisfaction to our people. Then, my brethren, be patient workers, looking for a consummation of our hopes.—National Co-Operator.

The farmer sold his wheat for 18 cents, but the gamblers in futures are selling it for 40 or 50 cents higher.

VERY ANCIENT GAME IS FOLD

Was Played in China Thousands of Years Ago Under the Name of Horseball.

"One day, while walking along the Li-Chang, the great book and copy street of Peking," says a writer in the Nicholas, "I stepped into a store to look at some Chinese paintings. The street is more than a mile in length, not very wide and not particularly clean, but it is the model street in all upper China and one of the most remarkable in the world. It contains nothing but book stores and art stores.

"There you will find a history—a history of the world—not a universal history, but only a history of China which would fill a two-volume wagon. There you can also find an encyclopedia which contains as many volumes as there are days in a hundred years. And there you will find the works of a man who has been governing 400,000,000 people, who has many separate poems as there are minutes in two weeks.

"Among many other things the dealer brought out a painting of the men dressed in the style of the Ming dynasty—a garb of four centuries ago, playing a game. The picture was painted on a piece of silk about three and a half feet long and 15 inches wide. The silk had originally been white, but through the years and centuries since it was painted it had turned a beautiful brown.

"I found by the inscription that it had been painted by a man named Ch'u Ying, the greatest landscape and figure painter of the Ming dynasty, some 400 years ago.

"What are the men doing?" I inquired of the merchant.

"Knocking horse ball," he answered.

"But they are not riding horses, they are on mules," I continued.

"Quite right," said he, "a horse would be too large to turn quickly and play easily and he would not be tough enough to stand the game."

"Why, is it a violent game?" I asked.

"I do not know," he continued, "I never saw it played, but I suppose so. When men are riding mules twisting, twisting, galloping, swinging clubs and yelling, it cannot be very mild. They are liable to run into each other, their mules may fall, or they may be unseated and trampled under the feet of their antagonists. It is not child's play."

"How long have the Chinese played this game?" I inquired.

"He waved his hand at me in that queer way the Chinese have of saying they can't answer.

"I do not know," I suppose they have always had it, at least, he modified his statement, for 2,500 or 3,000 years."

The Critic's Duty.

It is sometimes the painful duty of a judge to order a man to be hanged by the neck till he be dead; it is sometimes the painful duty of a critic to tell an author that his English is faulty, his arguments fallacious, and his imagination a minus quantity. But it is never the duty of a judge to mingle with the dreadful utterances of doom sarcastic remarks about the prisoner's inferior social status; nor is it ever the duty of a critic to mention an author's connection with "gallipolis," or to sneer at his poverty, or to insist on the fact that his work was originally printed in a journal purchasable for the sum of one-half penny.—Arthur Machen, in The Weekly, London.

What He Remembered.

"An' ye fell from a window, Jerry. How far was it ye fell?"
"Tin stories."
"Well, well! That was a great fall. And what did you think of so far down?"
"Begorry, I didn't think of nothing until I passed the fifth story. That's all I remember. I left me pig on the window sill."

PAINTED

Maine Man Lost Thirty Thousand Dollars by Job.

Pasture He Swapped for $50 Worth of Paint Afterwards Increased Rapidly in Value; Says Style is Costly.

Bangor, Me.—The costliest job of house painting on record hereabouts is reported by a Northeast Harbor man, who lost a fortune through his anxiety to make improvements upon his residence and his poor opinion of Northeast Harbor's prospects. The man concluded some years ago the his house, then white, would look great deal better if painted a sort of canary color, with pea green trimmings. He hadn't the money to pay for the paint or work, but he has plenty of land, being in fact land poor. To a friend from Ellsworth the Northeast Harbor man said:

"Here, Jim, I need $50 the worst way. Now, you give me the $50 and I'll give you a deed to that pasture I own there to the shore."

And Jim said, after some thought, "Well, I'll give you the land, but you want to be sure."

BEAUTY BY TAKING MICROBES

Patient Gets 125,000,000 Staphylococcus and Other Germs, Then Waits.

London.—The beauty parlors of London have a serious and scientific rival in the inoculating department at St. Mary's hospital. Here complexion ailments are being renovated and revived to the latest scientific treatment.

The injection of a few millions of disease germs into the tissues of the shoulder or flank can transform sluggish, blotchy complexion to a normal healthy skin, according to a doctor at the hospital. The best results are obtained in the cases of muddy, sallow complexions due to sluggish action of the skin glands.

The disease here is caused by a recently discovered germ named the acne bacillus. In other cases where the skin is tender and painful another germ, the staphylococcus, usually found as well. The treatment consists of injecting under the skin vaccines composed of one of both of these two bacilli, according to the symptoms of the case.

The ordinary patient seeking treatment for a bad complexion will receive in his first dose about 125,000,000 of staphylococcus, with perhaps 5,000,000 of the acne bacilli. The vaccines are manufactured in laboratory and are supplied in glass bulbs, each holding about a teaspoonful. One of these bulbs is sufficient for three or four doses and contains over 100,000,000 of the bacilli.

Where the new treatment has great advantage over the beauty parlor's complexion cure is in the time required to accomplish results. A thick patch of skin on the shoulder or face is washed and sterilized and the vaccine injected with a hypodermic syringe. The whole treatment takes on a minute or two and the patient is ready to go home and await results.

Happy Snake Hunters.

NEWS OF THE WORLD

A Brief Resume of the Items of Interest in Our Country and the World at Large For the Past Few Days.

The shah of Persia is fleeing for his life from revolutionists.

Riotous scenes followed a strike of coal miners in Cape Breton.

Senator Aldrich is endeavoring to place the tariff bill in the hands of President Taft by July 24.

Numerous violations of civil service law have been committed by persons anxious to enter the government service.

The Senate accepted an amendment by Senator Clapp including holding companies in the corporation tax provision.

Attorney General Wickersham delivered an address before the Kentucky Bar Association at Paducah on corporations and trusts.

Mrs. Lillie B. Lester brought suit at Mobile for $25,000 each against Hardaway Young and the Southern Supply Company, alleging false imprisonment.

Col. W. A. Montgomery reported to Governor Noel on the matter of marking the water boundary between Louisiana and Mississippi, recommending that Louisiana be reimbursed for one-half the expense.

A reign of terror resulted in Centerville, a suburb of Butte, Mont., when a trio of masked bandits proceeded from one saloon to another and in less than one hour and a half had held up three resorts and emptied their tills.

The British, German and French bankers concerned in the Hankow-Szechuen railroad loan of $27,500,000 met in London and began consideration of the terms under which Americans are to be admitted to participation in the loan.

Among the many knotty problems of vital interest to the housewife which the Pure Food Board of the Department of Agriculture has been called upon to solve is one as to whether the effect of alum of various kinds and aluminum salts is injurious to health.

Vern Yonn, an amateur aeronaut of Chicago, fell nearly a thousand feet under his deflated balloon at a celebration at Waukegan, Ill. Both wrists and ankles were broken and his back was injured, but at the hospital to which Yonn was taken it was said he would probably recover.

Mrs. Mary Larned Dorrance Aldrich, wife of Edward Burgess Aldrich, eldest son of United States Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, has been granted a divorce on the ground of nonsupport and was awarded the custody of their 10-year-old child, Susan Katherine Aldrich, the husband being ordered to pay $10 a week for the support of the child.

Prince Philip Zu Eulenburg had an attack of heart failure in court at Berlin while undergoing an examination at the hands of physicians to determine his physical fitness to stand trial on charges of perjury alleged to have been committed during the Harden-Von Molke case, which was an outgrowth of the "round table" scandals of 1907.

As a result of a meeting of the Tri-State Livestock and Agricultural Association, composed of planters of Mississippi, Arkansas and Tennessee, plans were adopted looking to the establishment of packing houses in Greenville, Miss., and Memphis, and a systematic test as to the feasibility of devoting a portion of the farming lands of Mississippi to the raising of live stock and alfalfa.

The National Railway of Mexico has suffered a damage by floods of $500,000.

Leon Ling, the Chinese murderer of Miss Elsie Siegel, is believed to have left the country.

The supreme court of San Luis Potosi, Mexico, has confirmed the death sentence of Dario Gonzalez, millionaire, who was convicted of the murder of his brother-in-law, Manuel Iturre.

John D. Rockefeller gave another $10,000,000 to education.

A searching investigation of the civil service will probably be undertaken by the Senate.

Indications point to the success of the revolutionists in Persia. The shah may lose his crown.

More disorders occurred at La Paz, Bolivia, as a result of the boundary dispute with Peru.

President Taft has promised that he would give the South a "square deal" in the appointment of census enumerators.

A quarrel over $5 resulted in the killing of Tim Galloway, a negro waiter, by Frank Martinez, a Porto Rican in the kitchen of a hotel at Gulfport, Miss.

The government crop report for July is extremely favorable to the farmers, indicating a record-breaking corn yield and other cereals in promising condition.

The only hope of the downward tariff revisionists to secure reductions rests with President Taft. Speaker Cannon "fixed" the House confers to suit Senator Aldrich.

The striking miners in the Kansas district to the number of 8,000 were ordered back to work by President Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America, pending the outcome of a conference between the managers and the union, requested by the former.

Governor Johnson of Minnesota in a recent address is quoted as saying: "I hope to see the time when women will join with their husbands in political affairs. Where woman is the atmosphere is better and politics would be better with her refining influence."

The Tennessee Supreme Court has reversed the lower court in the conviction of eight night riders found guilty of the murder of Capt. Quentin Rankin at Walnut Log last October, six of whom were sentenced to be hung. This decision was expected to make way for new trials.

Hussain Hilmi Pasha has succeeded in squeezing $5,000,000 out of Abdul Hamid, and the screws are being tightened in the hope of making the late sultan disgorge all his ill-gotten wealth. The former sultan was always in fear of being deposed, and he put away in foreign investments many millions.

The Indiana Supreme Court in deciding that townships cannot be compelled to supply conveyances to carry children to school, argues that it is better for the health of the pupils to walk some distance in the open air than to be carried, usually in closely covered carriages or busses.

The Interstate Commerce Commission bulletin of railroad casualties for the first three months of this year, based on reports from the railroad companies, gives a total of 663 persons killed and 15,122 injured. This is an increase of 344 in casualties, but a decrease of 65 in the number of killed. The wrecks numbered 2,284.

At midnight Saturday more than 1,000 saloons in Texas ceased operations because of the coming into effect of the law enacted at the recent session of the state legislature invalidating all liquor licenses issued after February 20, 1909, limiting the number of saloons in each county to one for every 500 of population and barring new licenses in conjunction with a hotel.

The American Woolen Company, commonly known as the woolen trust, has formally notified the manufacturers of clothing that they must be prepared for an advance of about 25 per cent on all goods and to put up their fall prices accordingly. The trust circular tells the dealers that the outlook for business never has been brighter and that the rush of orders appeared to be based on exhausted stocks. But it goes on to say that the advance of from 30 to 50 per cent in the cost of raw materials naturally tends toward higher prices.

The Hudson Subway Company at New York has decided to take off the special cars reserved for women the reason given being that they were not patronized by the women themselves to any extent.

Victor D. Brenner, a Russian artist working in New York, is the designer of the head of Abraham Lincoln which is to appear on the new cent to be issued by the Philadelphia mint on August 1.

Isidore Abernethy of Atlanta, Ga., was killed by an automobile.

The banks of Chicago have formed an association for mutual protection.

William Boyd of Memphis, a young railroad man, has been convicted of forgery.

A Lima, O., capitalist has received a Black Hand letter asking for $10,000 or have his life taken.

Edward Payne Weston, the great overland walker, is very nearly at the end of his tramp to San Francisco.

Because Iowa land in which he had invested $75,000 proved to be swampy, James Haslett committed suicide by hanging.

Charged with the embezzlement of $9,400, J. G. Hostuter, cashier of the First State Bank of Ravia, Okla., was arrested in Little Rock, Ark.

The pulpit of a negro minister at Montgomery, Ala., will be filled by white preachers during the absence of the negro on a summer vacation.

Competition for the contract to supply about 900,000 yards of olive drab cotton cloth for uniforms for the army is earnestly sought by the war department.

Since the state-wide prohibition law went into effect in Tennessee several persons who drank "near beer" have been arrested for having "near jags."

Ruth Bryan Leavitt, since July 1, has been taking the place of her father, W. J. Bryan, filling his engagements as a lecturer at sundry Chautauqua meetings on the western slope of Colorado.

Eighteen million feet of lumber, valued at between $450,000 and $500,000, was destroyed by fire, of an unknown origin, at the mills of the Virginia and Rainy Lake Company at Duluth, Minn. Most of the lumber was sold for shipment to lower lake points.

A party of 30 Japanese business men, bankers and trade experts, are now gathering at Tokyo, Japan, to sail for America to study American business methods. They will reach the Pacific coast early in September and one of their chief stopping places will be St. Louis.

The corn crop, the biggest acreage and best prospects thus far in Oklahoma's history, is at the present time in a critical condition, and unless rains occur within the next few days, the crop will be practically ruined. For two weeks hot, dry winds have been blowing continuously.

M. Sakao, president of the Japan Sugar Company, convicted during the recent trial of the so-called sugar scandal cases, committed suicide at Tokyo by shooting himself through the head with a revolver. Sakao was one of the 23 persons on whom sentence was pronounced a few days ago.

The bodies of two young men, believed to have been Eastern college students, who came West to work in the harvest fields, were found beside the railroad tracks near Ramona, west of here. The men are believed to have been murdered and their bodies placed on the tracks. There was nothing by which they could be identified.

The John D. Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research of New York believes it has discovered an absolute cure for African sleeping sickness. No announcement will be made to the scientific world until experts who have been commissioned to subject the discovery to the severest tests have reported favorably upon it. It is said to be in the shape of a powder.

Manufacturers' materials imported in the fiscal year just ended seem likely to exceed in quantity those of any earlier fiscal year. Measured by values alone, the figures of the year will fall nearly $100,000,000 below those of 1907, but the quantity imported of nearly all important materials for manufacturing, exceeds in the fiscal year 1909, that of any earlier fiscal year.

Three firemen were burned, none seriously, and 100 persons were rendered homeless by a fire that destroyed a row of dwellings in the Richmond district of San Francisco.

Before hundreds Stella May Dunn, daughter of S. M. Dunn, a wealthy jeweler of Bloomington, Ill., committed suicide by jumping 50 feet from the second story window of the Milwaukee Public Museum building.

RESULTS OF SPRAY

Interesting Experiments with Apples in Ohio.

Best Record Was Obtained from Ben Davis Tree—No Rusting of Fruit Detected, and But a Small Per Cent. Were Wormy.

The Ohio agricultural experiment station last year made some interesting experiments with spraying on an apple orchard. A summary, as written by H. A. Gossard is in part, as follows:

The orchard used for experiment, the property of Mr. John A. Stokes, consisted of 12 acres located near Fremont, Sandusky county. Four acres consisted of trees 24 years old, four acres of trees 20 years old and four acres of trees 12 years old. The three orchards contained 534 trees in all. Besides these were about two acres of scattering trees of various ages, not included in the experiment, but the returns from which are included in the report.

Harvest of Two Rows of Ben Davis.

The varieties were chiefly Baldwin and Ben Davis, but Stark, wine-sap, Grimes golden, King, Belmont, Bellflower, Fameuse, Rome Beauty, Walbridge, pippins and a few others were represented. A few plots of Baldwin and Ben Davis were sprayed with Bordeaux mixture before blossoming, but most of the orchard received no treatment, except the spring application of lime-sulphur until after the petals fell. As soon as possible after the blossoms fell the entire orchard was given a heavy spraying with arsenate of lead alone, or with arsenate of lead combined with Bordeaux mixture. The Baldwins were several days advanced before spraying commenced, but the Ben Davis were exactly right. The spraying outfit consisted of a 1½ horsepower gasoline engine, a 150 gallon tank and tower, mounted on trucks, and was easily drawn by one strong horse. The bamboo poles were ten feet long, and one handled by the man on the tower being further lengthened by a light brass extension about three feet long. A "goose-neck" or crook was used at the end of each rod to give a downward angle to the nozzle, thus directing the spray straight into the calyx cups.

Wormy Apples in Basket.

The best record obtained was from a Ben Davis tree sprayed with Bordeaux before bloom, and once heavily with arsenate of lead soon after the bloom fell.

The Ben Davis tree were estimated to be less than two per cent. wormy, including the drops, and the picked harvest was only a fraction of one per cent. wormy. The Baldwins averaged one or two per cent. more wormy than the Ben Davis, owing to the fact that they were further advanced when sprayed. The third orchard of trees, 20 years old, which was sprayed about two weeks after the bloom fell, ran from three or four per cent. wormy on some trees, to 33 or 34 per cent. wormy on others. The only unsprayed check that was reserved yielded 42.5 per cent. wormy. So far as could be determined, the second and third sprayings with poison had so little effect in reducing the percentage of worminess that they did not pay for the cost of application.

Pea Lice.

Pea lice often become troublesome, especially if the crop is started in the spring. The best means of prevention is to use tobacco stems in the furrows at the time of planting. These may be purchased about $12 per ton, which is about their market value. Should the lice appear at any time on the plants the most effective treatment is to sprinkle the vines with tobacco dust.

Molasses Feeds.

The class of feeds that are fast gaining popularity among the dairy-men are the so-called molasses feeds, which are extremely palatable and are made from screenings from cereals and well-cured corn stover soaked in molasses.

GROW ROOT CROPS PROPERLY

Best Method of Weeding and Thinning Out Onions, Carrots, Beets, Parsnips and Salsify.

Onions, carrots, parsnips, beets and salsify must be kept free from weeds and grass from the time the plants push above the ground until the leaves are large enough to shade the soil, says the Baltimore American. The hand cultivator and weeder is the best implement for the work. Straddle the rows and cut away the young weeds as soon as the rows can be distinctly seen; follow with the cultivator in a few days, stirring the soil about one inch in depth. This frequent working will keep the ground mellow and at the same time kill the young weeds. The plants should be thinned as soon as they have made the fourth leaf. This may be done either by hand or hoe. Trunkers use the steel hoe. The two-inch steel hoe is mostly used by the gardeners, and the four-inch hoe by the truckers. Whatever method is followed, they should be thinned the proper distances, so they can make good sized roots. Onions, from seed, require careful weeding when plants are small, in the trucking districts the weeding and thinning of the root crops is mostly done by contract for so much per row. The early crops of beets should be thinned out to stand four inches apart in the row; the plants pulled out are set out in adjoining rows, first cutting off the tip of the root and cutting the leaves within half an inch of the crown. Beet plants have great vitality and will take root and start into growth a few days after planting. Those transplanted plants will make large bulbs, but not as large as those grown direct from seed.

Parsnips, carrots and salsify cannot be transplanted; these should be thinned out early so as to give the roots plenty of time to grow. The French and oxheart carrots will not need thinning, as they are pulled as soon as half grown.

BEST TIME FOR ALFALFA.

October and November Generally Regarded as Right Time for Planting; How to Do It.

The best time to sow alfalfa is October or November. The next best time is February 15 to March 31. It prefers a rich, sandy loam such as a fresh second bottom, or branch bottom (not at all wet, or a rich old garden, of a well "cow-penned" plot. As far as possible the soil should be clear of grass and weed seeds—for these are the bane of alfalfa. At least one season of culture in a clean crop like cotton or cow peas (plowed), or other plowed and hoed crop, is desirable. With three or four tons of rotten stable manure spread broadcast per acre and plowed in, it will not be found necessary to inoculate the soil, or the seed. Commencing now, an excellent preceding crop by way of preparation is cow peas.

In August or September prepare the land by deep and close plowing (put in the stable manure at this time) and harrowing. Just before sowing the seed scatter broadcast about 600 or 800 pounds of 10-4 and potash and harrow in. Then lay off rows 30 inches apart, strew 250 pounds per acre of 10-4 and 60 pounds of nitrate of soda, cover by throwing several light furrows on it, be cultivated. Every February you plant rutabagas, using about 15 pounds of seed per acre. That's about all. No thinning will be necessary. You may sow 20 pounds of seed broadcast if you wish, that being the method adopted in the west, but sowing in 30-inch rows, so that it may be cultivated, is preferable. Every February you should apply 600 to 800 pounds (and upward) per acre of the 10-4, and potash, and it would be well to apply five to ten bushels of air-slaked lime per acre about once in three years.

An Apple Orchard.

Now and then we hear of farmers with an apple orchard who cannot see that it will pay them to take good care of it. In one case a farmer sold apples enough from his orchard to buy ten good cows for his dairy, yet he cannot see that it would pay him to spray and prune the trees. There is some scale in this orchard and the fruit is usually wormy. Taken in hand now with oil and later with arsenic for the codling worm this orchard would give the easiest money on the farm. We would like to shake such men up and make them see the future, says the Rural New Yorker. The demand for good apples is sure to increase, while bearing trees are not keeping pace with this demand. Young trees are being planted, but many orchards are dying through lack of care. Do not under any circumstances neglect good apple trees. Stay by them with all the care you can master.

Tillage of Asparagus.

The question of the size of asparagus shoots is merely a matter of soil fertility and good tillage. Very few growers have reached the limit in the amount of manure that can be used profitably. Manure may be worked into the soil in the fall, early in the spring, or after the cutting season. The size of plants secured from the end of the cutting season until cold weather determines the size of shoots that will be cut the next spring.

RECIPE FOR BREAD

HINTS THAT MAY BE VALUABLE TO YOUNG HOUSEKEEPERS.

Of Course Older Matrons Are Also Their Own Way of Doing It, But They May Find Something New Here.

The following is a good recipe for bread, sift eight cups of flour into a basin, add three teaspoons of salt and three teaspoons of sugar. Beat one egg and add it to the flour, sugar and salt, and beat well. Add a cupful of warm water and leave in a warm place for five minutes. It is not to be used.

Pour it into the greased pan, add a little of the flour, and beat it with a clean cloth. Bake in a moderate oven for one hour. If it is too brown, take it out of the oven and place it in a warm place until it has expanded about twice its original size.

Turn out onto the baking sheet, knead for five minutes, and put it in a hot oven until ready.

To tell if the bread is cooked through, knock it sharply on the back; if it gives out a hollow sound, it is done. When baked in a loaf pan, allow to rise once more in the pans. Brush over with milk and bake in a hot oven until ready.

Butter the basin of the dough in, brush it over with melted butter, cover once more and allow to rise in a warm place until it has expanded about twice its original size.

Turn out onto the baking sheet, knead for five minutes, and put it in a hot oven until ready.

RECIPE FOR BREAD

HINTS THAT MAY BE VALUABLE TO YOUNG HOUSEKEEPERS

Of Course Older Mothers All Have Their Own Way of Doing It, But They May Find Something New Here.

The following is a good recipe for bread, sift eight cups of flour into a basin, add three teaspoons of salt and three teaspoons of sugar. Mix with yeast cake with one teaspoon of sugar and a cup of tepid water and leave in a warm place for a few minutes. It does not rise, the yeast is unfit to use.

Pour it into the center, stir into it a little of the flour, gradually add cups of warm water about 100 degrees F. If too hot, it will kill the yeast, which is a living vegetable substance and which must multiply to leaven the bread.

Mix thoroughly with a knife, cover with a clean cloth, place in a moderately warm place, about 75 degrees, out of draughts. Leave till the basin is covered with bubbles.

Work in three or four cups of flour, cutting and beating it with a knife, turn it out onto a floured board, knead it rapidly and firmly for about 15 minutes, adding two heaping tablespoons of lard during the kneading.

Butter the basin, lay the dough in it, brush it over with melted butter, cover once more and allow to rise in a warm place until it has expanded to about twice its original size.

Turn out onto the baking board, knead for five minutes, and cut the dough into three or four pieces. Make into neat loaves, place into buttered pans, allow to rise once more to fill the pans. Brush over with milk. Bake in a hot oven until ready.

To tell if the bread is cooked through, knock it sharply underneath, if it gives out a hollow sound, it is done. When baked, lay the loaves on their sides to let the steam escape. Do not put them in a very cold place, or the steam will condense and make the bread heavy.

The Home.

Living rooms should be placed in the best positions for sunshine and dry air.

Sleeping rooms should always have plenty of sunshine.

A bathroom should have one window at least.

Stairways and closets ought to have a means of lighting and ventilation.

The furnishing of a house is determined by fashion, looks and expense.

Just as disagreeable, irritable and helps breed disease.

Small cracks and angles are difficult to clean.

Though windows are not primarily for ventilation most houses are dependent on them for it.

Baked Bananas.

Pull down a section of skin from each banana, loosen the pulp from the skin, remove all coarse threads, that adhere to the pulp and return the pulp to the skin in its original position, lay the fruit thus prepared in an agate pan and bake in a hot oven until the skins are blackened and the pulp is softened.

Remove pulp from the skin without injury to shape, bend in a half circle and dispose in a serving dish, sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve with a rich cream sauce or a currant jelly sauce and serve with an entrée with broiled or roasted meat.

FOUND HIS SAVINGS

Emigrant's Lost Fortune Returned to Him by Cable.

Handbook Containing $800, Left on Counter in Cigar Store—Owner Notified of Recovery by Wireless.

New York.—There is an honest man in the South Ferry district, and on the morning of the 10th, he was told by a man named Kaste, a Finn, that he had found his savings for years, has not been able to recover but will be awaiting when he arrives in Stockholm, Sweden, his destination. He probably did not know of his loss until the day when the liner was well past the coast, and about that time H. Kaufman, the proprietor of a cigar store, was seeking the owner of a fat wallet containing goods displayed on top of the many cigar cases, and when he opened it the green notes almost fell out. There was but one mark of identification in the wallet, a card which bore the legend in pencil, "5 Water street, room 24." As soon as he saw the time to leave the store, Mr. Kaufman went to No. 5 Water street, where he found the Swedish emigrant home, and told of the circumstance to Pastor Lilla in charge. Kaste was found by the police to be the last occupant of room 24, and it was known that he departed that morning to go to Sweden by way of England on the Oceanic, and the liner steamed away at ten o'clock sharp. By this time it was three o'clock in the afternoon, and Mr. Kaufman and Mr. Kaufman went to Messrs. Nelson & Lundberg, ticket agents, who it was known had sold Kaste the ticket, to know what to do next.

The first thing that the brokers did was to dispatch a wireless message to C. H. Lancaster, purser of the Oceanic, to tell the steamer passengers that his money had been found and would be sent on by cable to Sweden. Then the money was cabled to the financial agents to Messrs. Nelson & Lundberg, who are

ROOSEVELT ON THE COWCATCHER.

On his journey up country by the Uganda railway from Mombasa, Mr. Roosevelt made frequent use of the "cowcatcher," in company with Lieut. Gov. Jackson and the traffic manager of the line.

Instructed to pay it over the moment Kaste appears.

Mr. Kaufman was congratulated again and again for his promptness in seeking the owner of the pocketbook, but said that it was not a new thing to him. "I have had a store here for about eight years," he said, "but before that I kept on West street, near the Pennsylvania railroad ferry. Once a farmer came in and bought something, tobacco I think, and after he went away I found a pocketbook with $500 lying on the counter. I ran out and at last located the man on the Pennsylvania ferryboat just about to leave the slip."

As near as he could remember the purchase made by the Finn was a fifty-cent pipe, and Mr. Kaufman said that there were dozens of customers that came in between the time the man left the wallet and the time that it was found.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Edited and Contributed by W. A. HORGAN, Springfield, Missouri.

Organization will increase the profits of farming.

Try to contract the habit of writing letters to your hired man in the legislature.

Don't expect too much of an organization to which you are contributing little or nothing yourself.

There may not be so much bluster, but there is more real business being done now by the Farmers' union than ever.

Try a big bunch of farmers in the legislature. If they don't do better than the lawyers have done, turn them out and try another bunch.

When one federal judge can turn down a law which it took congress nearly a year to digest and pass, and another one to nullify a law made by the state legislature, what are you going to do about it?

Every family that leaves the farm and goes to the city not only decreases the supply of farm products, but increases the demand and the price. This is one consolation for those who are satisfied to remain on the farm.

One of the greatest co-operative enterprises now being organized by the Farmers' union is a great warehouse company in Mississippi. It is capitalized at a million dollars and is located at Jackson, the state capital. It will sell cotton direct to the spinners.

Those who do not produce what they eat and wear take toll in some way from the products of those who do produce. As a very large portion of people are not farmers various schemes of exacting toll have been devised, some of which are no less than robbery.

There are those who think the farmers are not capable of sustaining an organization, and point to the alliance and grange as failures. The alliance and grange served as helps in the organization of the Farmers' union. They pointed out the pitfalls to be avoided.

Diversification of crops will decrease the acreage of cotton and reduce the supply. This will have the effect of increasing the price, so that the farmer who practices this method will not only save by raising his own living at home, but will receive as much more for what cotton he does raise.

ECONOMY AS TO AGRICULTURE

Dr. S. P. Ward Discusses Question as to Relation of Farming—Far Reaching Science.

The Mississippi Union Advocate publishes an article relating to the economy of farming, which is in part as follows:

While industry is the motive power, economy is the machinery of prosperity in every undertaking in life. Economy has been defined as "the growth of experience, example and forethought." Russia, said "Economy means saving money than it means spending money. It means the administration of a home; its stewardship; spending or saving, that is whether money or time, or anything else, to the best possible advantage."

Economy is a science and when applied to agriculture, it is the most far reaching and comprehensive of all the sciences. The banker, the merchant, the manufacturer, the mechanic, the lawyer, and the doctor all study and practice economy as a specialty, and develop it to the highest degree of perfection along special and definite lines. They become very accomplished and successful economists because they devote their talents and energies to the economics of a single industry. With the farmers it is different. The economy of agriculture covers such a wide range and embraces so many different lines of action and involves such various and conflicting conditions that it is difficult to study and practice all of them in successful detail. We once heard a very successful farmer say that the finest economy in the world was a judicious expenditure of money putting a hard-earned dollar where it would be most apt to come back and bring with it a handsome profit.

No science draws so heavily and so constantly upon the reasoning faculties as the economy of agriculture. Let the brightest and brainiest boy in the family be trained for agriculture. It requires more talent to farm successfully than to merchandise, practice law, or medicine, or teach or preach. Farming does not simply mean hard labor it means the capacity to master the intricate science of agricultural economy. That is what the Farmers' union is striving to do, its purpose is to educate the present and future generations in the economy of this most noble of all vocations in order that it may be able to hold its own in competition with all other lines of industry which are constantly in this progressive age growing more acute and vigorous and more formidable by reason of a diligent application of their energies to the economy of each line of competing industry.

The world is on the march, man is selfish in whatever enterprise we find him. We can expect nothing from the generosity of others, we must take care of ourselves. When we are strong we will be respected by the soldiers in the army of every other industry.

All this will take time, patience and perseverance. We cannot effect a revolution in one year. All great and permanent reformations are of slow growth and it is fortunate that they are. It is prolonged effort of mind and body that brings mental, moral and physical vigor to the generations of men.

Close of Paul's Second Journey

Study School Lesson for August 1, 1909

Specialty Arranged for This Paper

LESSON TEXT—Acts 13-14. Memory verses: 1. "The world is full of trouble, but he of good cheer, I have overcome the world."—John 16:33.

TIME—From late A. D. 35 to early in A. D. 45. Paul was at Corinth a year and six months.

PLACE—Corinth, the political capital of Greece, the metropolis of commerce.

Suggestion and Practical Thought.

1. Corinth, the Vanity Fair of the Roman empire. Corinth, the center of government, commerce and business, as Athens was of learning, literature and art, was situated on the isthmus which joins the great divisions of Greece. It attracted people from all over the world on account of its delightful climate. It contained a population of 400,000, of the most heterogeneous nature possible—a population of Greek adventurers and Roman bourgeois, with a tainting of Phoenicians—a mass of Jews, exiles, philosophers, merchants, sailors, freedmen, slaves, tradespeople, hucksters, and agents of every form of vice—a colony without aristocracy without tradition, without well-established citizens. Hence it suffered from democratic license and turbulence.

2. Paul's Labors Among the Corinthians—Vs. 2-6. 1. His Opportunity. This great city with its worldliness, and absorption in pleasure, its vigorous and varied life, its infinite needs, gave Paul a great opportunity. And yet the difficulties were so immense, the obstacles so insurmountable that it is no wonder that Paul came to them feeling his weakness, and in fear and trembling (1 Co. 2:3) and needed the vision of cheer (v. 9).

2. His Four Friends—Paul had a strong, social nature and felt the value of friends. He found a certain Jew, Paul always began with the Jews, as the best possible opening for his work. He was a tentmaker named Aquila, a man of some wealth, "born in Pontus" but doing business in Rome. His wife was named Priscilla, and is supposed to have been a Gentile.

3. In addition to these friends, Silas and Timothy came from Macedonia. They had been left at Berea, when Paul was compelled to leave (Acts 17:13-15). Timothy had been sent to Thessalonica (1 Thes. 3:6), and from Philippians (4:15) we judge that he had visited Philippi also. Paul's friendly heart was cheered by their presence.

The Circumstance in Which Paul Worked—1. He earned his own living by working at his trade. He was thus a living sermon, as it was Jewish law that every boy be taught a trade of some kind for his support.

2. He attended (v. 4) the synagogue every Sabbath and reasoned with the Jews and Greek proselytes, determined to know nothing among them save Jesus Christ and him crucified (1 Cor. 2:2).

3. He met bitter opposition from his countrymen (v. 6). They opposed themselves. The intensity and success of Paul's labors kindled an intensity of opposition. The result was that the Jews (v. 66) "opposed themselves, and blasphemed." That was a sign that the Gospel was becoming a power in the community.

4. Paul's Work Among the Gentiles—Vs. 7-12. Paul's Preaching Place was in the house of a man named Ty. "Justus, one that worshipped God," a Gentile believer in the one true God, but not a Jew, "whose house joined hard to the synagogue." Here would be a perpetual invitation to the Jews, while at the same time the Gentiles would feel welcome to go there.

During this period Paul wrote his two letters to the Thessalonians.

Renewed Opposition. This was both natural and providential. It was time for Paul to go on with his wider mission which no one could carry on as well as he. But his work seemed so necessary where he was, and his vision had bidden him to stay, how long he did not know, that it was necessary that some unmistakable guidance should make his duty clear and plain.

18. After continuing for some time longer at his work, Paul went to Cenchrea, the port of Corinth, where he made a vow and then sailed for Caesarea, stopping at Ephesus on his way. Thence he went up to Jerusalem where only the vow could be consummated. Moreover he wished to be at the great feast of the Jews, probably the Passover. (v. 21.)

The Vow. The shaving of the head indicates a vow of separation like that of the Nazirite prescribed in Numbers 6, in a later modified form. The man under the Nazirite vow was to drink no wine or strong drink, and to let no razor pass over his head or face. The hair was shorn at the beginning and end of the period, so as to present that growth in the interval. At the end of the time during which the vow lasted, his hair was shaved.

As Rendall suggests, Paul may have wished to show that although he had broken with the synagogue at Corinth, yet he was a true Jew and a faithful disciple of Moses, by paying homage to the law and submitting to its rules. This would also be shown by his attendance at the Passover.

Thus closes the second missionary journey.

Make a brief review of these years:

1. By the map, tracing out the course of Paul's travels. 2. By cities and countries. 3. By persons. 4. By events. 5. By a summary of the results in the progress of Christianity.

GIVES HOME TO GIRLS

Jewelry Turns Over House to Homeless Employees.

Massachusetts Manufacturer Moved to Action by Pleadings of Woman Who is Devoting Life to Cause of Working Women.

Boston, Mass.—Moved by the earnest pleadings of a woman who is devoting her life to the cause of working girls, a Back Bay jewelry manufacturer has decided to give up his luxuriously furnished residence for the use of those girls who have no home of their own.

If his experiment proves successful, other manufacturers will either adopt the same plan or will contribute generously to a fund for the erection of a home for the accommodation of all working girls in the community who live at a long distance from their work and cannot go home daily.

Miss Sweeney of Attleboro is the woman who has taken up this cause, and her residence at 9 School street will be occupied by 14 working girls early in the fall.

This home will be in charge of the Methodist Episcopal church of Attleboro, but it will be conducted along international lines and every attempt will be made to secure all possible comforts for girls employed in Attleboro who have their homes elsewhere.

The opening of Mr. Sweeney's residence as a home for working girls will represent the fruition of the plans of Miss Margaret Eckley, deaconess of the Methodist Episcopal church. For the last five years has endeavored in every way to help the working girls of Attleboro. She has gathered statistics which show that many hundreds of girls employed in the great jewelry shops of Attleboro come from the provinces, and it is her constant effort to make these girls as comfortable as possible under the circumstances.

Miss Eckley has succeeded in raising sufficient money to guarantee that the home for working girls will be conducted for at least one year. It is planned to make the home self-supporting, and each of the girls will pay for her share.

The undertaking is backed financially by prominent Attleboro manufacturers and who are greatly interested in the plan and who are willing to do their full share in making it a success. The present home is merely an experiment. If it is successful others will be established, and there is a good possibility of a big home being erected and conducted on Young Women's Christian association principles.

"I would like it understood at the outset," said Miss Eckley, "that our home will be only for girls of good moral character. Our efforts are to encourage them to lead Christian lives, and for that purpose we want to provide them with a home where they will have every comfort and will be subject only to uplifting influences."

SCHOOLTEACHERS PLAY BALL

Put on Bloomers and Try to Qualify as Instructors in Athletics.

Columbia, Mo.—Seventeen bloomer-clad school teachers are playing baseball and football with male teachers on the Missouri university's campus to learn the games. Their task is not of their own liking exactly, but they've got to do it to hold their jobs in these strenuous times of education.

"I despise to wear those things," said a school ma'am on the shady side of 40, "but I have to teach this stuff next year, and if I hold my position I will have to succeed. I'll be glad when the summer school is out."

The squad, which perishes so freely on Rollins field every other afternoon, consists of superintendents, principals and high school teachers, who have charge of athletics in the smaller high schools of the state. Where a school district has not enough money to hire a coach, one of the teachers is called upon to direct the school sports. In many instances the teacher is not prepared for such work, but when it falls to his lot he must try or resign.

Record Price for Violin.

London.—At the rooms of Patrick and Simpson, Leicester square, a valuable collection of violins, violas, violoncellos and bows realized a total sum of $16,000.

Among the items was $4,625 for a violin by Antonius Stradivarius, the highest price ever paid for a violin by the famous maker.

Another large price was $900 for a violin by Domenico Montagnana.

Lower Rio Grande Texans Drink Much Goat's Milk Because It is Healthier.

Cuevitas, Tex.—Drink plenty of goat's milk and you will enjoy good health and a long life. This is the chief rule of health known to the Mexican sages of the lower Rio Grande border of Texas and among the natives of many other localities on the other side of the international border stream.

Goat dairies are scattered all through this region. Notwithstanding the fact that the land extending back from the river is devoted largely to cattle grazing, much cows are almost unknown among the Mexicans. They obtain their milk supply almost exclusively from goats. In doing this they are not guided altogether by the alleged healthfulness of the milk of the latter animal.

There is not much work or expense involved in raising and looking after a herd of goats. A few well trained dogs will do the work of as many men. In many instances the dogs perform all the work of herding the goats, taking their charges out to the grazing grounds in the morning, remaining with them faithfully all day, and driving them into their corral when evening comes on.

In the homes of the Mexicans, at the primitive restaurants, and in the open air camps goat milk may be had for the asking by the visitor or traveler. Mexican children are almost brought up on the beverage. It forms an important part of their daily diet from the days of early childhood until they die of old age or from other causes.

More Chicks Than Eggs.

Muncie, Ind.—How can 14 chickens appear from a setting of 13 eggs? That is a matter that is puzzling the freshmen of No. 1 station. The freshmen have a menagerie that includes two monkeys and a few other creatures, and recently a farmer contributed a bantam rooster and hen to the growing collection. The hen recently began sitting on 13 eggs. In due time the chicks began to peck through the shells, and when all were counted it was found that there was one more than the 13. Only the poorly established theory of twins from a double yoke egg will account for this strange condition.

To Restore Steamer Line.

New Orleans, La.—The Austro-American steamship line will re-establish a service from New Orleans to Mexico and other Mediterranean points, it is announced here. Monthly sailings are to be begun the latter part of July.

The Legislature convened in special session on Tuesday, the Governor's message, in which he dealt largely with the prohibition question, school matters, pensions, railroad legislation and expenditures, was read, and the session proceeded at once to business.

The fight to break up the fee system, whereby many county officers make enormous salaries, and as a result of which the ill-informed are often imposed upon, was begun in the house Tuesday, when Mr. Glover of Jefferson presented a bill looking to amendment to the constitution providing that counties may put officers on salary when it is thought best.

The Greater Birmingham bill will be presented Thursday in both houses. Representative King of Jefferson is confident that it will pass, many assurances of support having been received.

The new counties fight was sprung in a bill to establish Pettus county with Bessemer as the county seat. Representative Ragdale, though quite ill and weak, was present to enter the bill.

Lieut. Gov. Henry B. Gray is against the commission form of government for cities, and proposes to fight it for all it is worth.

Gov. Comer gives no intimation of resigning his office, and it is all conjecture about his running for the senate.

The first bale of cotton of the present season reached Savannah from Albany, Ga., Tuesday. It was sold at public auction for 20 cents a pound and graded full middling. It will be shipped to Bremen.

 ALL DAY SINGING.
 A song was sung and Bro. Letman Jones prayed. The singing began. C. B. Norrell, 20 minutes; Prof. J. L. Gore, 20 minutes. A quartet was sung by Messrs. Littleton and Norrell and Misses Collins and Dupree. W. O. Rich, 20 minutes. Then one of those good old talks by Bro. Parrish, on the advancement of music.
 Adjourn for dinner. A bountiful repast was spread and all invited to partake.
 Returned to the house for singing. John Armstrong, 20 minutes; J. L. Harris, 20 minutes; C. B. Norrell, 20 minutes. There were short talks by Profs. Gore, Hall and Bro. Jones. Misses Collins, Dupree and Mims were the organists. The song, "Shall I meet you up there," was sung, and Bro. Willie Wilson, after a few appropriate words of appreciation and thanks, dismissed the congregation.

 Editor Banner—Here I come again for a short chat. Sorry to say that the Sunday school at Ardella has gone down, with so many bright and intelligent people, who could make it one of success.
 Miss Ida Clay is visiting her sister at Tuscaloosa.
 Mrs. Vergie Kelly and Mrs. Rena King paid a short visit to Blocton recently, and reported a nice time.
 The singing at Mr. J. P. Clay's Saturday night was enjoyed by all who were present.
 Mrs. Carl Kelly spent the night at Mr. C. J. King's Saturday night and reports a grand time. I would be glad to read a piece from Lawley. With best wishes to the Banner and its many readers.

Mr. Nebo
 I earnestly request all the members of Mt. Nebo church to meet there on next Tuesday morning, Aug. 3, for the purpose of clearing off the church yard and graveyard. Why do we neglect our church? It ought to be the best kept house in the entire community. So let us lay aside our work and come on that day with our axes, grabbing hoes and brush brooms and give it a general cleaning off. All help from outsiders will be appreciated.

 Well Grandpa Gramhopper, you keep on at the Lawley people about writing. You must have a certain person over there that you are wanting to hear from. If you will tell their name and your name maybe they will write to you.
 Well I must say something in regard to our Sunday school; we have 55 on roll and average about forty every Sunday, but would have more if the old people would come and bring the little children.

UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA
 The University of Alabama summer school for teachers concluded its regular course Friday, July 16, the three days following being devoted to the examinations for teachers' certificates, conducted by the State Board of examiners.
 The session of the summer school this year has been highly successful and the educational authorities of the State are gratified at the results. It is noteworthy that a comparatively small number of the summer school students are standing the examinations for certificates as many already are licensed, and of those standing the examinations many are candidates for first and first grade certificates.

This space for Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothing--the best Clothes on earth

YOU'RE going to have, this coming Fall, a chance to buy and wear the Best Clothes in the World; the kind of clothes that well-dressed men are always glad to buy.

HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX CLOTHES

are to be the features of our line this coming season; and we want every man of you to know it early, and keep it in mind for the time you next think of buying clothes.

We are making a specialty of these goods because we want you to get the greatest possible value for your money.

You want value; that's the only real way to economize in clothes; and value means the sort of quality Hart, Schaffner & Marx put into their goods. They're all wool, in every thread of fabrics, they represent the products of the best weavers in the world, and they offer a greater variety for your selection than you'll find in any half-dozen other make put together.

But all-wool, vitally important as it is to your interest as a wearer, is not the only thing we know about Hart, Schaffner & Marx quality. These clothes are designed right; the whole question of fit depends on that; and it's important to you to know that you can be correctly fitted without trouble here.

They're correct in style, of course, and perfectly tailored; these makers know their business well enough not to spoil good all-wool fabrics, fine linings and trimmings by designing and tailoring that are wrong.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx are the best clothes makers in the world; and every dollar of value they put into the goods is there for you to get out in the wear.

We are discontinuing our other CLOTHING at a sacrifice price to make room for the Hart, Schaffner & Marx line, while they last, 50 cents on the dollar from the original price will be what we ask; better get into one quick.

GENTLEMEN!

We are going to sell every piece of Clothing in this house belonging to us, at a sacrifice price, if possible. If you want to buy two suits for the price of one, now is your time to take advantage of the opportunity.

Kodol For Dyspepsia and Indigestion

If you Suffer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gas on
the Stomach, Belching, Sour Stomach, Heart-burn,
etc., a little Kodol will Relieve you almost Instantly

Kodol supplies the same digestive
juices that are found in a healthy
stomach. Being a liquid, it starts
digestion at once.

Kodol not only digests your food,
but helps you enjoy every mouthful
you eat.

You need a sufficient amount of
good, wholesome food to maintain
strength and health.

But, this food must be digested
thoroughly, otherwise the pains of indigestion and dyspepsia are the result.

When your stomach cannot do its
work properly, take something to help your stomach. Kodol is the only thing that will give the stomach complete rest.

Why? Because Kodol does the same work as a strong stomach, and
does it in a natural way.

So, don't neglect your stomach.
Don't become a chronic dyspeptic.
Keep your stomach healthy and
strong by taking a little Kodol.
You don't have to take Kodol all
the time. You only take it when you need it.

Kodol is perfectly harmless.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and
he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one family. The large bottle contains 24 times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Attention, Please!

About twelve months ago we advertised
that we would give each customer who purchased a good buggy whip a ticket which would entitle the holder to one chance to win a buggy free of cost; and a few days after this sale began, two important members of our business were stricken with fever, consequently interest in the sale of whips was lost and the proposition went dead, and only a few good whips on this offer have been sold; but now we propose to dispose of the buggy before we go out of business, and beginning Thursday, July 29th, we will give each cash purchaser of ANY GOODS amounting to One Dollar, or for each dollar spent with us a ticket allowing a chance to get A $60 BUGGY FREE.
So if you need anything in our line it will cost you nothing to try for this buggy. Watch our advertisement and in a short time you will see who the fortunate customer is.

Tickets will not last long; ask for yours when you trade.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pope McFarling on the morning of July 17th and took from their midst their sweet little darling baby. It was one year old. Her illness lasted but a few days. The sad message of death clasped her little spirit in his arms and bore it back to heaven whence it came. Yet there remaining with us still the promise of meeting her in the sweet bye and bye. The angel will teach her to watch and wait for the coming of mamma and papa. She will greet them here no

SHRIEKS, SHOCKS AND THRILLS

BY CHARLES W. ELLWOOD

THE business of devising new methods of thrilling American amusements by means of shrieks, shocks and thrills is making amusement park owners of the United States hump themselves. The Americanophile has become a somewhat calloused article. It has become more difficult year by year to make the pleasure-seekers shriek with joy at the thrills which chase themselves up and down their spinal cords.

But visit any amusement park and you will hear the same line of laughs, maybe not as loud, but just as full of fun and vigor as those half a decade ago.

The cause is to be found in the ever-busy brains of the inventors of fun devices. There are new ones every year. A new way of producing the thrills, a new rhythm to the motion of the device—in fact anything different from the year previous goes with the pleasure-seeker.

But the man who can evolve an entirely new ride or stationary device which actually begets excitement, has his fortune made.

And let it be said that the key to public satisfaction is the ticket office, into which the common people pour their dimes. As long as the fun-hunters continue to pour checks the park owners consider their investment a paying one. When the flood of silver drops off, then it is time to open negotiations for a new set of thrills.

In many American amusement parks the owners seem to have been stung by the bee of "death defiance." They evidently believe that the average citizen, male and female alike, enjoys flirting with the hereafter with a margin of about one inch.

Wise ones among the promoters say, however, that they must give their patrons the dips, jolts and shocks, with the omission of the vista through which heaven appears. All amusement devices are safe, park managers declare, simply because they are thoroughly inspected by city authorities before being tried out by the public.

In the big cities the scenic railway this summer still holds the biggest share of the currency-producing thrills. Then there are the numerous coasters, each with more or less perilous drops, which tend to excite howls and yells from the manly sex and timid little screams from the fair ones.

In the west this season the "human roulette" and the steeplechase have attracted some attention. The "human roulette" is all it signifies. It is built on the merry-go-round principle, except that instead of sitting upon horses, cows, etc., the patron simply rests upon an inclined surface and is whirled through the various stages of malediction, if the individual is inclined that way.

The steeplechase consists of a horseback ride over the bumps, the wooden steeds speeding along for half a mile or so on two rails. There are scores of other new rides this year, all built upon the principle that the more jolts and bumps the human system receives the oftener its owner will return to deposit tribute.

London, Paris, and Europe in general, is paying its tribute this season to "the witching waves." The passengers are installed in little boats, and are promised all the enjoyment of an ocean ride with little of disadvantage. By the exercise of considerable ingenuity a great surface of imitation sea produces a constantly undulating motion exactly like the waves of the sea on a quiet day. The wavy motion is imparted by a flexible sheet-steel flooring, operated by invisible mechanics. The passengers themselves steer the craft, and therein lies additional fascination.

Coney Island, New York City's prided amusement resort, this year has more than ever to attract. The westerner who believes that this year's visit to the fun factories by the sea will not be able to show him anything new this summer, is given another guess.

Coney has about twice as many trick devices with which to catch the visitor and make him furnish fun for the multitude as it ever had before.

There is a musical saw mill—yes, indeed, a real live saw mill with the most attractive sawyers that ever pushed a log on a truck to a whizzing circular saw. The sawyers are pretty girls, who operate the music apparatus as they work.

And then there is the electric girl, who gives a shock every time you shake hands with her. She floats in the air, and greets you in the most unsuspected places in her palatial abode. There are no end of trick chairs, which shoot upward, sidewise, downward—and, in fact, most any way.

And there, as big as life, is "Teddy" in Africa, shooting lions of all kinds of crosses between highbrows and lowbrows in the animal kingdom.

The new form is a series of punching bags ranging in height from two feet to six feet, and all labeled "Kick Me." You get a prize if you can kick all the bags, but the chances are you will be too tired to complete the job.

There is a human menagerie, where interesting couples are entered in to take a seat, and then, lo! the seat suddenly becomes a cage; out of which there is no exit. Well, what the gazing public do to the couple one has to go and see in order to appreciate.

A falling statue, with a chair a safe distance away, is another scare-producing stunt to try one's nerves. The statue falls over on you while you are seated in the chair.

Possibly the best fun in one park is the stunt of walking the spar, which is 25 feet long, at the end of which is a spring which releases a huge jumping-jack six feet tall. Shrieks from the girls? Well!

There are the Newfangleds, baby and all, and there is a firecracker maze, which will get anybody going. But the musical floor is the real fun. Every step one takes plays a note. And it's a breeze to see the startled facial expressions of the innocent who walk onto this floor.

There is a confetti punching bag, too, which smothered you in confetti, and no end of trick seats. The human Niagara is the great mirth producer for the audience, but it certainly does feaze the victim. Going up this human Niagara is great sport, and you think that at the top it is all over; but not so. You are hurled down again, and it isn't particular in the method of landing you back on terra firma.

The stir about is another good starter for screams and roars of laughter. You start at the top of the building and come down a slide, and whirl to beat the dervishes about three times before you land at the bottom.

The bumpy mule is still bumpy, and still do hundreds try to reach his ears. The shoo-fly is another screaming affair, with a slide for life as a part of the excitement.

"The girl in the well" is a great fun producer. Many think she is the real thing, and try to get her, whereupon they find it is all a joke, and wish they hadn't noticed her.

An automobile course of a mile, where one can go as fast as he likes, is one of the features of many American parks. Scorchers of any kind can go the absolute limit on this track without fear of arrest.

There is no end of electrically charged chairs, and the wise person is he who doesn't try to sit down anywhere, at any time.

PRESIDENT'S ALMA MATERS

William Howard Taft in succeeding his great and good friend Theodore Roosevelt as chief executive of the nation, is the first son of Old Eli to obtain the honor. The record for training presidents is divided evenly between the first and second colleges established on American soil, Harvard, and William and Mary, that venerable Virginia seat of learning, founded at Williamsburg, Va., in 1693. Harvard bestowed degrees on the two Adamses, on Theodore Roosevelt and trained Rutherford B. Hayes in the law. William and Mary was the alma mater of Thomas Jefferson, of James Monroe and of John Tyler and two other presidents, James Madison and Zachary Taylor, were trained under William and Mary tutors. Madison was graduated with high honors at Princeton in 1769, and Zachary Taylor, the son of a Virginia gentleman, was about to enter William and Mary when the war fever seized him and he gave up books for the sword.

Andrew Jackson could claim no alma mater except a Salisbury, N. C., law office, where he read and mastered some legal knowledge with the aid of politicians with whom he chummed. Martin Van Buren's sole book training was obtained in the Kinderhook, N. Y., academy and the law office of W. P. Van Ness. William Henry Harrison studied at Hampden and Sidney college, and intended to take up medicine for a profession. He had made his medical studies and was about to take his degree when he saw a better chance of preferment by the sword than by the prescription blank. His grandson, Benjamin Harrison, was graduated from Union college, Oxford, Ohio, and studied law in the Cincinnati law college. James K. Polk was graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1808, and studied law in the private office of Felix Grundy. Millard Fillmore, after having finished his course at the public schools of his native county, Cayuga, N. Y., studied law in the Buffalo School of Law. Franklin Pierce was graduated from Bowdoin college in 1824 and studied law in Portsmouth, N. H., with Levi Woodbury as his master. James Buchanan was graduated from Dickinson college, Carlisle, Pa., and studied law in the office of James Hopkins in Lancaster, Pa.

Abraham Lincoln's most painstaking biographers say that he got all told about a year's schooling from men whose knowledge was limited. Andrew Johnson could claim no alma mater, even the humblest. Grant's biographers give all credit to West Point for his brilliant career, and his attendance at provincial public schools at Point Pleasant is counted for naught. Rutherford B. Hayes was graduated from Fremont academy, at Norwalk, and from Kenyon college in 1842. He was valedictorian of his class, and went to Harvard in 1843 and completed his law course with signal honors in 1845. Garfield always gave his mother credit for being his best teacher. While he worked so laboriously on the farm he and his mother read together every book they could lay hands on. He went to the Geauga seminary in 1849, to the Eclectic Institute at Hiram, Ohio, and to Williams college, Massachusetts. Chester A. Arthur was graduated from Union college when he was barely 18, and after some private study became principal of the academy at North Pownal, Vt. While there he studied law.

Grover Cleveland's scholastic career is familiar to every one, in view of the widely published biographies since his demise. McKinley attended Union seminary, in Mahoning county, Ohio, and Alleghany college, at Meadville, Pa. Theodore Roosevelt was graduated from Harvard in 1876. College and university men predominate largely in the list of presidents.

James Bryce, ambassador from Great Britain, has noted that while this is the greatest commercial and industrially developed country on earth, no business man has yet been able to reach the goal of the presidency. "Politics is the great game in America," Mr. Bryce sagely observes, "and the study of politics must be mastered thoroughly before any other knowledge. Millions come for the business man and the captain of industry, but the great prize, chief magistracy, has never been bestowed on the man who has not served the one party or the other with a whole heart and undivided attention."

Time to Change Subject.

The Courier Journal, of Philadelphia, recently ordered a new well-known Louisville woman known as "Sally" to write a "thinking" Her daughter was waiting a young man in the porch and the mother was sitting at the fence talking to the neighbor next door. In the midst of the conversation a baby a little over a year old and it was trying to walk. The mother shouldn't let it walk alone, she said, until it's a little better. The daughter, walk when she was that age, and it made her look like a young man began to talk a little about the weather.

Next Best.

A certain young minister in Philadelphia, recently ordered a new well-known Louisville woman known as "Sally" to write a "thinking" Her daughter was waiting a young man in the porch and the mother was sitting at the fence talking to the neighbor next door. In the midst of the conversation a baby a little over a year old and it was trying to walk. The mother shouldn't let it walk alone, she said, until it's a little better. The daughter, walk when she was that age, and it made her look like a young man began to talk a little about the weather.

Of a Famous Human Food.

The story of the great discovery or inventions is always of interest. An active brain worker who himself hampered by lack of strength and vigor and who had to out the plans and execute them, how to conduct, was one of the most famous foods and the most famous human system. In the world, before he could carry out his plans, he had to find a food that would help him along and refresh his mental strength.

He knew that a food which would brain and nerve, and that would be a mere fat made of sugar and starch. He knew that a food which would average man does not get the desired results. He knew that the soft gray matter of the brain and nerve centers is made of albumen and phosphate of lime, and that from food. Therefore, he started to solve the problem.

Careful and extensive experiments evolved Grape-Nuts, the new human food. It contains the brain and building food elements in a form for easy digestion.

The result of eating Grape-Nuts daily is easily seen in a marked increase in the activity of the brain and nervous system, making it a pleasure for one to carry out his duties without fatigue or nervousness. Grape-Nuts food is in no way a stimulant but is simply food which renews and replaces the daily wear of brain and nerves.

Its flavor is charming and it is fully and thoroughly cooked in a factory it is served instantly in cream.

The signature of the brain worker, C. W. Post, is to be seen on each genuine package of Grape-Nuts. Look in papers for the famous book, "The Road to Well-Being." There's a reason.

Cravat with Double Ends.

If you have a strip of brown silk, or of any material, and a little silk in a contrasting color, such as scarlet or blue, make one of the cravats with double ends. These are cut like a man's string tie, but with a difference. A perfectly plain piece of silk is used to go around the neck, but where it meets the front each end branches off into two parts, giving four ends in all. These ends are all lined with silk of a contrasting color. The effect when worn is very pretty. The cravat must be at least a yard in length.

To Make

THE LIVELY STABLE DOG.

Some Ways in Which He Differs From the Fashionable Pets.

The common lively stable dog is totally unlike the "powder puff" or "toots and skittles" dog, but his disposition is infinitely better. To lie on a cushion and growl and snap at the hand that would caress it is considered the height of folly in the lively stable variety.

The lively stable dog approaches you ingratiatingly and offers you a dirty paw to shake. After you have shaken it he solemnly gives you the other. Then he crawls up in your lap and licks you on the mouth.

The lively stable canine is a most industrious digger of holes. The theory is that he is going to lie down in the hole he digs, but he does not do such thing. He goes and lies down right in the middle of the sidewalk, where people will have to step over him. He will never get out of anybody's way. He even lies down in the middle of the street and tries to make carts, wagons and automobiles avoid him.

He doesn't enjoy as large a vocabulary as the powder puff or skittles dog. A phrase like "Doesn't that make my little baby?" would mean him to death. His advantages have not been such as to acquaint him with such highfalutin talk, but he does know a few simple phrases like "Git to blazes out of here, you darned pest!" He understands that perfectly. —Puck.

The American Youth.

If the truth were told most young American men are not especially interesting. They do not keep up their reading. They have a national oddity when it comes to music, to art, to literature, nor do many of them take any of these things at all seriously. The young among them are not good conversationalists. Our cleverest men are monologists pure and simple. They let us hear of their own life. They are born with a gift of gab. They are inevitable story tellers. None of this is conversation, and women like conversation, like its courtesies, which at least pretend a little interest when their man comes in the picture. Knowledge of people and things outside our own country prizes more than one bubble about "young men." —Anna A. Rogers, Atlanta.

Discipline!

From the class room occupied by the roughest boys in the Sunday school came a great uproar. A secretary in the next room went to investigate. Complete silence followed the opening of the class room door.

"Have you a teacher?"
"No."
"Do you want one?"
"No."
"Then be quiet or you'll get one."
Result, comparative peace. —Manchester Guardian.

Looking Out For Grandma.

They are considerate youngsters in Nottingham, as most people know, says London Tit-Bits. A little boy whose grandmother had just died wrote the following letter, which he duly posted:
"Dear Angela—We have sent you grandma. Please give her a harp to play, as she is short winded and can't blow a trumpet."

Teething children have more or less diarrhoea, which can be controlled by giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. All that is necessary is to give the prescribed dose after each operation of the bowels more than natural and then castor oil to cleanse the system. It is safe and sure. Sold by all druggists.

Epilepsy, Fits

Convulsions, or Spasms and St. Vitus' Dance are Nervous Diseases. Most cases can be cured by strengthening and building up the nervous system. To do this a nerve medicine is needed. Dr. Miles' Nerve will be found efficacious and satisfactory. It has cured many cases of these diseases and we believe it will cure you. We can give you names of many who have been cured through its use. Write for advice.

"My son John had epilepsy for years, and after having him treated by specialists for over 2 years he still continued to have spells. I had almost given up in despair, but knowing the virtue of Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for sick headache, I concluded to try the Nerve. During June, 1904, I gave him a teaspoonful three times a day, then in July I gave it as directed, and he has not had a spell since August 25, 1904, and has taken no medicine since Jan. 27. I am writing the case just as it is hoping it will induce others to try it."
W. R. ALLISON, Mooreville, N. C.
Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nerve, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills relieve Headache, Neuralgia and all Pains.

Women Inclined To Constipation

Great Care Should Be Taken Not to Use Violent Cathartics

Women, owing to their peculiar functions, are more or less liable to constipation, and many of them owe their continued ill health to the pill habit. A well known physician says the majority of cases of foul breath, bad complexion, disordered stomach, sick headache and female weakness to constipation and the constant use of violent cathartics to overcome it.

We believe women will be glad to learn of a safe reliable bowel and stomach remedy that is pleasant to take and that the first few doses will certainly produce natural daily movements without pain or gripe and in a short time establish a permanent cure. It is so effective it has cured cases of 60 years' standing and yet so mild and safe thousands of mothers give it to their babies. Jennie Greenham, Nashville, Tenn., says: "I suffered almost death with torpid liver and indigestion and Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gave me quick relief." Sister M. Berchmans, of Mt. St. Mary's Academy, Oklahoma City, says: "We have found Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin satisfactory as a gentle laxative and stomach tonic."

Mrs. Myrtle Mather, Chicago, says: "My daughter was troubled since birth with constipation and sick headache. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin cured her." Mrs. W. M. Powers, New Philadelphia, Ohio, says: "It is the best remedy for constipation and stomach trouble I have ever used." Mrs. R. H. Brown, Addington, Okla., says it gave her prompt relief from constipation and torpid liver. Mrs. Isabella Wheeler, Preetown, Ind., says: "Twenty-three years ago I was taken with stomach trouble. Three years ago I had become so weak I could hardly walk. I took Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and today am as well as ever." Druggists sell it at 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

We are glad to send a free sample to anyone who has not used it and will give it a fair trial. Address: Syrup Pepsin Co., 208 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Our Languages.

What a lot of languages we talk even if we talk only English! I was recalled by a man a cross the lunch counter with a language about a cup of tea and coffee and that it was quite palatable. When another man told about gold, which is another language. And then the woman's language flows these columns. "The Countess" — wore a sea green cloth skirt with a bolero of the same color and a white maroon stole, and a black taffeta bow garnished her huge hat of burnt hazel straw. It is a fine example of women's slang. But to the man it means nothing—but expense. —London Outlook.

Notice to Non-Resident.

State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Whereas, Spigener & Jones as plaintiffs have obtained an attachment out of this Court, issued on the 21st day of July, 1909, against the estate of J. A. Harps Manufacturing Company, as defendant, which attachment has been levied on the following described property of the defendant: Three dozen Old Cans; and whereas it appears that the said J. A. Harps Manufacturing Company, defendant as aforesaid, is a non-resident of the State of Alabama, and resides in Greenville, Ohio;
Now, therefore, the said J. A. Harps Manufacturing Company, wherever it may reside, is hereby notified of said attachment and the levy thereof aforesaid.
E. H. FOSHEE, Justice of the Peace.

Probate Notice.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.
In the Probate Court, July 21st, 1909.
In the matter of the application of P. C. Deadwilder to prove the last Will and Testament of R. E. K. Hicks, deceased.
To Louis Hicks, Jasper Hicks, Mrs. Beatrice Ward and Mrs. Martha Herlihy, non-residents of the State of Alabama, and to whom it may concern:
You are hereby notified that on the 21st day of July, 1909, P. C. Deadwilder filed her petition in the Probate Court of Chilton County, Alabama, together with an instrument in writing purporting to be the last Will and Testament of R. E. K. Hicks, deceased, late an inhabitant of said county, in which petition she said that P. C. Deadwilder, plaintiff, said instrument in writing may be probated and admitted to record in said Court as the true last Will and Testament of the said R. E. K. Hicks, deceased, and that the 23rd day of August, 1909 has been set and appointed as the day for the hearing of said petition and the testimony in proof of said instrument as such Will, when you may appear and contest the same if you see proper so to do.

Witness my hand,
L. H. REYNOLDS, Judge of Probate.

Non-Resident Notice.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Chancery Court, Seventh District North Eastern Division.
In Vacation, Term 1909.
Paul Shelton, Complainant, vs. Gusie Shelton, Defendant.
In this cause it is made to appear to the Register, by the affidavit, on file, of Wm. M. Adams, Solicitor for complainant, that the defendant, Gusie Shelton, is a non-resident of the State of Alabama, and is a resident of the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois, and far enough in the belief of said agent, the defendant, Gusie Shelton, is over the age of twenty-one years.

It is therefore ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Banner, a newspaper published in Clanton, Ala., once a week for four consecutive weeks requiring her, the said Gusie Shelton, to answer, plead or demur to the bill of complaint in the above cause on or before the 15th day of September, 1909, and failing to do within thirty days after the service of this summons a decree pro confesso may be taken against her in said cause.

Witness my hand, this 21st day of July, 1909.
Wm. M. ADAMS, Register in Chancery
Wm. M. Adams, Clanton, Ala., Solicitor for Complainant.

NOISY WEDDINGS.

Solertious Prelude to Marriages in Old Rathenborg.

They love music in Rathenborg, and it is an incident of most festive, public and private. In front of the Rathenborg, when wedding formalities are going on inside, hired musicians loudly drum and trumpet, whereas the people come running from all directions, for a wedding is not carried on with the quietness which would please the sky and retiring. Marriage is a sacrament neither lightly nor secretly entered into.

On the night before the wedding it is considered de rigueur to hurl old pots and pans against the house of the bride with boisterous good wishes, and without these delicate attentions a bride would really feel slighted. Her two best friends wait upon her during the din and give her a wreath and a veil and some verses composed in her honor, and that the verses are curiously like those offered to brides in the past, except for necessary change of name, is not at all a drawback. Weddings are usually on Tuesdays, and they take from 7 o'clock in the morning till 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon, including the time at the town hall. At the home there will likely be a play given in which are set forth the supposed follies of the bride and groom, and some friend, masquerading as a gypsy, will come in and give whatever kind of prophecy best accords with his wife. —Robert Shackleton in Harper's Magazine.

Homemade Ink.

A good ink is made in this way: Bruise half a pound of nutgalls and stand in one quart of water, shaking it now and then, for about four hours. Then add three ounces and a half of gum arabic and when it is quite dissolved three ounces of coppers. To prevent the ink from becoming moldy when kept add three or four drops of cresote. This gives a pleasant-like smell to the ink and does not corrode the pens as chloride of mercury would do.

Preparing For a Siege.

Educational Rallyes.

Arrangements have been made by a committee from the Board of Trustees of Thorsby Institute in co-operation with local committees in the various sections of Chilton County, hereafter noted, for holding a series of educational rallyes during the first week of August. Good speakers of more than local reputation have been provided, and it is hoped that each meeting will have a full attendance of citizens in each locality. Note the time and place.

Tuesday, Aug. 3d, Isabella Academy; Wednesday, Aug. 4th, Macedonia church; Thursday, Aug. 5th, Union Grove church; Friday, Aug. 6th, Chestnut Creek church; Saturday, Aug. 7th, Thorsby Institute. Speaking will begin at 10 o'clock, a.m. and continue through the day, with an intermission for a basket dinner.

S. E. NORTON, Chm. of Com.

Soreness of the muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or injury, is quickly relieved by the first application of Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment is equally valuable for muscular rheumatism and always affords quick relief. Sold by all druggists.

Educational Rally which was held at this place on Tuesday evening, was a great success. The lowering skies no longer many away, the house was filled, and in spite of the rain there was no abatement of interest manifested. Figures were presented very simply starting in the value of a thorough education in all its phases. Statistics showed that the time spent in the average boy or girl's life a full course of twelve years worth $10 to the student every day spent in school, and if they continue through years college course. Speakers were Rev. Frank Adams, D. O., of Atlanta, Ga., Evans, Butler and Norton, Henson, and Crump. Their talks were practical, thoroughly enjoyed by the young and old. Our boys are manifesting a deep interest in education and many of the ambitious to attend the best available. The least of the enjoyment occasion was furnished by the ladies of this section in excellent dinner provided in new annex to our school. Other rallies to be held as advertised will no doubt be worthy of attendance who can possibly get to. We had a fine one. Let's work go on. —CITIZEN.

Listen to what's going on in this town and surrounding community. First, I must say something about the sick folks. No one confined to bed except Mrs. Mitten, and she is improving. Mrs. Cubie Miller, two miles away, is very sick. The doctor thinks she has typhoid fever, but hope he is mistaken.

We farmers are about through work, that is, tilling the soil, and I think the harvesting part will be light this time, and I fear the flour barrel and meat box will be light also, and you know, as a rule, when bread and meat gets scarce it will cause trouble in the camps. But, by the way, I hope we will make more than we are expecting, but as our fertilizer is exhausted, we can't possibly make more than about one-half of a crop. I, for one, have bought $75 worth of fertilizer and I can't see where I can get any returns from it. The farmers are then pecked this time on fertilizer. The merchant is the man who will get the cream, that is if the cream rises. You know it is hard to get blood out of a turnip, but listen: we farmers must quit bringing our living home in paper sacks, make more meat and bread at home. We can't live and pay 15 cents for meat. I haven't eat any meat in so long I wouldn't know a piece if I was to meet it in the road. We must make a change or we will hit the ceiling. I, for one, am going to change my mode of farming, use more fertilizer and reduce the acreage. So enough for farming this time.

Mrs. J. A. P. Baxley is visiting sons and daughters in Sylacauga and Birmingham, and will be away for a month. We will be glad when she returns home.

Mrs. Ruby Knox, of Ennis, Texas, is visiting relatives at this place.

Miss Lilla Thornton has just returned from Mississippi on a visit to relatives.

Misses Mamie Ellis and Hermie Rotenberry of Troy, are visiting Mr. Ellis at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Speer of Chicago are visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Gray.

Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Maddox are expected to return from Elmore county soon; they have been to see his mother and father.

Messrs. J. A. P. Baxley and J. B. Barron have gone to see relatives down close to Deatsville this week.

Mr. J. B. Barron will start for home in Nocatee, Fla., in a few days.

Well, when we farmers get through work we can sit around and keep the merchant company. It seems like they are having a good time this summer—nothing to do. So I must quit for this time by saying that if any of our readers need a good home in country or town, call on or write me, will sell cheap. I close by wishing the Banner success.

Respectfully,
P. J. BAXLEY.

CURED HAY FEVER AND SUMMER COLD
A. S. Nussbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed only to aggravate it. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar. It quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." Upchurch Drug Co.

FIRST TIME TRUTH WAS TOLD

Liverman Refused to Assess Damages Against His Reckless But Honest Customer.

In a small southern Indiana town is a liverman who has ideas of his own about conducting his business. For example:

Not long ago an Indianapolis drummer, known for his ability to get over ground in a hurry, had one of his Henry's rigs with which he drove to a neighboring town. Part of the way was over a corduroy road. The drummer's business detained him longer than he expected, and when he finally got back in the buggy for the return trip he found that he would have to have some to catch a train.

He made the lively outfit scamper along the road at a lively pace. Finally, when he struck the corduroy road, he felt something snap, and knew that he had broken a spring on the buggy. He was so busy having to make the train that he did not have time to get the spring fixed. When he reached the barn he jumped out and said:

"That's a spring. How much would it cost to break it?" Gus asked.

"That's like the chicken," answered the liverman, "it's a matter of how much you want to pay for it."

"Well, that's the first time I ever had a spring broke that way. It's new, and it's breakin' them. All I ever had broke before was broken down easy over a smooth road."—Indianapolis News.

Hereditary hair color is discussed by Gertrude and Charles Davenport. In the American Naturalist.

As regards the nature of the coloring, the authors consider that there are probably two main types of pigment in human hair, one a reddish-yellow, which finds its highest development in bright red, and the other a sepia-brown, the intensity of which ranges from light yellow to dark brown and black. As the result of a combined study of both eye-color and hair-color, the writers finally arrive at the conclusion that two parents with clear blue eyes and yellow or flaxen straight hair can have children only of the same type, no matter what the grandparental characteristics were. That dark-eyed and haired, curly-haired parents may have children like themselves, but also of the less developed condition. In the latter case, what the proportions of each type will be, for a fairly large family, is predictable by a study of the immediate ancestry.

Silence and Rest Cure.

Dr. Weir Mitchell is very successful in his cure of women suffering with nervous diseases, and a part of his rest cure is silence. One of the values of silence, he says, is that during that period a woman may not tell her troubles, for talking of one's troubles, contrary to the generally accepted idea of its being comforting, is deleterious to the general constitution. It reduces the vital force and weakens the person who pours her grief into a friend's ear tenfold more than would the effort of suppressing her grief. He does not allow her friends to visit the patient because that would mean that they would be told of her troubles. Oriental women, who do not talk as much as Americans, are healthier and their tempers are more soothing.

HEROICS of YOUNG, BERNADOU and OTHERS

By Edward B. Clark

WASHINGTON—A perusal of the Navy Register in the department offices discloses the fact that Capt. Lucien Young has been advanced twice in rank for conspicuous gallantry in time of danger.

When Lucien Young of the United States navy reported at Annapolis for examination for entrance to the naval academy the examining board looked upon a youthful Samoan. He was as fine a physical specimen of boyhood as the old salts ever had seen. He lifted the two men in Annapolis were able to do in his physical examination. When it came to the study of the Spanish language, he veraciously related that Young was a "rope."

Young started on his errand and fell in with the gunboats Hornet, Lieut. Helm, and Wompatuck. Lieut. Jungen. The little squadron picked up a prize in a vessel loaded with provisions and intended for the Spaniards and then the three vessels entered the Azura Pass.

Young discovered a gunboat at anchor near a block house. The Wompatuck was unable because of her draft to go in with the Hornet and the Wompatuck. The guns of the two American vessels put the Spanish gunboat out of business after a lively engagement, in which nearly a thousand Spanish soldiers on shore had a hand. The Spaniards were not more than 400 yards away from the American boats and they literally swept the decks with bullets.

Young and Helm worked away in full view of the Spanish sharpshooters and escaped death by sheer luck. It was not long after the Spanish gunboat had been destroyed that Young, who

WHY PEOPLE SUFFER.

Too often the kidneys are the cause and the sufferer is not aware of it. Sick kidneys bring backache and side pains, indigestion and stomach disorders, headaches, tired feeling, urinary troubles. Don't let these things trouble you. Iwama's Kidney Pills cure the cause. Mrs. N. E. Graves, Williams, Iowa, says: "I suffered from kidney trouble for years. The secretions were disordered. There were pains in my back and swellings of the ankles. Often I had anothering spasm. I had to be helped about. Iwama's Kidney Pills cured me five years ago and I have been well since. They saved my life."

Address of communications to THE BANNER, Clanton, Ala.

An interested audience gathered at the court house Wednesday afternoon at the educational rally. The speakers were earnest men, thoroughly acquainted with their subject. Rev. E. W. Butler, of Tusculum, Rev. George Eaves, of Birmingham, Dr. Frank E. Jenkins, of New York, and Prof. N. W. Henson, of New York, all made stirring addresses.

Bowman is not to get the new county it so ardently desires. Before the joint session of the house and senate committees Tuesday friends of Bowman plead for the establishment of the new county of Pettus, on the ground that Jefferson is now too big to allow its citizens to secure that justice they should have because of delays in the courts. They argued against big counties on the theory that they are an injustice to the rest of the State.

The Clanton County Fair Association was organized on Wednesday, with a capital stock of $10,000 paid in. Books are open for subscriptions. The house of directors will meet Wednesday, August 15, for important business. A committee was appointed to prepare the premium list. W. H. Conway was elected president, and J. Rice, vice-president.

TO THE PEOPLE OF CHILTON COUNTY

Thursday Institute is a Christian school of standard high school grade, with the seventh and eighth grades preparatory to the high school department.

Its faculty is composed of well trained teachers from the best institutions North and South, and are from different denominations, thus making it an ecumenical while decidedly Christian. Its Principal is a West Virginian, a graduate of the Peabody College for teachers in Nashville, Tenn., and a Baptist in church membership. Its Associate Principal is from Atlanta, Ga., a graduate of Mount Holyoke College, Massachusetts, and a Congregationalist in church membership.

Other churches and strong colleges are represented on the faculty, making it truly interdenominational. It is supported on its financial side mainly by Congregationalists, who founded some many of the leading universities and colleges of this country, including Harvard and Yale Universities. Congregationalists never establish sectarian schools, and Congregationalism is never taught in their institutions except in their theological seminaries.

Thursday Institute has one sole purpose: To give young people a chance for a Christian education. Its standard of education and character is high. It means to do thorough work and make an appeal to those only who desire a thorough and not a superficial training.

The institution will again open its doors about the middle of September. It asks of the people of Chilton county and surrounding counties careful investigation to see if it does not bring a great opportunity to their young people. It desires to be of the greatest possible use to them and to the intellectual, moral and spiritual interests of the region in which it is located. It makes no money and desires to make none. Its tuition covers only a small part of the expenses of the school, while the balance is contributed by people who believe that promoting Christian education is a good way to invest money.

Its teachers are mainly local men, the presidents of the Board being, I believe, the only exception. Its standards are high. Its purpose is Christian.

In the name of the Trustees and by their vote, I beseech for Thursday Institute your hearty co-operation in carrying out its purpose.

Yours for Christian education,
FRANK E. JENKINS,
Pres. of Board of Trustees.
Atlanta, Ga., July 26, 1909.

Clanton, July 26, 1909

The above article meets with my hearty approval. I am very glad Dr. Jenkins has explained the situation of the Thursday Institute. Since I have been on the Board of Trustees I have become convinced with the prospects of the above school, and I am sure when the people of this county understand the situation they will patronize the school.

We have a great opportunity to build a high school at Thursday with but little cost to the people of the county, and if this society is willing to put up money to help to build a high school we certainly ought to patronize it.

I hope every teacher in the county will use their influence to get scholars for this school when they are through with the primary schools. This school is not to be built up in competition with any other school in the county, but it is to prepare girls and boys for college, and at a very small cost. I think we have a worthy and competent set of teachers this year as any college, and I think our boys and girls can get as good training here as they can anywhere.

Respectfully,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

MEMORIAL DAY.

A striking picture of a typical Memorial Day parade, produced by a New York artist, is shown here. There is nothing that brings a truer sense of patriotism than the sight of parading veterans. The rapidly diminishing number of brave men who fought for the causes in which they believed, are an object of veneration, North or South, as they march to do honor to the memory of dead comrades, and this has been strikingly brought out in the faces of the bystanders in the picture.

It shows a procession of veterans passing a statue of Abraham Lincoln. In the background the war-civilian marches proudly at the head of the company, a veteran in the first line carries as tribute a wreath in one hand; his other sleeve is unrolled. Further back are the tattered battle flags, relics of bitter strife.

The statue of Lincoln shown in the picture is the famous one by Augustus St. Gaudens, and is the masterpiece of America's greatest sculptor. All surrounding architectural treatment is the work of Stanford White. The soldiers, the statue and the spectators form a splendid study.

The original was made for Hart, Schaffner & Marx.

This space for Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothing—the best Clothes on earth

YOU'RE going to have, this coming Fall, a chance to buy and wear the Best Clothes in the World; the kind of clothes that well-dressed men are always glad to buy.

HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX CLOTHES

are to be the features of our line this coming season; and we want every man of you to know it early, and keep it in mind for the time you next think of buying clothes.

We are making a specialty of these goods because we want you to get the greatest possible value for your money.

You want value; that's the only real way to economize in clothes; and value means the sort of quality Hart, Schaffner & Marx put into their goods. They're all wool, in every thread of fabric, they represent the products of the best weavers in the world, and they offer a greater variety for your selection than you'll find in any half-dozen other makes put together.

But all-wool, while important as it is to your interest as a wearer, is not the only thing we know about Hart, Schaffner & Marx quality. These clothes are designed right; the whole question of fit depends on that; and the important to you to know that you can be correctly fitted without trouble here.

They're correct in style, of course, and perfectly tailored; these makers know their business well enough not to spoil good all-wool fabrics, fine linings and trimmings by designing and tailoring that are wrong.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx are the best clothes makers in the world; and every dollar of value they put into the goods is there for you to get out of it.

We are discontinuing our other CLOTHING at a sacrifice price to make room for the Hart, Schaffner & Marx line, while they last, so cents on the dollar from the original price will be what we ask; better get into one quick.

GENTLEMEN!

We are going to sell every Suit of Clothing in this house belonging to our stock, if possible. If you want to buy a suit for the price of one, now is your time to take advantage of the opportunity.

HATS.

You know the HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX hat like a book. They're all better than made. There are many hats in the store we are going to sell you for the price of one, now is your time to take advantage of the opportunity.

SEEDS.

Better Not Get
Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say, that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and get your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 24 times as much as the 50c bottle.

Attention, Please!

About twelve months ago we advertised that we would give each customer who purchased a good buggy whip a ticket which would entitle the holder to one chance to win a buggy free of cost; and a few days after this sale began, two important members of our business were stricken with fever, consequently interest in the sale of whips was lost and the proposition went dead, and only a few good whips on this offer have been sold; but now we propose to dispose of the buggy before we go out of business, and beginning Thursday, July 29th, we will give each cash purchaser of ANY GOODS amounting to One Dollar, or for each dollar spent with us, a ticket allowing a chance to get A $60 BUGGY FREE.

So if you need anything in our line it will cost you nothing to try for this buggy. Watch our advertisement and in a short time you will see who the fortunate customer is.

Tickets will not last long; ask for yours when you trade.

ROBERT ADAM

He Created a New Style in English Architecture.

Robert Adam (1728-92) was to English architecture what Rembrandt was to that of Italy. He was an architect to the king, beloved at court, a member of parliament, and it was said of him that he "could not help admiring all that he touched." These of the English people who dwell in Adam houses prize them as rare jewels.

Adam introduced into English architecture a lightness, delicacy of touch and charm of proportion which had never before possessed and which gave his name to that splendid period of architecture the style of which lasted over a century. Every thing in a house, from the panel in a ceiling to the vase and gilt wood tripod and lamp-stands for lights, from the mantelpiece of the chimney to a window blind, Adam designed himself.

Adam got his rich, beautiful and distinctive style from the ruins of the Roman Empire, at Pompeii. As a result to his ideas he converted the lines of his figures in relief upon walls, columns and doorways according to the style of the statues found at Pompeii. His style was the result of his beautiful. He also adopted Pompeian styles of decoration.

Adam was artist as well as architect, and his walls, ceilings and interior decorations are masterpieces of his genius. He was an architect. He employed no less personages than Raphael, Canova and Zucchi to paint every of the panels and medallions let into his ceilings, and it was his habit to have experts come to match the pictures overhead and underneath with the relief from the ceiling. The key note of Adam's style is "movement," combined with perfect artistic fitness, and it is peculiar for its grace and refinement. —New York Tribune.

Best Stomach Remedy Free

It is an old saying that if the stomach is sound the whole body is safe, because so much depends upon the proper working of the stomach. Many persons find themselves with a disorder of the stomach which produces dyspepsia or a peculiar state of biliousness.

It may come from both on each trouble and constipation you are on the way to a very serious disease. From just such conditions come appendicitis, rheumatism, to the doctor and from trial doctors, because the waste matter that should have been expelled from the system through the bowels has found its way into the blood and vitiated it. What is needed at this point is not simply a violent cathartic, but a remedy which will gently but surely cleanse the system, and which will also build up the system.

It is a common and interesting sight to see a school of weakfish shortly moving in near the surface with the early tide. Suddenly one sees the smooth surface all in commotion. A very minnow leaps frantically in all directions, looking like flashes of diamonds, then instantly disappears to certain death. At such times anglers should be ready with their best trimmed snags, lines or floating forty feet away, baited with live shrimps.

Side affects bottom feeders, though not to such a large extent. Fishing from piers and docks an hour before and after flood is most likely to give good results. On wrecks much depends on the kind of fish. The last of the ebb and at low tide is considered the worst condition for general fishing. In the open sea, on the banks, tidal influence counts for little or nothing. Any tide is as good as another. —Ontario Magazine.

Notice to Non-Resident.

State of Alabama, Chilton County. Whereas, Sulgower & Jones, as plaintiffs, have obtained an attachment out of the Court, issued on the 21st day of July, 1909, against the estate of J. A. Harp, Manufacturing Company, as defendant, which attachment has been levied on the following described property of the defendant: Three (3) 2 1/2 A. Cans, and which the said J. A. Harp Manufacturing Company, defendant, is a non-resident of the state of Alabama, and resides in Greenville, South Carolina.

Now, therefore, the said J. A. Harp Manufacturing Company, wherever it may reside, is hereby notified of said attachment and the levy thereon aforesaid. E. H. FOSTER, Justice of the Peace.

Probate Notice

The State of Alabama, Chilton County. In the Probate Court, July 21st, 1909. In the matter of the application of P. C. to administer to the last Will and Testament of R. E. R. Hicks, deceased.

To Louis Hicks, Jasper Hicks, Mrs. Beatrice Ward and Mrs. Martha Hicks, non-residents of the State of Alabama, and to whom it may concern.

You are hereby notified that on the 21st day of July, 1909, P. C. Deaderhead filed for petition in the Probate Court of Chilton County, Alabama, together with an instrument in writing purporting to be the last Will and Testament of R. E. Hicks, deceased, in which petition she said P. C. Deaderhead, party that said instrument in writing may be probated as the true last Will and Testament of the said R. E. Hicks, deceased, and that the 21st day of August, 1909, has been set and appointed as the day for the hearing of said petition and the testimony in proof of said instrument and such Will, when you may appear and contest the same if you see proper so to do.

Witness my hand, L. H. RAYMOND, Judge of Probate.

Non-Resident Notice.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County. Chancery Court, Seventh District North Eastern Division.

Paul Shilton, Complainant, vs. Gusie Shilton, Defendant.

In this case it is made to appear to the Register by the affidavit, on file, of Wm. M. Adams, Solicitor for complainant, that the defendant, Gusie Shilton, is a non-resident of the State of Alabama and is a native of Illinois, and that she is the wife of said Paul Shilton, and that the defendant, Gusie Shilton, is over the age of twenty-one years.

It is therefore ordered by the Register that publication be made in the Banner, a newspaper published in Chilton, Ala., once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring her, the said Gusie Shilton, to answer, plead or demur to the bill of complaint in the above cause on or before the 15th day of September, 1909, and failing so to do within thirty days after the service of this summons a decree pro confesso may be taken against her in said cause.

Witness my hand, this 21st day of July, 1909. H. M. SIMPSON, Register in Chancery. Wm. M. Adams, Chilton, Ala., Solicitor for Complainant.

TIDES AND FISHING.

Fish Are More Active in Search For Food on the Flood Tide.

The most essential thing to an angler, next to tackle and bait, is a tide table, because all marine fishes except the flatfish—flounder and fluke—are captured more readily at a certain tide. The main cause for such is that fish are more active in their search for food generally on the flood tide.

Vast schools of little fishes move close into shore on the incoming tide, working their way into the smaller bays and inlets, especially near the edge of swamps, where they feed on the small crustaceans, shrimps and little mollusks that can effectively hide from their larger enemies when the tide is low and the large fish are unable to get at them in very shallow waters.

It is a common and interesting sight to see a school of weakfish shortly moving in near the surface with the early tide. Suddenly one sees the smooth surface all in commotion. A very minnow leaps frantically in all directions, looking like flashes of diamonds, then instantly disappears to certain death. At such times anglers should be ready with their best trimmed snags, lines or floating forty feet away, baited with live shrimps.

Its Hind Legs Are a Most Formidable Pair of Weapons.

The kangaroo seems poorly provided by nature with offensive weapons. His powers of biting are not formidable, and his fore paws are so weak as to seem almost rudimentary members of little use. His hind legs are muscular and strong, but are apparently of use only to assist flight from his enemies. On these hind legs is found, however, a most formidable weapon in the shape of a long claw as hard as steel and sharp as a chisel—a terrible to dogs as the scythe of the ancients were to their enemies. When run down the kangaroo, placing a tree behind him to protect his rear, will seize in his fore paws such indecent dogs as rush up to him and holding them firmly, disembowel them with a sweep of his sickle-like claws.

Even the hunters themselves thus caught in the viscid grip of an "old man" kangaroo of the larger breeds have sometimes suffered in like manner and have now and then taken their own turn at being hunted as the enraged animals turned upon them and attacked their horses with blind ferocity. —St. James' Gazette.

The Colossus of Rhodes.

The gigantic Colossus of Rhodes was one of the seven wonders of the world. It was erected in honor of the sun by Charies of Lindus, a disciple of Pythagoras, and was thrown down by an earthquake about 224 B. C.

The figure stood upon two moles, a leg extended on each side of the harbor. A winding staircase led to the top of the figure, from out of the eyes of which were visible the coast of Syria and the ships sailing on the coast of Egypt. The colossal were the peculiar characteristic of eastern art and were of common occurrence, many of them being over sixty feet in height. The most celebrated is the statue of Memnon, on the plains of Thebes, described by the historian Strabo.

Granulated Sore Eyed by a Cured.

"For twenty years I suffered from a bad case of granulated sore eyes," says Martin Boyd, of Henrietta, Ky. "In February, 1908, a gentleman asked me to try Chamberlain's Salve. I bought one box and used about two-thirds of it and my eyes have not given me any trouble since." This salve is for sale by all druggists.

MEXICANS' STAFF OF LIFE.

The Tortilla Is Their Bread—Frijoles Are Boiled Beans.

The tortilla is the ancient Indian bread of Mexico. Its only constituent is Indian corn (maize), which the women soak in lye-water until the kernels are at the point of bursting, then wash thoroughly until it is free from lye, when they grind it by rubbing it on a large block of stone, especially cut for the purpose, with a smaller stone which they hold in their hands.

The operation looks very much like rubbing clothes on a washboard and is a laborious and tedious one. The fine render the corn dough adhesive, like wheat flour dough, and it is easily parted between the hands into cakes the size and shape of an ordinary grid. These are added, though no salt or leaven is added, fresh tortillas are exceedingly palatable.

The one other food mainstay is frijoles—ordinary beans. They are boiled to a mush and with a liberal quantity of lard are warmed as required in a flat earthen dish that answers for a frying pan. The very poor people do not always have the luxury of frijoles and when they do have them cannot always afford the lard—New York Sun.

TEXAS SOIL NEEDS

Chiefly for Phosphoric Acid and for Nitrogen.

Address of State Chemist Fraps Before the American Chemical Society on "The Needs of Texas Soils for Fertilizers."

At the fortieth general meeting of the American Chemical Society, held at Detroit, Mich., recently, a paper prepared by Dr. George S. Fraps, state chemist of Texas, was read, which is, in part, as follows:

For several years past the Texas experiment station has been making soil analyses, pot tests, co-operative fertilizer experiments, and field tests in order to study the needs of Texas soils for fertilizers. This article does not purpose to go into detail into any of these studies, but to discuss in a general way some of the conclusions of the work.

Texas soils may be divided into four sectional groups—the East Texas section, the central black belt, the gulf coast soils, and the arid soils.

The soils of East Texas, as a general rule, are sandy, or sandy loam soils, deficient in phosphoric acid and often in nitrogen, low in lime but not acid. Their prevailing needs seem to be phosphoric acid and nitrogen. These soils are well adapted to truck crops, and respond well to fertilizers. It is in this section of the state that most of the fertilizers are used.

Potash does not appear very important for many of these soils. Fertilizers are extensively used for corn and cotton, which supply only nitrogen and phosphoric acid, and even for potatoes, tomatoes, and other truck crops, fertilizers are used which contain no more potash than is present in the cotton seed meal used in composting them.

According to our pot experiments, very few Texas soils are deficient in potash, and many of them give up surprisingly large quantities of potash. Indeed, we are having trouble in securing, for experimental purposes, soils deficient in potash. On the other hand, soils deficient in nitrogen or phosphoric acid can be secured without difficulty.

The soils of the Central black belt are prevalently black calcareous soils, very productive and durable, but some of them are wearing out. These soils, as a general rule, are well supplied with potash and nitrogen, but many are low in phosphoric acid, while others are well supplied. Some of these black soils respond to fertilizers, others do not respond at all.

The gulf coast soils are, as a rule, low-lying flat soils, not well drained. They are low in lime, but not acid, fairly well supplied in nitrogen and potash, but low in phosphoric acid. Rice does not do well. Lime, ashes or Thomas phosphate tends to produce too much straw, so that the rice falls. Rice soils, as a rule, respond well to phosphoric acid.

The soils of the arid section are, as a rule, well supplied with plant food. The chief problems with these soils are water and alkali, though alkali has, as yet, not given a great deal of trouble.

What has been said must be taken in a general way. There are, of course, types of soils of different characteristics within the areas mentioned. The chief needs of Texas soils are for phosphoric acid and for nitrogen.

Value of Cowpeas.

The cowpea is a large, bean-like plant that produces a large amount of forage. It is valuable for a green food or for plowing under for green manure. It has been used successfully for improving worn-out soils, especially those that are light and sandy in texture. Its greatest advantage for this purpose is its ability to gather nitrogen from the air and mineral elements from the subsoil. When the crop is plowed under these are left near the surface, where they will be available to shallow-rooted crops and those which cannot get nitrogen from the air. It has been little used for hay in the north because it cannot be readily dried in that climate. It makes a good green feed for milch cows between August 15 and September 15 or it may be preserved in the silo by mixing with corn fodder. For green manuring the seed should be sown broadcast in late June or early July, at the rate of 1½ bushels per acre. It is especially valuable for growing in young orchards. When wanted for fodder it should be sown in early June in drills 2½ feet apart, at the rate of one bushel seed per acre.

Killing the Beetles.

The asparagus beetle is a troublesome pest, not easy to control, says Rural New Yorker. Chickens are fond of them, and will rid garden beds of the adults, but, of course, can be of little benefit in large fields. Clean cutting, especially in ridge culture, keeps them well under control in spring, but the eggs or larvae do considerable harm later.

Our Orchards.

The orchard products of the United States are reported by the agricultural department to be worth about $90,000,000 a year. They would bring twice this sum if half the number of the hundred varieties of destructive insects which prey upon them could be destroyed.

SOILING PLASTER IN CLOVER

After the First Crop is Harvested Sow Pure, Fine, Ground Flour Condition.

After the first crop of clover is cut, cured and put into the barn, if you have a good stand, sow 200 pounds of plaster to the acre. There are several kinds of plaster on the market; the Nova Scotia plaster or gypsum is said to be much the best. Plaster that is mixed with marble dust, slate and ground shells has little value. Plaster is not a direct plant food, but it acts indirectly in drawing moisture to the plants and making available the plant food already in the soil. It is especially valuable to spread over all the leguminous plants when a few inches in height. The way to test its value is to sow marked strips over the clover or other leguminous plants. We have found that it was a great help in increasing the growth of the clovered crop, when sown on newly seeded red and white clover—and over ambrosia sugar-cane intended for midsummer green feed.

A thin dressing of fine manure, scraped up from the cow yards, and where manure piles stood during the winter, spread over the clover sod early this month, will increase the yield of the second crop, also make more and heavier seed. If clover seed is wanted the field should not be pastured at any time, as the tramping of the cattle compacts the soil. A loose mellow soil is needed to absorb an abundance of rain to nourish the clover roots when the seed commences to form in head.

Water Supply for Poultry

Illustration and Directions for Arranging Barrel So Chickens May Quench Thirst.

Take a good, strong barrel, a, and place it at the end of the house, either inside or out. Run a pipe, b, from this through the house or yards. Here one or two holes in the pipe in each apartment and put in a wooden plug, c. These plugs are adjusted so that the water will slowly drip into the troughs or pens, d, which are set under them. The barrel can be filled with a team from time to time, and one filling will last several days. The end of the pipe is stopped with a fine plug that may be withdrawn when necessary to empty the barrel, should the water get foul.

FOR GOOD BUTTER MAKING.

Stir the cream every day. Stop churning when the butter granulates if you want to wash out all the buttermilk.

The best butter is made from the best cream; but the best cream comes from the best milk.

Butter washed with water that has been boiled and cooled keeps much better than that washed with unboiled water.

When the conditions for the cream rising are unfavorable put less milk into the pans or cans; the cream will rise quicker to the top.

Do not allow smoking near the dairy; nothing absorbs tobacco smoke more quickly than milk, and butter tainted with tobacco smoke is an abomination.

Fine butter has a clear, nutty flavor, a nice color (not too high), a firm, waxy texture, free from moisture, and a grain which, when broken, shows like cast steel.

An overloaded churn is sometimes the cause of slow coming of the butter. If the amount of cream is too large for the size of the churn, turning it over and over will not agitate the cream sufficiently. The churn should be less than half full, and should not be turned too fast to allow the cream to drop from side to side of the churn.

Training Tomato Plants.

It is worth while to train a few tomato plants to single stems. To do this pinch out all lateral shoots. Tie the plants to stakes or a trellis of about three wires. Single stem training possesses several advantages and is practiced to a large extent in the Marietta trucking district of Ohio. It is necessary to tie the plants at three or four points to give the proper support.

The arguments in favor of single-stem training are that the bulk of the crop ripens early; there is greater uniformity in size and shape, a smaller percentage of decayed specimens, cleaner fruit, easier picking, and spraying and cultivation may be continued later in the season if necessary. The system is rather expensive, but the acreage grown by this method is gradually increasing.

The Dairy Farmer.

No farm worker has a steadier income than the dairy farmer. The work requires some close application, but not more than many another business. By having competent help the proprietor has plenty of time off when it pleases him.

And then think of the fertility that comes to the owner's soil! Not only does his bank account grow plenteous, but the vital energy of his land waves strong and powerful. No more independent citizen lives than the dairy farmer.

WANTED TO BE LED AROUND

Elderly Lady Mistaken Outrigger Hand of Unfortunate For Preferred Assistance.

There is a story of an elderly lady standing on the curb by a crowded crossing in the height of the summer, too nervous to venture off the pavement. She was anxious to get to her destination on the other side of the thoroughfare, but hesitated to cross the journey. Presently, she perceived a stranger offering his hand. She caught it and they both plunged into the traffic. A motor bus all but ran over them; a taxicab whizzed past, and the lady, who had been so nervous, was now a laughing matter. She caught the hand of a hansom driver, and the hansom driver, who had been so nervous, was now a laughing matter. She caught the hand of a hansom driver, and the hansom driver, who had been so nervous, was now a laughing matter.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear! What a wonderful I'm alive!" What a wonderful I'm alive!" What a wonderful I'm alive!"

"That's just what I am," replied the poor fellow, "and I am not my hand for some one to lead me across."—Harry Furness, in Strand.

Guide's Old Guide

The guide rode often at the head of the column, and we found him full of information about the country. We began also to listen for a new domestic disclosure every time we approached an Indian village. He was the most married of any man I ever saw, for in every tribe he had a wife. This was the reference made by Mr. Elizabeth Custer, widow of Gen. George A. Custer, in her book, "The Saddle," to Felician Falls, who died a few days ago, and who was one of the first settlers of the vast region now embracing the states of North and South Dakota. In the spring of 1873, when Gen. Custer and the Seventh cavalry arrived at Yankton Falls he acted as guide for the command until it reached the upper country, and made its headquarters at Fort Abraham Lincoln. Falls was one of the conspicuous early-day characters of Dakota. While acting as guide for the Custer expedition he became intimately acquainted with Gen. Custer. At this time Falls had been living in the Indian country over twenty years. Yet he was fond of saying that Gen. Custer's knowledge of Indians outside of speaking their language was better than his—Sioux Falls (S. D.) Letter in Omaha Bee.

Perhaps from Mars.

Adam and Eve were not natives of this world. Oh, no! They were of "foreign birth," but when in the full bloom of manhood and womanhood were transplanted to the earth from another planet. They came at the head of a race comprised of ideal types and that was millions of years ago. How the pioneers of the human race ever were carried through space to the genesis of the latest theory on the origin of man, Dr. Robert Green of Maywood, does not state. He said his knowledge had been revealed to him in a vision.

"Adam and Eve and their companions," he said, "came in groups about 100,000 in all, and were every one of them adults, spirit entities. Their religion was the golden rule."

Dr. Greer also asserted these first inhabitants of the earth were of a viney race as pioneers, and that they represented ten different races, five of which have disappeared by translocation.

Dr. Greer said that he was perfectly willing to give affidavit that he really had the vision.—New York Herald.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Edited and Conducted by W. S. MORLAN, Springfield, Missouri.

That downward tendency of the price of cotton is not so downward as it seems.

If special privileges are to be granted to anybody, they should be granted to the weak and not the strong.

It remains to be seen whether farmers will take advantage of the hand down to them.

It beats the head the way of government prosecutions against farmers and corporations (powerful interests) of the guilty party.

When the farmers are organized, as they are not, they can constitute the most powerful force in the political arena.

Need no new party. When they assert themselves in a business way they will be listened to and their demands heeded.

Twenty students recently graduated from the North Dakota Agricultural college as farmers. Think of that will you. That's only the beginning of this business. Twenty years ago new the commercial world will be dealing with a different kind of farmer from the easy going "Reuben" of the past.

Along educational lines there is one subject which the Farmers' Union will do well to consider seriously; that is the system of intensive farming. It is much more profitable than the old slipshod method of overcropping, being always behind with the work, and, worse than all, behind with creditors.

The poor railroad companies having run the gauntlet of regulation, come out without a scratch, are now giving out the word that their properties are in a superb condition and earning splendid dividends.

"When the devil was sick the devil a monk would be; when the devil was well the devil a monk was he."

No organization of farmers is welcome to the man who farms the farm. The politician who wants to use them for their votes only will advise them to stay out of politics. The merchant who wants their trade will advise them to sell at home. About the only thing they seem to be willing to do is to raise more stock for the middleman to toll and, if he raises enough to glut the market and bring down prices they "cuss" him for that. Verily, the man who farms the farm is a hard taskmaster.

Community Interest in Breeding

There is no getting around the fact that the present haphazard method of breeding up live stock may be improved upon. People necessarily differ as to the merits of the different breeds, but when all is said and done the matter sits down to the merits of individuals rather than breeds. There are outstanding individuals in every breed of stock and when it comes to a choice of breeds it is largely a matter of personal fancy.

There are many reasons why communities should co-operate in the breeding operations. In the first place it is a matter of economy. Several bulls or stallions may be purchased at one time, making a saving in both purchase price and transportation charges. Then, again, the sire may be exchanged among neighbors to prevent too close inbreeding, and no money paid out for several years for new sires. In the second place, where, for instance, the same breed of horses are raised year after year, the quality of the offspring will constantly improve, and the stock will be of a better class.

Then when a buyer comes he will find it an easy matter to get a large number of horses of the same type and breeding and will be in a position to offer more attractive prices than when he is obliged to scour a country over to get a suitable colloid. The same would apply to cattle, sheep, and dogs along these lines would lead to great financial betterment of the community as well as give an incentive to grow better stock.

Furnish Your Own Meat.

There are some farmers who sell their hogs on foot for four and a half cents a pound and then the next summer buy it back for 16 or 17 cents a pound, raising cotton to buy it back. Quit this right now. If you would prosper, kill your own meat. Put it in the smokehouse, raise your own vegetables and put them in the cellar for the winter and then you will be independent. The farmer that puts his attention to raising his living is then puts his surplus time to raising cotton or some other money crop, having his living at home, will not have to sell his money crop until he desires. Why is it that farmers do not recognize this fact?—United Tribunes.

Black Root of Cotton.

There is no practicable way to stop black root during the progress of the crop affected or attacked by this disease. The spores of the fungus that produces the trouble continue in the soil for two or three years, and the only way to get rid of them is to drain from planting the land in cotton for at least two years.

She clung tighter to her guide who never flinched, but went steadily on under the heads of the horses. Then they all but collided with a bicyclist and the wheels of a hansom twisted the feathers of the lady's toque. A tram car at that moment passed an inch from their toes and a butcher's cart knocked her handbag yards away. A motor horn at her ear nearly frightened her out of her wits and the pole of a bus, watching her in the back, pushed her on to the pavement. By this time, she had found voice to upbraid the man to whom she had been clinging. "Oh dear! Oh dear! It's a wonder I'm alive! What do you mean, man? I might have been killed a dozen times over. Are you blind?" That's just what I am, marm," replied the poor fellow. "So I held out my hand for some one to lead me across." Harry Furness, in Strand.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Edited and Contributed by
W. S. MORGAN,
Springfield, Missouri.

That downward revision of the tariff is no downward as you might think.

Special privileges are to be granted to nobody they should be granted to the weak and not the strong.

It is to be seen whether the farmers will take tamely the tariff which barons are preparing to hand out to them.

It is the hand the way government persecutions against the trusts and corporations peter out before any of the culprits get put in jail. When the farmers are thoroughly educated as they should be, they will constitute the most powerful element in a political situation. They will lead a new party. When they are educated in a business way they will be listened to and their demands heeded.

Twenty students recently graduated from the North Dakota Agricultural college as farmers. Think of that, will you? That's only the beginning of this business. Twenty years from now the commercial world will be dealing with a different kind of farmer—the easy going "Reuben" of the past.

Along educational lines there is one subject which the Farmers' union will do well to consider seriously: that is the system of intensive farming. It is much more profitable than the old slash-and-burn method of overcropping being always behind with the work and, worse than all, behind with creditors.

The poor railroad companies, having run the gauntlet of regulation and come out without a scratch, are now giving out the word that their properties are in a superb condition and earning splendid dividends. "When the devil was sick, the devil a monk would be; when the devil was well, he devil a monk was he."

Then when a buyer comes he will find it an easy matter to get a large number of horses of the same type and breeding and will be in a position to make more attractive prices than he is obliged to scour a country over to get a suitable carload. The same would apply to cattle whether of dairy or beef type. Co-operation along these lines would lead to financial betterment of the community as well as give an additional incentive to grow better stock.

Black Root of Cotton.

There is no practicable way to stop black root during the progress of the crop, or if attacked by this disease the spores of the fungus that causes the trouble continue in the soil for two or three years, and the only way to get rid of them is to rotate the planting the land in cotton for at least two years.

TAXATION AND THE FARMER.

Agriculturist Pays More Taxes, Directly and Indirectly Than Any Other Class.

There is no economic question that affects the farmer so much as that of taxation. We often hear the farmer complain of the burdens of state and municipal taxes, but these are a mere bagatelle compared with the indirect taxes he pays. Some of these find their way into the national treasury, but by far the greater part go into the coffers of great corporations who have secured the special privilege to levy burdens which no government would dare lay direct upon the people. The farmers are the largest consumers of manufactured products of any class in the country. The aggregate value of the machinery that is used on the farms is greater than employed by any other industry. Disclosures made in the recent tariff discussions go to show that the farmer in this country is paying higher prices for his machinery than the same is sold for in European countries. In other words it is shown that while the manufacture of some classes of machinery, and other things, is protected by a tariff duty from foreign competition, he boldly enters foreign territory and undersells the foreign manufacturer on his own dunghill. The very fact that he is enabled to do this is evidence that he needs no protection whatever, and that what he asks for and gets is simply so much graft.

If the people will study the disclosures made by the debates and investigations and by the session of congress called by President Taft for the special purpose of revising the tariff, they will learn something to their advantage, and if they will act upon it will revolutionize the revenue policy of the government. Partisan politics has become to a great extent a game of graft. Recently a candidate for the United States senate from Wisconsin testified that he had spent over one hundred thousand dollars in his campaign for the election. In every national campaign millions of dollars are spent to secure the election of president and congress. There is no question where this money comes from. It is furnished by the corporations and interests who expect value received for it in the way of legislation from the party in whose interests the funds are contributed. There is no denying this fact, and this system, this coalition between the corporations and the professional politicians, has grown so strong that it defies every sense of justice and nullifies the will of the people. The agricultural industry in no other country could bear the burdens imposed upon it in the United States. Only the wonderful resources of our soil enable us to bear it here. But the time will come when these resources will be exhausted—when there is no more new land to open up. That time has already practically arrived in the New England and eastern states, and in some sections of the south. This condition presents a grave question for the farmer to consider. He has let the business of legislation remain in the hands of the professional politician and the corporations so long that the combination has become strongly entrenched in power and "the interests" will not willingly surrender their advantage, but if liberty, in its purest sense, is to be preserved in this country there has got to be a political upheaval such as this country has never known before. Politics as we have it in this country, has become a loathsome stench in the nostrils of honest men. Boasting has become so common that it is referred to as a "conventional crime." Amidst it all, however, there is a ray of hope, a silver lining on the cloud. Party lines are resting upon the people more loosely than ever before. Prosecutions are being made, and while they are not as successful as could be hoped for, they are awakening the public conscience and the people are demanding that all criminals shall be punished, the rich corporation magnate as well as the poor laborer. The Farmers' union is awakening to the situation and much good may be expected through its efforts for the repeal of bad laws, the enactment of good ones, and the election of honest men to office.

Cress Culture.
The American cress may be sown in a moist place the last of August, September or early in October, either in drills or broadcast, watering plentifully in dry weather. Let the plants be thinned to 6 or 8 inches apart. This kind is often called "water" cress, because it will grow in clear, cool running water or along the edges of a spring branch. There are two other kinds of cress—the winter cress, which is less bitter than the former—and garden cress, or peppercress, and of this last there are three sorts, of which the common curled and the Normandy are the best. The culture of all is practically the same.

Use of Manure.

The Maryland experimental station shows by repeated tests that fresh manure spread in winter did not give as much increase as the same amount rotted and plowed down in the spring. Turning the manure while rotting was better than leaving it without being turned. Commercial fertilizers plowed under in the spring invariably gave larger yields than when sowed on the surface just before planting.

A man can accomplish on a farm nearly as much with a three-horse team as two men can with four horses worked as double teams. Ever try it?—Rural Home.

PRACTICE ON DOGS

Vivisectionists Defend Scientific Experiments on Animals.

Lord Cromer Tells Research Defense Society No Case of Needless Cruelty Has Been Proved by Anti-Vivisection People.

Lord Cromer presided at the annual meeting of the Research Defense society, and made an eloquent appeal for sympathy for the scientists whose research work involves experiments on animals.

Some few years ago, he said, the lord chief justice stigmatized a "notorious anti-vivisectionist book as 'an hysterical work.' The members of the society did not suffer from hysteria. "I think we were eminently sane. We cannot attempt to emulate, still less to rival, the proceedings of those who thrill the minds of the public with the imaginary tortures inflicted on a brown dog. We do not plaster the railway stations of the metropolis with caricatures of Stephen Coleridge (secretary of the Anti-Vivisection society), and his allies. These are all arts which we must leave to our opponents."

Yet he was glad that anti-vivisection societies existed. It was well that the physiologist should remember that there were critics on the watch who would be inclined to show him mercy should he inadvertently pass the narrow border line which separated the infliction of suffering which was justifiable from that which could not be justified.

The evidence presented to the royal commission on vivisection, Lord Cromer said, showed that there was not a single alleged case of extreme and unnecessary cruelty brought forward by the Anti-Vivisection society which did not hopelessly break down under cross-examination.

This was natural, for a physiologist had the same feelings of sympathy toward the animal world as were felt by every civilized human being, and, putting the matter on much lower ground, the struggles of an animal in pain tended to nullify the accuracy of the experiment. It could be proved up to the hilt that experiments on living animals had prolonged human life and relieved human suffering.

It was almost inconceivable that any body of thinking men and women could hesitate for one moment to sacrifice the lives of a certain number of mice, rabbits and rats if the least chance existed of eventually finding a remedy for a terrible scourge like cancer.

Jurors Given Costs.
Boston.—Alpaca coats for jurymen were introduced in the superior criminal court, by order of Judge R. O. Harris. He said he desired the jurymen to be comfortable during the hot weather and had ordered the coats, the cost to be borne by the county treasurer. If there should be any demurrer he will pay the bill himself.

PAPERS BLOWN MANY MILES.

Farmer Discovers Relics of Texas Tornado Great Distance from Starting Point.

Dublin, Tex.—A farmer residing several miles east of Dublin, in Erath county, picked up in his pasture a quantity of papers, which were evidently blown there by the tornado which recently swept the little Brown county town of Zephyr. These papers were strewn over 100 acres or more and consisted of a number of blank checks on a Zephyr bank, a deed to a lot in the town of Zephyr, some blank cotton tickets from the Zephyr cotton yard, a letter from a young lady in a North Texas town to a lady friend in Zephyr, the photograph of a gentleman, and a quantity of other papers which were easily identified as having come from the ill-fated town of Zephyr.

A comparison of the lists of those who were killed by the fury of the cyclone, elicits the information that the young lady to whom the letter was addressed was among the number.

The deed and other papers of value have been sent to the rightful owners at Zephyr. The community where these articles were found is more than 50 miles from the town ravaged by storm. An unpaid check for a small amount on a Zephyr bank was picked up 12 miles east of Hico and quantities of papers and light articles of various descriptions are being found at Hico, Iredell and Meridian, 100 miles away from the point where the terrific destruction was wrought.

It is evident that the tornado passed high up over these places after leaving Zephyr, and these articles were dropped from the whirling mass in its progress through the air to its final dissolution.

After Royal Baby Record.
London.—The queen of Spain when congratulated on the birth of the infant princess answered: "Yes, isn't it nice, I always hoped I should have as many babies as grand-ma, who was the mother of eight, and I still hope so."

The queen's determination to have a larger family than the princess of Wales has been noted. The queen's mother has said that she has taken to maternity as if it was her destined profession.

SHUN HAWAIIAN JOBS

Island Farm Work Plenty, But Unemployed Say "No."

Authorities Have Much Difficulty in Securing Recruits in America and Are Now Turning to Europe for Relief.

Washington.—The unemployed of the great cities, according to the belief of the department of commerce and labor, are not desirous of obtaining work. This conviction has been forced upon the department officials through the failure of the territorial government of Hawaii to obtain laborers in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and other populous centers.

Some time ago the Hawaiian legislature passed a law authorizing the enlisting and importation into the islands of farm laborers. The alien contract labor laws were practically suspended, so extreme was the need of the planters and agriculturists of the territory. Agents were sent to the United States to organize parties of idle men who were willing to accept the economic system that prevented them from getting employment.

These agents made their way first to New York. They were authorized to offer full fare from that city to San Francisco to everyone who cared to work, with transportation by boat from the Golden Gate to Honolulu. All the recruits were assured of work at good wages on the various farms and plantations, once they arrived in the islands.

Several bands of workers were gathered up. In every case it was found that they were not honest in their desire to gain employment. The final illustration came when the agents rounded up several scores of supposed workers willing to go to Hawaii, and started them across the continent. When the train on which they had left New York reached San Francisco only three of the original party remained. The others had dropped off at various stations along the route.

Agents in other cities reported similar conditions, and the immigration authorities of Hawaii were in despair. It has now been decided to give up all hope of getting American citizens who will take up an agricultural life, and look to Europe for relief.

Accordingly, the agents have gone abroad and devote themselves almost entirely to gaining Portuguese farmers, who are said to make most admirable citizens, and who are thrifty, honest and industrious.

According to a high official of the department, thousands of laborers are needed in the island. The Chinese are leaving by the hundreds, as are the Japanese, and when they once leave the ports of the territory are closed to their return. This opens up a wide market for labor, which, apparently, cannot be supplied from the United States, although every large city in this country complains of its army of unemployed.

CHICKENS HATCHED BY WATER

Queer Little Mollycoddles That Ignore Their Own Kind and Prefer a Feather Duster.

Columbus, Ind.—Some time ago a brood of young chicks, the property of Mrs. Andrew Faulconer of this city, sprang into prominence, and now they seem to thirst for newspaper mention, although they are regarded here as mollycoddles.

The eggs which formed the home of these chickens were deserted by an unnatural mother hen before hatching time. Rather than lose the time and toll spent in getting the setting ready, Mrs. Faulconer placed the eggs under a hot water bottle, kept the water at an even temperature, and the chicks were hatched.

Now the chicks have a new stunt. They have grown and prospered, but perhaps because of the rubber and hot water mother they have always acted more or less strange. After the chicks had grown large enough to roost in the chicken house with the other members of the flock they still insisted on "cheeping" about the yard at night and refused to live with the other chickens.

At last Mrs. Faulconer's daughter, Margaret, had a suggestion which she decided to try. She bought a feather duster and put it in a basket where the chicks had slept when they were quite young. As soon as the little chicks saw the duster they came running. Now, when night comes they do not hesitate about their sleeping quarters. They nestle down under the welcome feathers of the duster and go to dreamland without a bit of hesitation.

FINE PIANIST AT SIX YEARS.

Little Pennsylvania Girl is Youngest and Tiniest Ever Heard in Pottstown.

Pottstown, Pa.—Just six years old and the youngest and tiniest soloist piano performer that ever appeared in public here, Dora K., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hoffman of 455 North Charlotte street, is regarded by experts as a musical prodigy.

Although from her very earliest years, when she toddled to the piano and tried to play while her mother sang some sweet lullaby, Dora showed a natural talent for music, it was not

Paul's Third Missionary Journey

Sunday School Lesson for August 15, 1909

LESSON TEXT.—Acts 18:2-12. Memory Verse.—18:27. Golden Text.—"The name of the Lord Jesus was magnified." (Acts 18:27). TIME.—Paul began his third missionary journey to A. D. 53, and it lasted three years, 18:28, or 3.

PLACE.—Paul ended his second journey by going to Jerusalem, and thence to Antioch. From there he went through Asia Minor, ending at Ephesus, the capital of the Roman province of Asia.

Suggestion and Practical Thought.
How Paul Built Up the Religious Life of Ephesus.
Paul entered upon his missionary journey and strengthened the Order Churches Acts 18:22. When Paul had completed his second missionary journey he went up to Jerusalem to pay his respects to the mother church there, and doubtless, as at other times, he told the wondrous story of the work of God in bringing so many Gentiles into the kingdom. Here he would remain long enough to complete his vow, the apostle to the Gentiles in loving accord with the mother church.

Then he went down to the home church which had sent him forth. Here he was always welcome. Here he told the story of his missionary adventures, and the fruits of his labors. This is probably the last time Paul was able to visit Antioch. It is probable that while here Paul wrote the Epistle to the Galatians in respect to the report of Timothy concerning the churches in that region, and not long afterward he himself went through the region of Galatia and Phrygia in order, strengthening the churches, for there was great need. (Gal. 1:6-12; 3:1-5, 9:12-13).

Ephesus, which Paul made his headquarters for nearly three years of missionary work, was not only the capital of the province, but was the city of the greatest importance in all Asia Minor, and principal emporium of trade in the east.

Paul Finds an Undeveloped Church of Ephesus, and Brings Them Into the Fulfillment of the Gospel. Light—Acts 18:24-19:7. The eloquent Apollos. When Paul left Corinth at the close of his second journey, his friends Aquila and Priscilla went with him as far as Ephesus. Before Paul entered upon his longer work at Ephesus there came a Christian Jew of great eloquence (v. 25). "Knowing only the baptism of John," the gospel of repentance and forgiveness, and Christian morals, and of Jesus who proclaimed the kingdom of heaven at hand, and worked many miracles of love, and died on the cross, the story which was told in the earlier gospels.

These things Priscilla and Aquila expounded to him. Then he went to Greece (v. 27) and "helped them much which had believed through grace." Of this Paul once speaks in his letter to Corinth, "I planted, Apollos watered, God gave the increase." (1 Cor. 3:6). Paul's Preaching and Teaching.—Vs. 8-10. First, in the Jewish synagogue. Three months. To Jews. As usual, Paul began with the Jews who were best prepared to receive the Gospel. "And spake boldly." It required no little courage to take the unpopular side, which had so often brought him into trouble.

Second, in the school of Tyrannus. Two years. To Gentiles. "Disputing," "arguing," "daily" and not merely on the Sabbath. "In the school of one Tyrannus." Nothing is known positively about this man. "Continued"—two years. In addition to the three months in the synagogue. "All they which dwelt in Asia," the Roman province of Asia, of which Ephesus was the capital. "Heard the word." Paul had with him a number of helpers, as Timothy, Erastus, Titus, etc.

Two Kinds of Testimonials to the Power and Value of the Gospel.—Vs. 11-12. In addition to the holy conduct and noble spirit exhibited in the ordinary daily life there were two outward and visible testimonies to the truth and power of the Gospel. First, Miracles of healing and help. "God wrought special miracles." By the hands of the instrumentality of "Paul." In Ephesus, the center of magic and witchcraft, special power was given Paul to work miracles that conquered them in their own stronghold. He actually did what the sorcerers pretended to do.

Self-denial for the Cause of Christ. Doing right at great cost. "Many that believed came, and confessed" that they had been using magical practices, but now, realizing that they were wrong, "showed their deeds" by publicly confessing and renouncing all such heathen practices, by which doubtless they had been making money.

"Many of them," referring to those who had been magicians previous to their conversion, "which used curious arts," such as magic, incantations, sleight of hand, charms, secret knowledge of chemistry, hypnotism, jugglery, and everything by which they had deceived the people. These men and women were in the habit of carrying about on their persons as charms or amulets to shield them from danger and from harm, or to procure them good fortune in their undertakings. We read how Crispus, when on his funeral pile, repeated these "Ephesian spells."

Light from the Orient.—In the Vienna museum are some very old manuscripts, called the Papyri manuscripts, some of them dated 1,500 years B. C. discovered a few years ago in Egypt. Among them are large quantities of magical writings, with the Hebrew talismans.

Messrs. Henry McDonnell and J. P. Fuller, after driving from Clanton to Thorby and back by way of Collins Chapel, looking at the country and crops, expressed themselves as being much pleased with what they saw. Both men are prominent planters of Madison county. Mr. McDonnell came to inspect the soil of Chilton county to see if tomatoes, sweet potatoes and sugar corn could be grown successfully for canning. He is interested in canning factories at Huntsville and Stevenson, Ala., and is looking for a location for another factory. He was pleased with conditions here and will return as soon as the canning season is over at Huntsville to make further investigation.

AN ORDINANCE.

Be it ordained by the Town Council of the Town of Clanton,
Alabama, as follows:

Section 1. That it shall be unlawful for the owner or keeper of any dog to permit it to be at large upon a highway of the Town, unless such owner or keeper shall obtain a license from the Town permitting such dog to be at large upon a highway of the Town, and shall also cause a collar to be worn by such dog, when upon such highway, upon which collar shall appear the name or initials and the post office address of the owner or keeper, and any person guilty of a violation of this Ordinance shall,
upon conviction, be fined not less than $1.00 nor more than $100.00.

Section 2. That to obtain the license provided for by this Ordinance
the owner or keeper of any dog must make application in writing signed by him or her to the Clerk of the Town, which application shall show the post office address of the applicant, the sex, color, a brief description and the name—if the dog has a name—of the dog for which the license is sought, and shall deposit with the Clerk, for the use of the Town, $1.00 for each dog and shall pay to the Clerk twenty-five cents as a fee for issuing each license under this Ordinance, and thereupon the Clerk shall issue to such applicant
a license signed by him showing the deposit of said $1.00, the payment of said fee, the post office address of the applicant, the sex,
color and such other description of the dog as may be given in the application, and that the dog mentioned in the license may be at large upon the highways of the Town for one year from the date of such license if it shall have on a collar, when upon a highway of the Town, upon which collar the name or initials and the post office address of the owner or keeper appear. And the Clerk of the Town shall file and keep such application, and shall make a stub or record of such license.

Section 3. Any dog found at large upon a highway of the Town which shall not have on a collar as herein provided for, shall be taken up by the Marshal of the Town and confined until noon of the third day after it is taken up, when it shall be killed or disposed of as hereinafter provided, and the Marshal shall, within three hours after taking up such dog, post a notice at the post office door in said Town, which notice shall show when such dog was taken up, the sex and color of such dog, and such other brief description thereof as may be practicable, and the time when such dog will be killed. If the owner or keeper of such dog be within the Town and be known by the Marshal to be the owner or keeper, the Marshal shall serve a like notice upon such owner or keeper.

Section 4. Unless such dog be reclaimed by the owner or keeper thereof the Marshal of the Town shall kill it at the appointed time, or he may give it to such person as will remove it from the Town or will take out a license for it, but before any person shall be entitled to reclaim such dog or to take out a license for it he must first pay to the Marshal a fee of $2.50 for taking up and keeping such dog, which fee is hereby fixed and established.

Section 5. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances of the Town of Clanton in conflict with this ordinance be and the same is hereby repealed.

Passed this 2d day of August,
1909. E. A. MATTHEWS, Mayor.

hen that laid two eggs at one laying. The egg was found in his back yard by one of the members of his family. Mrs. Reese, his wife, seeing the egg, thought it had two yolks, as it was a very large egg, and on opening the shell she found a second egg inside of a medium size with a perfect hard shell in it. They have the egg that was found inside of large shell
in their possession.

Editor Banner—Will you let me
in for a short talk in the columns of the dear old Banner? I have been requested to write some letters from this place, giving the current items of the place. Will say that the crops in this section are much improved, which is very encouraging to the farmers.

Health of this place is good with the exception of one child who has typhoid fever.

The writer made a special visit to the Orphan Home at this place
a few days ago and learned from Miss Sadie Hunt, the matron, that there are 88 inmates in the Home, ranging from 2 to 18 years old, 58 girls and 30 boys. It is very interesting to visit the Home, it is run on systematic principles and everything moves like clockwork. It speaks in high terms for the M.
E. church.

We have an evergreen Sunday school at this place with about 100 on the roll. It is well attended every Sunday by pupils and teachers. We have two sermons every Sunday by Bro. McCarty.

and think of the price!

This space for Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothing--the best Clothes on earth

YOU'RE going to have, this coming Fall, a chance to buy and wear the Best Clothes in the World; the kind of clothes that well-dressed men are always glad to buy.

HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX CLOTHES

are to be the features of our line this coming season;
and we want every man of you to know it early, and keep it in mind for the time you next think of buying clothes.

We are making a specialty of these goods because we want you to get the greatest possible value for your money.

You want value; that's the only real way to economize in clothes; and value means the sort of quality Hart, Schaffner & Marx put into their goods.
They're all wool, in every thread of fabric, they represent the products of the best weaves in the world, and they offer a greater variety for your selection than you'll find in any half-dozen other make put together.

But all-wool, vitally important as it is to your interest as a wearer, is not the only thing we know about Hart, Schaffner & Marx quality. These clothes are designed right; the whole question of fit depends on that; and it's important to you to know that you can be correctly fitted without trouble here.

They're correct in style, of course, and perfectly tailored; these makers know their business well enough not to spoil good all-wool fabrics, fine linings and trimmings by designing and tailoring that are wrong.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx are the best clothes makers in the world; and every dollar of value they put into the goods is there for you to get out in the wear.

We are discontinuing our other CLOTHING at a sacrifice price to make room for the Hart, Schaffner & Marx line, while they last, 50 cents on the dollar from the original price will be what we ask; better get into one quick.

GENTLEMEN!

We are going to sell every Sal-of Clothing in this house before going to market, if possible. If you want to buy two suits, for the price of one, now is your time to take advantage of the opportunity

CORRESPONDENCE.

Chunchula, Ala., Aug. 14, '09

Editor Banner—Having been a subscriber of your paper since its birth, and having worked very hard for twenty years for the prohibition cause in Chilton county, I want to ask your indulgence for a short space in your paper. I want to express my gratitude to the law-makers of the present Legislature of Alabama for the State-wide prohibition bill, and to Gov. B. B. Comer for signing the same. I want to ask every patriotic eligible voter of Chilton county and of Alabama who loves their God, their country and their children, to turn out on election day and vote for the constitutional amendment of the State-wide prohibition law of Alabama. Yours for prohibition, W. A. MIMS.

As I have not heard anything of the dear old Banner in some time, thought I would write a word.

Everybody is trying to leave their fodder; it is mighty hot weather to pull fodder, but just listen to what I have to say about the girls of Randolph. Were you all there to look at those dear good Baptists scrape out their slippers? Just put one of them in the garden to work a little while, or at the wash tub to do a little washing, and you will hear them saying I will make that darkey a dress before I will do that washing and rub the skin off my hands and sun-burn my face. Which is the most credit to a girl, to stay at home with their parents and help them make a living for themselves, or to leave home for them to work and keep them up? Any intelligent young lady won't do that, nor young man either. This is the truth and nothing but the truth. Best wishes to the Banner. BROWN EYES.

Health is not very good, several have had chills and fever.

We are glad to see Mr. Dave Hick well again.

Grandma Mize, Mr. John Lawrence, Mrs. Sallie Hicks and Mrs. Annie Hicks are much better.

Crops on low lands are just tolerable good.

Meredith Coshalt and sister from Wilton have been visiting relatives near Lawley.

Mr. Casey Lawrence and brother, Mr. John Wallace, of near Randolph spent Saturday at Mr. Tom Wallace's.

Miss Maude Adams and cousin visited Mr. Wood McGhee's family Saturday.

Grandma Mize has been spending awhile with her daughter, Mrs. Della Walker.

Mr. Jim McGhee's family have been visiting friends near Tabernacle recently.

Mr. Jasper Lawrence and family spent Sunday at Mr. Tom Wallace's.

Mr. Lee Lawrence and family visited Mr. Johnson recently.

We were very glad to read a letter from Uncle Mike; write again. And the two Chums from Lonely Hill, write again, we like to read from all. Big Ike, I think it's time for you to write. With best wishes to all. AUNT DINAH.

Editor Banner—Will you please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words about the ball game at Coopers between the Blue Darters and Coopers, in which the Coopers team won by score of 7 to 5. The game was featureless. With best wishes to the Banner, I am, as ever, THE BRONX KID.

Chestnut Creek

Editor Banner—After attending an all-day singing at the above place, I want the people of Chilton to know what a day we had. I believe this to be the best day the writer ever experienced. The good people of this church say they believe this to be the best day in building the cause of Christ they have ever had. We saw the tears flowing from their eyes when they were singing these good songs. Service was opened by S. M. Yates singing the old song "Pisgah." Prayer by Bro. N. J. Calloway. J. L. Gore had the singing in charge the balance of the day. He appointed the following leader: L. T. Grant; then two songs were sung by Prof. J. L. Gore. Then we had some very interesting talks by Prof. J. L. Gore, N. J. Calloway and others.

Then a bountiful dinner was spread by the good ladies of this community.

Directors for the afternoon, W. C. B. Norrell, J. M. Williams, W. O. Rich, O. L. Devaughan, Jesse Jones and Herbert Currie. A good talk by J. M. Curlee and Leemon Jones. Closed with prayer by Leemon Jones.

The good people of this community contracted with Prof. J. L. Gore to teach them a forty days school, beginning Jan. 5, 1910.

I feel that this has been a day well spent for the Master's cause. Respectfully, ED GILES.

WEAK PEOPLE

will feel, after a proper trial, that they need much better and stronger from the use of St. Joseph's Liver Regulator, either liquid or powder. It removes a toxic accumulation from the bowels, and thus gives Nature an opportunity to build up the system and insure good health. It is good for adults and children. A few doses will prove its efficacy. Druggists and general dealers sell it, liquid, 50 cents a bottle; powder, in tin boxes, 25 cents a box, five boxes for a dollar. Avoid substitutes—be sure to get "St. Joseph's."

A CASH OFFER.

The Banner has made a special clubbing rate with The Memphis Weekly Commercial Appeal by which we will furnish both papers for one year for the regular subscription price, $1.00. The Commercial Appeal is one of the largest and best papers in the South and we hope to receive many new subscriptions on this offer; $1.00 cash for both papers. Everyone should make their home paper first for the local news, and then a general weekly for the news of the world. These two papers make a strong combination. Both papers $1.00.

CURED HAY FEVER AND SUMMER COLD

A. N. Nussbaum, Halesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicine which seemed only to aggravate it. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar. It quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." Upchurch Drug Co.

70 Years with Coughs

We have had nearly seventy years of experience with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. That makes us have great confidence in it for coughs, colds, bronchitis, weak throats, and weak lungs. Ask your own doctor what experience he has had with it. He knows. He can advise you wisely. Keep in close touch with your family physician. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Be well, be strong. You cannot if your bowels are constipated. The best laxative is Ayer's Pills, all vegetable. Ask your doctor if he agrees with us. Do as he says.

SMALL CHANCE TO GET AWAY.

Deserter from United States Army Must Hide Carefully to Escape Detection.

On the bulletin board in a post office one frequently sees a proclamation announcing in large type that a reward of $50 is offered by the government for the apprehension of so-and-so, who has deserted from the United States army, and accompanying the notice are two pictures of the man in question, showing his full face and profile, together with a complete and accurate description of his personal appearance.

When you consider that such a proclamation is sent broadcast throughout the country to every village post office, constable, police station, sheriff and United States marshal, it is evident that the deserter has but a very slender chance of escaping detection. In addition to the ordinary marks of recognition, the soldier carries with him the inevitable mannerisms of the service, especially that peculiar stride which characterizes the professional soldier, and which is more difficult to disguise than the lockstep of the convict.

Fully four fifths of the men who desert from our army are of foreign birth. This does not imply that the vast majority of our enlisted men are naturalized citizens, but simply that a great many of that class are professional army deserters and have had records behind them in Europe. After deserting from a foreign army they came here and, being unable to secure work, joined our forces. But the old dissatisfaction with the soldiering life again became too strong to be resisted and the result is another desertion, and the almost certain result, a term in the guardhouse or in the national prison.—Harper's Weekly.

Modern Eves.

If anybody doubts the emancipation of the modern girl just let him walk down some street where sporting bulletins are shown between four and five o'clock in the afternoon and he will quickly be convinced," said the man with the red mustache.

There are mobs of women abroad at that time who seem almost as deeply interested in baseball and racing news as the men. Nice, proper-looking girls they are, too. They are not hanging around the corner where the men congregate, but slide off into a stationery or confectionery store near by where they can loaf around and peep out every few seconds to see how the game is going.

There is one Broadway drug store that has become the favorite haunt of these athletic young women. Every day a squad of them comes trooping in for the ostensible purpose of purchasing soda water, but in reality to learn whether the Cubs are beating the Giants or whether a favorite horse is getting to the post on time. Strange to say, they do not do much talking—for women. Their education in outdoor sports has had a sobering effect, and when they do talk their remarks are almost sensible enough to be made by a man.

French Convicts' Gold Mine. Convicts in French Guiana seem to be in luck. They are reported to be working a gold mine on their own account.

Their wardens have apparently so far failed to discover where they have successfully perched their claim. The convicts in turn escape from the settlement by two or three and remain hidden for a day or two. They then return with their pockets full of nuggets and have a great time. Others get away in their turn but come back eventually also with gold. The mine is thus kept regularly working by shifts of convicts.

The latter when they return to the settlement are regularly sentenced to a few days' imprisonment for absence without leave, but this is a low price to pay for a share in a gold mine. Where the latter is the authorities have never yet been able to discover.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Edited and Contributed by
W. J. MORGAN,
Springfield, Missouri.

Get your mark high and aim straight.

You know you are right and then you know it is what you want.

Co-operation is fit to be a member of the union unless he does something to prove his object.

Co-operation is bound to succeed and every farmer ought to put himself on the best way to attain it.

The farmer who pays more for a bushel of grain will not raise a bushel of grain. It is allowing his profits to go away.

A good place to begin to learn is in the national work of the union is right at home. Try to attain to better results in farming.

Wherever you do in the way of co-operation begin at the bottom. Education is the point of just what is to be done and how to do it.

The member of the Union who says the organization does not amount to much is usually the one who does the most to make it amount to anything.

To know what to grow and how to grow it is one of the most important things to learn, and the Union should be the active promoter of this intelligence.

The best farmers are the ones who are capable of giving the best advice, but they are not always the ones who are most free to give it. The union should put them forward to talk.

Co-operation to the union without doing anything is like going out to plow and sitting down on a stump. If you do anything else, solicit subscribers for some good union or agricultural paper.

TO REACH GOAL OF SUCCESS.

National Co-Operation Among Farmers and Outlets of Middleman Means Prosperity.

While Texas and the south, through the Farmers' union, are fighting for better prices and co-operating along lines that will produce the best results, other sections of the union are also moving in consonance with the general desire that has affected the farming class, to co-operate for the general good. The Farmers' union of the northwestern states has resolved to control the markets for their grain to the extent of getting a fair and stable price. Ten thousand farmers, estimated, to control a grain output of over 20,000,000 bushels, have formed in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, California and other states a combination hard and fast through an executive session of the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America, where it was unanimously decided that the executive board be empowered to select one or more central selling agencies to represent the Farmers' union on the coast, or at such other points as they might need them.

This means that the 10,000 members of the Farmers' union intend that the entire output of grain raised by them is to be sold through one at least of these agencies, doing away with the middleman and his profits and putting the farmer just that much nearer the consumer.

The officers of the Farmers' union state that while no attempt will be made to fix an arbitrary price, still the selling agencies will hold out for the highest market price at all times and thus enable the farmer to get much better prices for his product. The farmers do not fix any minimum price, but leave it to their central agencies to get the best that the market offers. It was proposed at this meeting to go even further in this move and prepare to handle their own exporting and to build mills and make their own flour. The first proposition, that of exporting, was considered rather impracticable, but that they should manufacture their own flour met with general approval.

While no action was taken the official of the union stated that within a year the Farmers' union would be ready to work along these lines. It seems to the Co-Operator that the national officials should immediately take action in line with this move of the northwestern unions, and work out a plan of co-operation that will enable the farmers in the cotton, corn and tobacco states who are organized in the union, to buy their flour from these brethren who handle the grain and flour of that section. Of course, there are other sections that have grain and flour, but the plan of operations should be broad enough to meet the necessities of all. With a proper plan of co-operation there is no reason at all why, in a short time, at least when the next congress meets, all the various agricultural elements in the country should not co-operate in sending delegations to Washington, and through their united efforts bring to bear such influence upon congressmen that they will not dare to disobey, but will proceed to act in the interest of the producers and abolish the cotton and grain exchanges of the country. If there was only an organization in the nature of a council of the states, composed of the presidents and executive committees of the various state unions, action in a co-operative spirit could be more easily and expeditiously had than as now through delegates. The presidents and secretaries and the executive committees of the various states are much closer to the people and are more familiar with the business of the unions in the states and in touch with the members of the locals and of the locals, and could more readily give advice and information that would be nearer representative of the wishes of the people. This plan would allow of more meetings for consultation annually and would be very much less expensive, for the only officer that would be needed continually would be a secretary.

Considerable interest attaches to a movement that has been inaugurated at Shawnee by the Farmers' union looking to the establishing of a co-operative cotton mill at that place for the manufacture of all lines of cotton products, says the Daily Oklahoman.

That a cotton mill conducted under such auspices, particularly with the good-will of the heavy cotton planters throughout the cotton-growing region of the state, should be a success, may be expected if it is possible to operate a large plant of this kind successfully in Oklahoma, doubt of which has been frequently expressed, primarily upon the grounds that the cheap rentals and low cost of living regarded as essential to conducting a cotton manufacturing plant are nonexistent in the state at this time.

Against this argument is presented the claim that its discouraging features will be overcome by the saving of double freight charges in shipping Oklahoma cotton to eastern mills and shipping back the bolted goods.

If consummated, the Shawnee enterprise will determine whether Oklahoma is to have cotton mills, and the co-operative plan will so distribute the expense of the experiment that it will not fall heavily upon the individual stockholder.

For Cotton Statistics. A prisoner of agriculture of the state printed for all blanks needed in connection with the ginners of the state the season of 1909.

Mr. Kohn said: "I will be more thorough than ever before. The ginners are going to appreciate the reports, and I have succeeded in securing a complete list of the state, embracing those who are determined to use every possible position to make their reports correct, and therefore I am going to the cotton farmer and state and thereby destroy the exaggerated cotton crop. The cotton grower is every dollar his cotton crop and I propose to do all in my power to get it."

Best for the Farmer. A farmer too good for men and too good for the farm. The country deserve the best and the farmer in their fight for better prices, bears no such burden. It is wise sometimes to look out for better methods and produce quicker and more results.

FIGHT "LAZY BUG"

Hook Worm Engages Attention of Military Authorities.

Surgeon General Will Advise Widespread Effort of State Officials to Kill Parasite Which Causes Indolence on Part of Victim.

Washington.—The hook worm, or "lazy bug," as it has been shown to exist in the southern states, according to investigations of the physical condition of army recruits, will form an interesting chapter in the forthcoming report of the surgeon general of the army and probably will lead to a widespread effort on the part of boards of health in the southern states to eradicate this disease, which a few years ago was brought prominently to the attention of the world in connection with the Porto Ricans.

When the hook worm, referred to in the medical world as uncinariasis, was declared to be prevalent in Porto Rico, resulting in a tendency to indolence on the part of the patient who otherwise appeared in usual health, there was no suggestion that this peculiar parasite infected people in the United States.

Through the methods that have been adopted in the United States army, both in the selection of recruits and in the care of men after their enlistment, this disease has been shown to exist to a large extent.

This investigation has been progressing quietly during the last six or seven months, so that when Surgeon General Torney makes up his annual report he will have much data to prove the prevalence of the hook worm among soldiers enlisted from southern states.

Intended a Big Dose of Croton Oil for Thieves, But by Mistake Got It Himself.

Hazelton, Pa.—A popular notion that physicians never take much of the medicine they prescribe for others does not hold good in the case of Dr. F. M. Brundage of Conyngham, formerly United States consul to Aix-la-Chapelle, Germany. For some time the doctor noticed that unknown parties were getting the benefit of his fine strawberry patch, so he sprayed croton oil on one section of the patch, dosing some of the choicest berries with the oil and then awaited results.

Whether any of the parties who had previously invaded his premises got any of the fruit treated with the oil is not known, but the doctor has been obliged to admit that he did, despite the care he had taken to prevent just such an occurrence.

Millions of Lobster Eggs.

Bangor.—The United States fish commission steamer Gannett is planting lobster fry off the coast. Thousands of seed lobsters have been produced, and when the season ends 14,000 of them will have been stripped at the hatchery. These will produce millions of eggs. The lobster fry planted this year run into the hundreds of millions, and there are still over 100,000,000 eggs on hand in process of development.

When the 100,000,000 eggs develop into lobsters practically all of them will live, although the experts allow for a certain number dying.

Acres of Gypsy Moths.

Bourne, Mass.—The discovery of the largest colony of gypsy moths that has ever infested southeastern Massachusetts is reported by the gypsy moth commission agent, near the main highway from Bourne to Falmouth, on the Buzzard's Bay shore.

Twenty-five acres of fine oak woods will have to be burned over to prevent a spread of the pest, which, it is said, has already ruined a three-acre tract of fine trees.

These recruits passing through the army depot at Fort Slocum, N. Y., were examined to the number of 140, 100 of them being infected with the parasite. West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee all supplied recruits that were infected.

While the hook worm was so largely prevalent, in only two instances in this series of investigations was the anemia sufficiently severe to cause the recruit's rejection. After being treated all the infected soldiers gained in weight and improved in physical condition generally.

Following this investigation of recruits it was discovered that uncinariasis was a common disease throughout the southern states. It is estimated by army surgeons that 50 per cent of the recruits in the army today from the rural districts of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana will show hook-worm infection.

Recruits from southern states who have been in the army several years show a tendency toward the elimination of the disease. This is partly accounted for on the theory that the regular life and nourishing food, together with daily enforced exercise, often result in recovery from the infection.

It has been estimated that the campaign waged by the army against the hook worm in Porto Rico resulted in saving of more than 5,000 lives annually. The surgeon general may suggest the possibility of instituting some campaign against the disease in the south, but under present conditions it is said but little can be done except through the agency of state governments.

Delicate Machine Required to Do This Work Damaged in Transit Across the Continent.

Seattle, Wash.—Winding watches for a living? Preposterous. No, surest thing you know. Out at the exposition.

It is one of the occupations which has developed out of life, movement and energy, which are the prominent characteristics of the exhibits in Machinery hall and the Liberal Arts building of the exposition.

A well-known watch company, in conjunction with a model manufacturing plant in its booth, has on display some 1,200 watches which are keeping time. Like most watches, they have to be wound each day. Ordinarily the winding should be done by a specially constructed machine, but in shipment across the country and through rough handling this delicate piece of machinery has been damaged.

Five Seattle girls have been engaged to do the work that was allotted to the machine.

It takes practically two minutes to wind a watch unless one is anxious to send it to the repair man, and as there are 1,200 watches, this means that it will take 2,400 minutes or 40 hours to do this work by hand. Five girls working eight hours a day can accomplish this seemingly simple task, each girl winding as her share some 240 watches. Such a job as this might at first hand be thought to be something of a snap, but stop and think that for eight hours a day the girls must do nothing but move their fingers over the stem of a watch and decide for yourself whether it won't become tedious.

BAR FINGER PRINTS

Method of Identification Refused by a London Jury.

Testimony of the Head of Scotland Yard Record Department in Case of Man Charged with Theft Is Rejected.

London.—In spite of the elaborate and expensive plan for the identification of criminals by finger prints at Scotland Yard, and in spite of the position of the system made in court, a London jury has declined to recognize as evidence identification made in this manner.

The case was that of James Francis Lawler, late head gardener to the duke of Norfolk at Arundel, who pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with various thefts. He, however, denied that he was the man who, under the name of William Clark, was sentenced to five years' penal servitude some years ago.

Inspector Munro of the finger print department at New Scotland Yard produced a set of finger prints taken at Portland in 1892 of the convict Clark, and those of the prisoner, taken at Brixton. The two, he said, were identical.

The witness said that he had been connected with the department since it was introduced at Scotland Yard. During that period the prints of 140,000 persons had been recorded, and more than 45,000 identifications had been made by means of them without a single mistake.

The ridge characteristics on each of the two prints agreed exactly. These ridge characteristics did not alter in detail or general character during the whole course of a person's life, or even after death, until the skin began to decay.

Mr. Frampton said that the defendant obtained his position with the duke of Norfolk by means of recommendations which are now said to be forged. In regard to the present case he was stated to have obtained jewelry by means of checks which were subsequently dishonored.

In the meantime the prisoner disappeared from Arundel without giving notice, and he was traced and arrested. Sentence of three years' penal servitude was passed.

PROVES TO BE MAN OF HONOR

Arrested in San Francisco, Crosses Continent to Surrender to New Jersey Authorities.

New York.—Robert Leclerc, arrested at San Francisco ten days ago, is a prisoner at Hackensack, N. J., because he was too honorable to deceive the officers.

When Leclerc was arrested Hackensack officials decided it was too expensive to send an officer to the Pacific coast to bring him back and advised the San Francisco police to release him. But the prisoner decided that his honor was at stake and agreed to return if the New Jersey authorities would pay his railroad fare and meals. This offer was accepted and Leclerc came back to answer a charge of obtaining $1,500 under false pretenses while acting as a real estate agent. When he reached Hackensack he went immediately to the prosecutor's office, surrendered, and was locked in jail.

This was in direct contrast with the character of the Christians, who made great sacrifices in burning their own (not other people's) bad books which were injuring the people.

The Mob in the Coliseum.—V. 29: 41. "The whole city was filled with confusion." The mob of Ephesus made for the house of Aquila, with whom Paul was lodging. They missed their prey, but as Paul tells us that Aquila and Priscilla had for his life laid down their own necks (Rom. 16: 4), it is likely that these faithful friends, in shielding the apostle, brought themselves into the most imminent peril. The mob, though baffled of their principal aim, acted on Galus and Aristarchus, two of Paul's associates, and dragged them away as criminals. "Rushed with one accord into the theater," the Coliseum, capable of holding 55,000 people.

Alexander the Jew. The Jews were always especially exposed to persecution, and as the mob would be likely to make no distinction between Jews and Christians, particularly as Paul was a Jew, they put forward a prominent Jew, named Alexander, to defend them.

The Mob Quelled. "The town clerk" at length interfered and argued with the excited people.

The worship of Diana was so settled in Ephesus that no company of Jews could overthrow it. You have no real cause for violence. "The image" of Diana "which fell down from Jupiter," their chief god, as meteoric stones fall from the sky.

Thus was peace and quiet restored. The signs of these times meant that it was best for Paul to leave immediately for another field of labor, while Ephesus was settling down into quiet peace, and the church continued to grow in character and numbers. Therefore Paul bade the beloved church good-by and "departed for to go into Macedonia" (Acts 20: 1).

2. Paul had not committed the wrong with which he was charged. His converts had been very careful not to blaspheme the goddess. His method of overcoming idolatry is quite noticeable. The contrast between them and the teachings and character of the idol gods was the argument.

3. There was a better way of reform, if there were need, through the law courts.

4. There was danger that the Roman government might interfere and deprive a turbulent city of its greatly prized liberties.

Continuation of Paul's Third Journey

Sunday School Lesson for August 22, 1909

Specially Arranged for This Paper

LESSON TEXT—Acts 20: 1-11

Golden Text.—He said unto me: My grace is sufficient for thee. For my strength is made perfect in weakness. 2 Cor. 12: 9

TIME.—A. D. 58 or 59. Near the close of Paul's work at Ephesus.

PLACE.—The city of Ephesus.

Suggestion and Practical Thought. Some Things with Which the Gospel Interferes. The Results. Business Interests versus the Gospel.—Vs. 21-23

Paul's Plans for the Future. For at least two years and three months Paul had been working in Ephesus and was about ready to go on extending Christianity even to Rome (see Rom. 1: 13, 15, 24) and on to Spain (Rom. 15: 24), after visiting and strengthening the churches in Macedonia and Greece and bearing the gifts of Philippi, Thessalonica, Berea, Corinth and other Gentile churches (Rom. 15: 26) to the poor in Jerusalem.

In Corinth he expected to receive contributions for the poor in Jerusalem (1 Cor. 16: 1-4).

He sent two of his helpers, Timothy and Erastus (2 Tim. 4: 20), through Macedonia to Corinth (1 Cor. 4: 17-19) to prepare that church for his approaching visit. Paul succeeded in all these plans, but some of them were accomplished in a very different manner.

Paul "stayed in Asia for a season" (V. 22). Apparently for several weeks or months. From the fact that Asia is mentioned rather than Ephesus, its capital, it has been inferred that he did not remain in the city all the time, but labored in the outlying districts.

A Contrast. In our last lesson we saw how Christians voluntarily gave up a bad business, at great cost to themselves, for Christ's sake. Now we find some men who tried to destroy the Gospel because it was injuring their bad business.

"There arose no small stir," commotion, like the sea in a storm. "A certain man named Demetrius," probably the head of the whole guild of shrine makers.

Diana. The Ephesian Diana was a distinct goddess from the Greek Diana (the Latinized form of Artemis) who was a virgin, a huntress, a personification of the moon, as Apollo was of the sun. She was worshipped with the vilest debaucheries, as many of the heathen idols were, incorporating the lusts of the flesh in the very ritual of worship.

"Our craft is in danger," because "this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that they be no gods, which are made with hands," and this "throughout all Asia," the Roman province of that name, of which Ephesus was the capital. All the blessings of the Gospel, the uplift, the renovated character, the happiness and prosperity, and eternal salvation of the great mass of the people, weighed nothing against the money gains of a few men in a bad business.

This was in direct contrast with the character of the Christians, who made great sacrifices in burning their own (not other people's) bad books which were injuring the people.

The Mob in the Coliseum.—V. 29: 41. "The whole city was filled with confusion." The mob of Ephesus made for the house of Aquila, with whom Paul was lodging. "Rushed with one accord into the theater," the Coliseum, capable of holding 55,000 people.

The prospects are that the Legislature will adjourn next week.

The House of Representatives on Tuesday passed the Jury Commission bill. This is the bill prepared by the State Bar Association.

Some thoughtful members of the Legislature, breathing quietly in the short recess which Saturday and Sunday always bring, were making a resume of what extra cost the present session of the Legislature would entail on the people. At first their dread of the expense was based on the cost of the session itself direct. That was enough to cause them to pause and come here in a hurry.

But by actual figures, these members have found out that the expense of the legislation in itself is but a fourth of what is to come as the consequence of the legislation. It is estimated that with the extra appropriations, with the creation of new offices, the holding of the special election on constitutional prohibition, and the advertising for amendments that may yet be submitted at the regular election of 1910, the total cost, direct and indirect, of the extra session would amount to about $175,000. And it may be more than this before the adjournment comes.—Advertiser.

AN ORDINANCE

Be it ordained by the Town Council of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, as follows:

Section 2. That it shall be unlawful for the owner or keeper of any dog to permit it to be at large upon a highway of the Town unless such owner or keeper shall obtain a license from the Town permitting such dog to be at large upon a highway of the Town, and shall also cause a collar to be worn by such dog, upon which highway, upon which collar shall appear the name or initials and the post office address of the owner or keeper, and any person guilty of a violation of this Ordinance shall, upon conviction, be fined not less than $1.00 nor more than $100.00.

Section 3. That to obtain the license provided for by this Ordinance the owner or keeper of any dog must make application in writing signed by him or her to the Clerk of the Town, which application shall show the post office address of the applicant, the sex, color, a brief description and the name—if the dog has a name—of the dog for which the license is sought, and shall deposit with the Clerk, for the use of the Town, $1.00 for each dog and shall pay to the Clerk twenty-five cents as a fee for issuing each license under this Ordinance, and thereupon the Clerk shall issue to such applicant a license signed by him showing the deposit of said $1.00, the payment of said fee, the post office address of the applicant, the sex, color and such other description of the dog as may be given in the application, and that the dog mentioned in the license may be at large upon the highways of the Town for one year from the date of such license if it shall have on a collar, when upon a highway of the Town, upon which collar the name or initials and the post office address of the owner or keeper appear. And the Clerk of the Town shall file and keep such application, and shall make a stub or record of such license.

Section 4. Any dog found at large upon a highway of the Town which shall not have on a collar as herein provided for, shall be taken up by the Marshal of the Town and confined until noon of the third day after it is taken up, when it shall be killed or disposed of as hereinafter provided, and the Marshal shall, within three hours after taking up such dog, post a notice at the post office door in said Town, which notice shall show when such dog was taken up, the sex and color of such dog, and such other brief description thereof as may be practicable, and the time when such dog will be killed. If the owner or keeper of such dog be within the Town and be known by the Marshal to be the owner or keeper, the Marshal shall serve a like notice upon such owner or keeper.

Section 5. Unless such dog be reclaimed by the owner or keeper thereof the Marshal of the Town shall kill it at the appointed time, or he may give it to such person as will remove it from the Town or will take out a license for it, but before any person shall be entitled to reclaim such dog or to take out a license for it he must first pay to the Marshal a fee of $2.50 for taking up and keeping such dog, which fee is hereby fixed and established.

Section 6. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances of the Town of Clanton in conflict with this ordinance be and the same is hereby repealed.

Passed this 2d day of August, 1909.

This space for Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothing--the best Clothes on earth

YOU'RE going to have, this coming Fall, a chance to buy and wear the Best Clothes in the World; the kind of clothes that well-dressed men are always glad to buy.

HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX CLOTHES

are to be the features of our line this coming season; and we want every man of you to know it early, and keep it in mind for the time you next think of buying clothes.

We are making a specialty of these goods because we want you to get the greatest possible value for your money.

You want value; that's the only real way to economize in clothes; and value means the sort of quality Hart, Schaffner & Marx put into their goods. They're all wool, in every thread of fabrics, they represent the products of the best weaves in the world, and they offer a greater variety for your selection than you'll find in any half-dozen other make put together.

But all-wool, vitally important as it is to your interest as a wearer, is not the only thing we know about Hart, Schaffner & Marx quality. These clothes are designed right; the whole question of fit depends on that; and it's important to you to know that you can be correctly fitted without trouble here.

They're correct in style, of course, and perfectly tailored; these makers know their business well enough not to spoil good all-wool fabrics, fine linings and trimmings by designing and tailoring that are wrong.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx are the best clothes makers in the world; and every dollar of value they put into the goods is there for you to get out in the wear.

We are discontinuing our other CLOTHING at a sacrifice price to make room for the Hart, Schaffner & Marx line, while they last, 50 cents on the dollar from the original price will be what we ask; better get into one quick.

GENTLEMEN!

We are going to sell every Suit of Clothing in this house before going to market, if possible. If you want to buy two suits for the price of one, now is your time to take advantage of the opportunity.

DR. FURNIVALL IN A UNIQUE CRIMINAL SOLUTION

THE "PLANT" AT NUMBER SEVENTY-SIX

BY DR. GEORGE F. BUTLER AND HERBERT ILSLEY

ON THE comparatively deserted side street it happened that, at 20 minutes past three in the afternoon, four persons, all strangers to one another, met in front of the house numbered 76. One of these individuals was a Russian rag-picker, another had the appearance of an Irish working woman, the third looked as if he might be an Italian barber, and the last, by his manner, cast of features and the melange of perfumes radiated by his clothing, could only be an American drug clerk. Precisely at the moment when these types of a cosmopolitan civilization were about to pass the house a pistol shot rang out from it, closely followed by a scream, which stopped suddenly before it was finished, as if it had been stifled. All four of the pedestrians halted, staring up at the window on the first floor. Then the Russian shifted his bag to the other shoulder, said: "Nitcherov" (it is nothing), and walked on puffing his cigarette; the Irish woman began to cry out and call upon the saints; the barber ran away to the police station, and the American, darting up the steps, rang the bell furiously.

There was a sound within of creaking boards and rustling, as if a number of women were hurriedly descending the stairs, and the young man expected the door to be opened at once, but the noises died away and the house became still. He shook the door, but it was of oak, well-built and solid, and he could make no impression on it. With only the slightest hesitation he put his elbow through the glass of the bay window at the side of the steps, reached in, unfashioned the catch, pushed up the sash and crawled into the parlor. There the first object to meet his astonished eyes was an old woman fast asleep in a corner, her arm chair facing the old-fashioned doorbell wheel, at the end of its long coil of flat steel spring, was still jangling noisily with the energy his own arm had communicated to it. On a table at the woman's side lay an ear trumpet of exaggerated dimensions.

Excited and alarmed he threw her an impatient glance and then rushed out and up the stairs. On the first landing he heard moans, and through the open doorway of the front chamber saw the body of a man on the floor, blood flowing from a wound in the temple, while a large revolver lay across the threshold of the room. Except for one overturned chair and a rumpled couch-cover the apartment was in perfect order, its peaceful aspect and its luxurious furnishings forming an incongruous setting for the tragedy.

As the stranger sprang to assist the wounded man the deaf woman came hurrying up in pursuit of him.

"Isn't there anybody but us in this house?"

"No," she answered. "All my lodgers are men, who are away down town during the day—except Mr. Hines here, who is in and out at all times. He is wealthy and does no business."

Then he raised his voice: "You say Mr. Hines had one visitor—was it a man or a woman?"

"A man—Mr. Wells-Clements, the young society millionaire of Commonwealth avenue." She was conspicuously proud to mention the fact of such an aristocratic caller at her house.

At that moment the doorbell rang. On opening the door Mrs. Rogers found the doctor standing there with two policemen and another individual, who proved to be a detective.

While the doctor began to work on the patient the officers listened to the story of the young man. He told in a few words what Mrs. Rogers had said and what little he personally knew of the matter, laying stress on the fact that he had certainly heard sounds in the hall as if at least two women with rustling skirts were hurrying up or down stairs, stepping several times on loose and creaking boards. Then the policemen separated to search the house, the young man left his card and returned to his business, while the detective occupied himself with an examination of the victim and his room.

"How bad is it?" he asked the doctor in a whisper. He was a short, heavy, clean-faced man, deliberate in speech and manner. Symonds by name.

"I can't tell yet. He is stunned, and there's a slight fracture of the skull. I haven't finished looking him over yet."

Symonds peered into the thin, young face a moment and then entering an inner room, which was evidently a study, began without compunctions to read the opened letters which he found on the desk. In one short note he found the following, dated the day before:

"Dear Hines: I'll see you tomorrow at three, or a little before. Can stay only a minute—engagements. So have it all ready—G."

"That's Clements!" muttered the detective.

The doctor came in at the moment with a sheet of paper in his hand which he passed to the detective, saying:

"This fell from his clothes somewhere just now. It has a strange look, considering the circumstances, and in case he shouldn't recover—"

"Is there any danger of that?" Symonds interrupted, quickly.

"There is no telling yet. You would better copy that, at all events. It may be nothing—still I would make sure of it."

Symonds looked at the paper and thought so too, most decidedly, for it was, or seemed to be, nothing less than a note in cypher. It ran:

"I ckecoco mcfmcm cmeccocof con ckeckff ckeckceuf onf ckeckck cee c m kfmeg lcfck onfce onkfoceccce cefococckel cfcece cmf ofceock ckeclcl cgrfo ceece keoge onkf omcof lckf l cmoocion ceecon of cfcece."

There was neither address nor signature nor date, but the detective set himself at once to copying it out, for, as the doctor said, in the circumstances it had a queer look. When he had taken the characters down he returned the paper, at the same time suggesting a search of the patient's pockets for additional finds. And as the doctor gave him one glance and returned to the parlor, he left the bewildered Symonds reflecting that here was a man who was trying to impress him with the notion that he was altogether too good for this world.

The policeman who had examined the lower parts of the house returned saying that the rooms were all deserted, and appeared as if nobody had been in them for hours. The fire in the range was so low that the kitchen was like a barn, and the doors were wide open all the way out from the basement hall—four of them; and the gate itself, in the back fence which gave on a lane, though it was closed, had not one of its three bolts shot into place.

"You go out the back door," said the detective, "and see if you can find anybody that saw any woman, or anybody else, going in or out that gate. Whoever it was that did it must have slid in that way, and with all them winders over there somebody must have seen 'em."

"They might have gone out that way," returned the policeman, "but I don't see how they could go to work to get in. The back ways is kept bolted up tighter—all them gates along there in the lane—than the front ways is. And there's all them doors—four of 'em! And every one always locked up tighter'n a drum. I'll be chere."

"You go on and do as you're told. Maybe the maids left 'em open on purpose for somebody—how do we know? We got to go slow, a little at a time, and pick it up wherever we can. You go over there to them houses. It's a chance of getting wise to something, anyway, and we'll take it."

The officer started without more words, and the detective ascended to ward the upper regions. He met the second policeman coming down, and his report of the condition of the top floors was a repetition of the other man's regarding the lower ones. He said that the doors were open all the way up, a ladder led to the skylight, and that also was half-wide. "A bunch of yeggmen," he said, "might slide in from the roof and skate all over the premises unbeknownst with only deaf to buck against, and she asleep in the parlor!"

"Well, then, you go to the neighbors in this block and find out what you can," Symonds ordered. "It's likely enough they came in by the skylight and skipped out by the gate. That would account for the open doors down there—if the maids wasn't in the game. I'll hang round here some and see how the boy pulls on. If he comes to it will save us a bunch of trouble."

The doctor entered noiselessly and closed the door.

"He's malingering," he said, in an undertone, nodding sideways in the patient's direction. "If he will he can speak as well as you or I can."

"Why, that's funny, too!" Symonds exclaimed in a whisper.

"He probably has his reasons. He is hurt but very little and doubtless has been conscious some time, perhaps hearing all that has passed in his room. But we'll fix him. Just put your foot up here—sit down and rest your leg on this chair. There, I'll show you what I want you to do."

He held the foot firmly by the heel with one hand and with the other gave the toe a sudden, sharp twist inward.

"Ouch! Quit it!" cried Symonds. His face for once expressed something and it was not anything pleasant.

"That was very gentle," said the doctor. "It did not hurt really, only surprised you. That is what I wish you to do to my patient. Go in and, under the pretense of removing his shoe, give him that leg twist—not too hard, but hard enough to make him sit up and say something. Then we shall have him where we want him."

"Yes, I guess," said Symonds, eyeing the doctor. He suspected malice on account of the proposition he had made to rifle Hines' pockets, and which had been so contemptuously refused. However, the doctor's face was straight and, muttering, the detective entered the parlor. The next instant a loud imprecation from the wounded man and a string of lurid adjectives following from the same source indicated that the detective might not feel above spite, whatever stand others might take.

The doctor entered quickly at the sound of the voice.

"Ah, this is good," he cried. "I was sure you would come around in a few minutes. But you mustn't excite yourself. Drink this and then you will be able to tell us who assaulted you."

For a moment Hines looked as if he would like to charge the detective with the role he had only meant to do the invalid a kindness by removing his left shoe. But he swallowed the medicine presently and, passing the glass back, said:

"The man who shot me was Charlie Mains."

The doctor examined him keenly as he made the statement, and the detective thought, "He's lying. What for?" And then he asked:

"Tell us how it happened?"

"I scarcely know myself," Hines answered. He paused to consider, and both men knew by the expression of the eyes that they were about to hear an invention and not the truth. "Charlie wished me to lend him some money," he finally went on, "and I couldn't, because I had none. He wrote to me several times about it. One of his notes is in there—pointing towards the inner room. 'Would you mind getting the bunch of letters on my desk?' He looked at the detective.

"I'll show you," Symonds knew that the note referred to was the one in his own pocket. The signature "C," then, was not that of Clements, but stood for "Charlie." While he hastened into the study and brought out the letters, placing the one wanted among them, he was thinking, "How badly easy it is to raise a false hunch! I'd have crossed my throat that 'C' meant 'Clements.'"

Hines selected the note from the pile and read it aloud, and then held it up for them to see.

"There's the date on the envelope," he said, "and there's the 'C' for 'Charlie.' The appointment was for to-day, and he kept it. I could not raise the money, and he said I could if I wished, but wouldn't. He had words and he struck me. Then he grabbed my revolver from the table and let me have it. I didn't know anything after that."

The detective watched him with all his eyes. Why did he think it necessary to go into details, fortifying the story with proofs? The natural way would be for him to make the charge, leaving the details and proofs until they were called for. And then if the story were true, where did Clements come in? The lodging mistress, who knew him, had admitted him to the house at two minutes of three, scarcely 20 minutes before the shooting. Was Clements the guilty one, and was the victim trying to screen him? If so, why? And why should he accuse Mains falsely? Moreover, what about those hurrying women heard by the young man in the hall the very moment after the shooting?

Hines probably felt that the detective was skeptical, for after gazing from him to the physician, neither of whom spoke a word in comment, a fact that must have struck him as queer, to say the least, in the circumstances, he drew another paper from his pocket, saying, as if to cap the climax of proof:

"This is the note in which he mentions what he wants—ten thousand."

"Ten thousand!" Symonds exclaimed. Then he whistled softly.

"Yes. You see how cautious he was about it—it is in cipher."

He held it toward them and they saw that it was the one the detective had copied.

"What does it say?" asked Symonds.

He put it to his near-sighted eyes and read slowly:

"I shall come Monday at three, bringing a receipt for $10,000. Which I shall expect to find ready. Send me your door key and have the way clear. I must not be seen."

"Ah, that's how he got in!" Symonds exclaimed. "But," he added, "why didn't he want to be seen?"

The patient waved his hand.

"Here's a mess," he grunted. "There's Clements, and there's Mains, and here's two females, nary one of the parties connected with any of the others, seems like, and all of 'em Johnny-on-the-spot at the same time, about, old deaf knowing nothing of any of 'em but Clements, and Hines lying right and left on the whole controversy as referred were the last thought in his mind. It was in cases of this nature that his remarkable stolidity of face stood him in such good stead.

Mr. Hines hesitated the moment "trick."

"I fancy it would not be violating a confidence now," he said. "It is the cost-mark used by my father when he was in business, and Charlie and I made a cipher out of it just for the fun of the thing, corresponding by means of it at times since we were boys together. We were school chums, you know."

It seemed to the detective that the man was playing for time. A hunted, insincere gleam flickered in his eyes, and the voice and manner suggested a man who, frightened at the near approach of a calamity, is weakly and confusedly trying to think up a way of escape.

"Well," said Symonds, all the more insistent by reason of this fearful attitude. He produced a pencil, wet it in his mouth, put the point against a page of his notebook and looked expectant. Then Hines said in a faint voice:

"The cost-mark is 'come fluking.' The 'g' is a repeater."

"Yes," Symonds wrote it down.

"Now, how do you work it when you write a letter?"

It was evident to both the doctor and the detective that only a pressing need to conciliate them and avoid all appearance of hesitancy prevented the young fellow from taking a high air over this question, refusing to answer it and ordering them, or at least the detective, from the room. As it was, he attempted to conceal his anger under a pretense of careful thought.

And presently he said:

"I can illustrate. Suppose you wish to write the word 'shall.' The first letter of that word, 's,' is the nineteenth letter of the alphabet; the second is 'h,' the eighth of the alphabet; the last two are 'l,' the twelfth of the alphabet. So that if you put 'shall' in these figures you have '19-8-12-12.' Now see what letters in the cost-mark stand for these figures. They are 'ckecoco,' which means 'shall.' There you have the key to the simple cipher."

He threw his hand out carelessly, as if to drop the note on the table and have done with the matter, but an open bottle of ink stood in the way, with a penholder protruding from its neck, and his fingers struck and knocked it to the floor. The paper fell with it, and reaching quickly to recover it, he succeeded only in pressing it into the great blot of ink that lay thick on the rich carpet. There he let it remain, with an exclamation against his clumsiness, but the detective hastily rescued it. Then he saw that the characters were hopelessly blurred. It would be impossible to make them out with any certainty.

The expression of relief that flashed into Hines' face when he realized this, amused Symonds, seeing that a true copy of the note, the key to which he now possessed, lay sprawled over half a page of the notebook he held in his hand above that very key. Soon he would work out a solution of it himself. He was not satisfied with the one given, and this desperate and successful attempt to render the characters illegible convinced him beyond all doubt that the interpretation had been a false one, if for no other reason than that he must have one that would be true.

"Well, it's gone up," he said. "But no matter. You've read it to us, and that's enough. Give me this here Charlie Mains' address and I'll get a warrant for him."

But when he had written down the street and number he did not hurry away for the warrant. Instead, he slipped into the study and, with paper and pencil, set to work on the cryptogram. After many blunders and erasures, for he was no scribe, he finally made the following arrangement of the alphabet and cost-mark:

a b c d e f g h i j k l m n o p q r s t u v w x y z

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26

c o m e f l u k i n g

The first letter of the cipher, "c," was then easily seen to be the ninth of the cost-mark; therefore it stood for the ninth letter of the alphabet, which also was "i." Working on this principle, he at length had the translation before him. It read, with proper punctuation and capitals:

"I shall come on Monday at three, bringing the papers and a check for ten thousand dollars. Send me your pass key and have the way clear. I must not be seen."

"Aha!" he exclaimed, jumping up exultantly. "whoever it was that came brought ten thousand, and didn't come for it! What does that mean?"

As if to answer his question, the officer who had been detailed to investigate the back way tiptoed in, saying:

"There was two swell petticoats skipped out the gate in a hurry. I got four witnesses that seen 'em. It was 3:20, on the tick, and that sizes up slick with the gun-play, don't it?"

"Not the maids!" Symonds asked quickly.

"No, my parties know them all right. These was strangers, and swell down to the ground. They beat it for a record up the lane and slid into a cab they had over on Worcester street."

Symonds scratched his head.

"Here's a mess," he grunted. "There's Clements, and there's Mains, and here's two females, nary one of the parties connected with any of the others, seems like, and all of 'em Johnny-on-the-spot at the same time, about, old deaf knowing nothing of any of 'em but Clements, and Hines lying right and left on the whole business. It's a stage break all round. It gets me. Why is Hines handing out that dope? Who is these here women? How does it size up that Clements has been here, according to deaf, Hines never opening his head about him, while at the same time Mains has been here, according to Hines, deaf never letting on, and both of 'em mum on the swell petticoats? Somebody made up the cipher asking for the door-key, and s'posin he got it, that would account for him; but then what about all the others—how did they get in? Who could be bringing Hines' ten thousand? If only I had some way of opening that Willie boy's mouth—"

He got as far as this in his soliloquy when he stopped, stared a moment into vacancy, and then, bringing one hand down upon the other with a smack of the palms, grabbed the telephone receiver that stood on the desk and soon was in conversation with Dr. Furnivall.

"We got him now, all right," he said jubilantly a moment later to the policeman. "Dr. Furnivall is on the way here. He won't be ten minutes. He thinks the man is dying—and so he is, for all I know," he added virtuously, palliating his mendacity to the doctor. "You go down and let him in, Usher, so he won't ring."

The policeman, who never before had seen Dr. Furnivall, was greatly disappointed, as well as surprised, by his appearance when he arrived. From his reputation as an adept in occultism he had expected to see, he scarcely knew what—a person wild-eyed and long-haired, at least, with an uncanny personality, like the performers of the levitation act on museum stages, or the "professors" of hypnotism who put sly-faced youths through funny stunts before the rural audiences. And he did not look for much from this unostentatious, ordinary appearing gentleman with the full beard, thick, colored spectacles and quiet suit of black.

But if he was disappointed with the doctor's appearance he was more so with his methods, for, after Detective Symonds had told him the story, indicating what he should like to find out, and Dr. Furnivall approached the patient with his questions, he made no more use of mystery, of passes and poses and hand-washings in the air than any man would do in ordinary conversation. He simply stood before the reclining subject and, removing his colored spectacles, said, looking the young fellow in the eye:

"Mr. Hines, who shot you?"

The policeman scarcely could repress a sniff of contempt at this mild procedure, and when Hines answered, as he had to the detective, "Charlie Mains," and then went on with the story just as he had told it before, the blue-coated shoulders rose in a shrug. The thing was a farce, and he was about to consult the detective with his eyes to see how he took it when he noticed a change in the speaker's countenance that riveted his attention. In the full flow of his words he stopped, his eyes fixed on the doctor's, a look of surprise sprang into his face, and this was succeeded almost at once by a hesitant, appealing expression, which gave way to a matter-of-fact content, changing slowly to earnestness, and finally settling into a look of deep abstraction. Then he resumed, in a voice without inflection, as if a machine were speaking:

"I shot myself!"

The policeman and detective uttered an exclamation, but Dr. Furnivall motioned for silence.

"Go on," he said to Hines. "Why did you do it? Tell me the whole story."

The monotonous voice proceeded at once, the eyes glazed, as it were, to Dr. Furnivall's, but seeing only the page of memory within.

"I wanted some money, and as my father would allow me only a trifle of two hundred a month I asked my sister for it. She has enough in her own right, but father forbade her giving me any, because I don't just please him in everything, and she didn't dare to disobey him. But I scared her into promising at last, and she wrote to me, in a cipher that we had played with as children, asking for my key and saying she would bring me ten thousand—half what I wanted. She came, with a girl friend, and in trying to frighten her into making the check larger I snatched up my revolver. I was angry and desperate, and I don't know whether I meant to threaten her or make her believe I would commit suicide. But somehow the revolver went off, the bullet striking me in the head, and they screamed and ran."

He stopped speaking. Symonds was disgusted.

"All this fine plant runs into a measly little accident to a measly little Willie-boy!" he grunted. "Well, anyway, he ain't said why he laid the bunch on Mains—maybe there's something there we can get on the question."

Dr. Furnivall put the question. "Mains was cutting me out with a girl," was the answer. "The thought came to me while I was lying there that I could accuse him. I had Clements' note, who was coming for some books I was to lend him, and I could say it was from Mains. I didn't know how badly I was injured, but if I died it would be murder, and if I lived the charge would hurt him, anyway. The girls wouldn't dare to say anything, for fear of father."

The two physicians looked down into the degenerate face, then at each other, and with one impulse turned and left the room. On the stairs they heard a sudden howl of pain from the chamber. The first doctor smiled. The resourceful Symonds, celebrating the young man's escape from any very serious charge, was evidently attempting to do him a second kindness by removing the other shoe.

Paxtine TOILET ANTISEPTIC
NOTHING LIKE IT FOR—

THE TEETH Paxtine exerts any desirable removing action from the teeth, leaving them all white and free from decay and disease which ordinary tooth preparations cannot do.

THE MOUTH Paxtine used as a mouth wash disinfects the mouth and throat, purifies the breath, and kills the germs which collect in the mouth, causing sore throat, bad teeth, bad breath, grippe, and much sickness.

THE EYES when inflamed, tired, and sore, may be instantly relieved and strengthened by Paxtine.

CATARRH Paxtine will destroy the germ that causes catarrh, heal the inflammation and stop the discharge. It is a sure remedy for uterine catarrh.

Paxtine is a harmless yet powerful germicide, disinfectant and deodorant. Used as a bath it destroys odors and leaves the body antiseptic and clean.

HEARTLESS.

Horace—Ah! Miss Gwace, what should a young man do when he wants to write spring poetry?
Grace—He should see a doctor.

Sweet Eighteen.

A professor of the class in English history was telling his young men of the impressionable age about the Elizabethan era, when suddenly turning to one of the young men who seemed to be in a dream, with a faraway gaze, he said:

"And how old was Elizabeth, Mr. Case?"

"Eighteen last birthday," came the instant reply.

A Hot Prescription.

"I want you to prescribe for me, doctor," said the sallow complexioned man. "I have cold feet; what would you suggest?"

"A ton of coal," promptly replied the witty physician. "Five dollars, please."

THE NEW WOMAN
Made Over by Quitting Coffee.

Coffee probably wrecks a greater percentage of Southerners than of Northern people for Southerners use it more freely.

The work it does is distressing enough in some instances; as an illustration, a woman of Richmond, Va., writes:

"I was a coffee drinker for years and for about six years my health was completely shattered. I suffered fearfully with headache and nervousness, also palpitation of the heart and loss of appetite."

"My sight gradually began to fail and finally I lost the sight of one eye altogether. The eye was operated upon and the sight partially restored, then I became totally blind in the other eye."

"My doctor used to urge me to give up coffee, but I was willful and continued to drink it until finally in a case of severe illness the doctor insisted that I must give up the coffee, so I began using Postum, and in a month I felt like a new creature."

"I steadily gained in health and strength. About a month ago I began using Grape-Nuts food and the effect has been wonderful. I really feel like a new woman and have gained about 25 pounds."

"I am quite an elderly lady and before using Postum and Grape-Nuts I could not walk a square without exceeding fatigue, now I walk ten or twelve without feeling it. Formerly in reading I could remember but little but now my memory holds fast what I read."

Several friends who have seen the remarkable effects of Postum and Grape-Nuts on me have urged that I give the facts to the public for the sake of suffering humanity, so, although I dislike publicity, you can publish this letter if you like."

Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

A City Clerk's Garden.

A city clerk never misses a chance of expatiating on his garden to his colleagues, who, however, were never taken home to see it, but were under the impression it was of enormous size. Five of them resolved to have a look at it, discovered his address, and called one Saturday afternoon to see the hundreds of roses all growing and a-blooming. On being taken to the rear of the house, judge of their surprise on seeing a back yard about 12 feet by ten feet. One bold spirit ventured that it was not very big.

Widow to Widowers.

Mr. Robert Marshall, a well-known London police court missionary, recently received the following letter:

"Dear Sir: Reading of you sometimes in newspapers, I take the liberty of asking if you know of a very respectable man wish to get married again. I have been a widow for years now and am all alone in the world. Trusting to your honor and remaining yours respectfully, Mrs. —, middle age."

Poached Eggs in Cream.

Put a quart of hot water into a frying pan with a tablespoonful of vinegar and a teaspoonful of salt. Break each egg separately into a saucer first and slip it carefully into the water. Let it simmer until the white is set, lift it out with a skimmer and place it on a hot dish. Empty out the saucepan, put in half a cup of cream or milk, a heaping teaspoonful of flour. Stir until thick and pour over the eggs, which may be on toast or not as desired. Serve immediately.

BABEL BUILDING

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D.,
Pastor of the Chicago Ave. (Meady) Church, Chicago.

Our childish notion that the purpose of these Babel builders was to make a tower so high that they might climb into Heaven upon it has no support in the record. They did not want to go to Heaven, but, on the contrary, to remain and have fame upon the earth. "Let us make us a name" expresses their purpose in building both city and tower. The expression "unto Heaven" does not mean "into Heaven." "Whose top may touch the sky" expresses the meaning. In our modern speech we would say a "skyscraper." The same thought is expressed in Gen. 11:23, when the cities of the Canaanites are said to have been "great and walled up to heaven." Their walls were "skyscrapers."

The inquiry of this city and tower building was in the fact that they built only for themselves. "Let us make us a name, lest we be scattered," gives the motive which reveals the moral quality of the purpose. They would, like Cain, build a city and a civilization without altar or temple. They would eliminate God. They are self-centered, self-sufficient and self-satisfied.

But God will not be left out. He thrusts himself upon nations, communities and individuals who would leave him out of their lives and plans. "The Lord came down to see the city and the tower which the children of men build." They would erect monuments to man, but no temple to God. Humanity was their God. Their creed was that man is the highest expression of God and, therefore, needs no other God. They deified self. But God will not be ignored.

He saw the evil which would result from their self-deifying course and struck the note of warning. "This they begin to do and now nothing will be restrained from them which they have imagined to do." Evil, if left alone, will grow worse and worse. "Imagination," says Napoleon, "rules the world," and evil imagination is a mighty power against God and righteousness. To let sin alone is to cultivate it.

"The Lord did then confound the language of all the earth." When men leave God out of their thoughts and plans his method is to confound their language and thus break up their federation of unbelief. The infidelity of one age destroys the fidelity of another age. A few years ago agnosticism was popular in the world of unbelief; now it is almost extinct, destroyed by another cult of unbelief, which asserts that everybody can easily know God, for everything is God. When a new infidel fad arises in any quarter, you only have to wait awhile to see another infidel fad arise and destroy it. Babel builders of all ages are thus confounded in language and scattered. The selfish ambition of one soon conflicts with the self-interest of another and the result is alienation. Self-seeking brings confusion. It leads to misunderstandings and divisions.

We are all building babels or temples. A temple is a structure built for God, dedicated to God in every part and used only for God. A Babel is a structure built for self, dedicated to self and used for self. Is our business a temple for God or a Babel for self? Is our home a temple or a Babel? Is our single purpose to glorify Christ or would we like to share the glory with him? Is it, then, half temple and half Babel we are building? May these questions search our hearts in such a way as to result in every life's becoming a temple for God.

Napoleon III. of France decided that Rosa Bonheur, the famous painter of animals, was worthy of the cross of the Legion of Honor, but he hesitated about giving it, for no other woman had been thus honored. One day the empress visited Rosa in her studio and found her in soiled working garb, no little embarrassed by this sudden appearance of royalty in her workshop, and the embarrassment was increased when the empress gave her an affectionate kiss. But after the empress had departed, imagine the surprise of the artist when she saw, pinned on her soiled jacket the cross of the Legion of Honor. It came when she was busy with her routine duties, doing the next thing the best she could. And so God's "well done" comes to the humblest of his servants while they are busy with the humdrum work of carrying stones out of daily duties and placing them in Life's temple to his glory.

A SURE SIGN.

When It Appears Act at Once.

Trouble with the kidney secretions is a certain sign that your kidneys are diseased and that you should use Doan's Kidney Pills. They cure all irregularities and annoyances, remove catarrhs and side pains and restore the kidneys to health.

Charles Cole, 204 N. Cockeye St., Iowa, Kansas, says: "The kidney secretions were irregular, scanty and painful and contained sediment. My back was stiff and lame and my limbs swelled. I grew weak and discouraged. Doan's Kidney Pills removed these troubles entirely. I have been well for two years."

Remember the name—Doan's. Sold by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-McIlburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

HIS PLEASURE A LATE ONE.

Probably Mr. Hogan Did Not Realize Just What Might Be Made of His Expression.

Osney was dead, and to do honor to him the members of the Thirteenth district Tammany organization attended the funeral in a body, says the New York Press. Slowly and sadly they filed past the coffin and took a last look at their departed comrade.

At the door each man paused to shake hands with the sorrowing widow and to murmur a few words of condolence. When it came to Mr. Hogan's turn, he retained possession of her hand, while he delivered a lengthy oration concerning the good qualities of the deceased Mr. Casey.

"Sure, 'tis plain you knew my husband well, sir," said the tearful Mrs. Casey.

"Only by sight, ma'am, only by sight," Mr. Hogan hastened to explain. "I never had the pleasure of meeting him 'til to-day."

Eczema Made Hands and Feet Swell, Peel and Get Raw—Arms Affected, Too—Gave Up All Hope of Cure.

Quickly Cured by Cuticura.

"I suffered from eczema on my hands, arms and feet for about twelve years, my hands and feet would swell, sweat and itch, then would become callous and get very dry, then peel off and get raw. I tried most every kind of salve and ointment without success. I tried several doctors, but at last gave up thinking there was a cure for eczema. A friend of mine insisted on my trying the Cuticura Remedies, but I did not give them a trial until I got so bad that I had to do something. I secured a set and by the time they were used I could see a vast improvement and my hands and feet were healed up in no time. I have had no trouble since. Charles T. Bauer, Volant, Pa., Mar. 11, 1908."

He—A woman is peculiar in one way.
She—What's that?
He—She won't test up a love letter, even after she's forgotten who wrote it.

The Water Bug.

He was six years old and had never gazed into the mystic lens of a microscope. Several slides containing animalcula had been displayed to his astonished vision. He was too amazed to make any comment until he came to one slide that seemed more wriggly than any of the others. It was merely a drop of water.

The little fellow gazed at it a long time, with all its nimble particles of animal life, and finally exclaimed to his mother:

"Oh, mamma, now I know what it is that bites you when you drink soda water!"

Crop Growing on Small Scale.

A small holder in East Latham is making an interesting experiment in barley growing upon his land to test the possibility of raising corn on a small scale. In 1907 he sowed 78 specially selected grains of barley, which yielded 400 ears. The resulting kernels he sowed in 1908 and harvested in 14 weeks, with the result that he got a bushel of threshed barley, which he has sown this year, his object being to show what can be done in cereal cultivation from very small beginnings.—London Standard.

Wonderful.

"This is a remarkable world!" exclaimed O'Brien. "I was walking down the street this morning and I met a man I hadn't seen for about twelve years."

"Yes," rejoined Murphy, "it is a remarkable world. I just had an experience much like that myself. I was walking down the street not ten minutes ago, and I met two men—two, mind you—that I'd never met before."

Style's Freakishness.

"I want to be dressed in the height of fashion," said Mr. Suddenroll.

"I'll see to it that your clothes fit you perfectly," replied the tailor.

"But that's what I'm in doubt about. Is it fashionable just now to have your clothes fit?"

Not Her Fault.

"It is the duty of every man and woman to be married at the age of 32," said the lecturer.

"Well," said a woman of 30, with some asperity, "you needn't tell me that. Talk to the man."

WATER IN TEXAS

Irrigation of Soil in Lone Star
State Returns Much Profit.

Several Systems Established at Convenient Points Along the Rio Grande River—Largest Plant in the World Near San Benito.

Several irrigating systems have been established at convenient points along the Rio Grande river. With their installation the southwest is rapidly developing into an important agricultural section. Especially is this true near San Benito, Texas, where much attention has been given to the development of the soil through irrigation. I made a personal inspection of the most unique and largest irrigation canals in the entire southwest, if not in the world, writes L. E. Dew in Orange Judd Farmer.

This canal is watering a tract of 30,000 acres, and the results obtained by farmers who, within the brief space of 12 months, have not only cleared their land of a dense growth of cacti, mesquite and other vegetation which attested the fertility of the soil, but have raised various crops which, in production, have exceeded even their most sanguine expectations. The canal gets its water from the Rio Grande, at which point an immense head gate, which cost in construction $50,000, has been erected. This head gate acts as an intake from the waters of the river
by means of eight portals or gates, which when opened by rack and pinion lifting screws, allow the waters to pass through by natural gravitation, as the base of the head gate rests 25 feet below the deepest point of the river. An immense basin or artificial canal, 1 1/2 miles long, receives this flow in turn and passes it on to its tributary laterals and drainage ditches, which cover the 30,000 acres with a chain of waterway. The system complete comprises 11 1/4 miles of irrigation ditches.

Another important feature of this irrigating system is the introduction of a series of immense locks, stationed at frequent intervals to hold the water in check. These locks were built of reinforced concrete and are large enough to permit the passage of boats and barges which will carry the products of the farms to the nearest shipping point. They will also be used for the transportation of sugar cane direct to the sugar mill, located at a convenient point on the main canal.

The members of the Maryland
State Live Stock board will go to Chester, Queen Anne county, within a few days to make final observations of the experiments being conducted there with anti-hog cholera serum. Tests are being made on the farm of Mr. W. Irving Walker, near Chester, with the serum discovered about 16 months ago by the United States bureau of animal industry. Dr. Frank H. Mackie, state veterinarian, has high hopes of the results of the experiments and he expects to be able to announce to the farmers within a short time that epidemics of hog cholera are a thing of the past. With the use of the serum as a preventive and cure a success, over 50,000 hogs will annually be saved to the Maryland farmers.

Similar experiments are being conducted in Prince George county, but no report has been heard from there by Dr. Mackie. From Chester, however, comes the report that of the nine hogs inoculated some days ago, none of them have as yet shown any signs of the dread disease.

Alfalfa Planting.

It should not be forgotten that the spring is the proper time to prepare the alfalfa crop that is to be planted next fall. The ground which is expected to be used for this crop should not be planted to small grain; neither should corn precede alfalfa, because the ground will not be kept free of weeds and grass. The best preparatory crop for alfalfa is cowpeas; then after the vines are removed or plowed under the ground should be well broken and kept clean of weeds and grass by surface cultivation until it is seeded in alfalfa the following fall. Peanuts may be grown instead of cow peas, if the crop is considered more desirable, as it is, perhaps, but they must be kept well cultivated, and especially allow no earth grass to grow in the crop.

Rivals Spinach in the Market.

Dandelions are becoming yearly more popular as the public becomes more widely acquainted with the fact that they are raised under cultivation and that they have already almost equalled spinach in demand. A large local grower ships daily to the commission merchants an average of 100 bushels of leaves, and continues his shipments for a period of two months
every spring.

About the end of May the dandelion becomes too bitter for table use,
even when raised under cultivation.
The growers pack their crops in ordinary boxes holding a bushel each.

inch deep on about half the plank
as indicated in the accompanying illustration.

A writer in the Prairie Farmer gives the following instructions for constructing a five-horse plow even-er: Take a 2 1/2 piece of hardwood 50 inches long for the large even-er.

Five-Horse Even-er.

Bore a hole 2 1/2 inches from each end and on the larger end nine inches from the end bore another hole for the clevis, which attaches the doubletrees to the plow. On the right end of the even-er put an iron pulley to carry chain to lead horses. The general plan explains itself.

COUNTRY LIFE IS ATTRACTIVE

Agriculture is the One Profession That Stimulates the Prosperity of Entire Country.

Agriculture, the one profession which stimulates the prosperity of the entire country, is commanding increased attention at Washington and also at the capitals of the several states. Farming is the great national wealth creator, supporting not only the domestic population of 87, 000,000, but providing a vast surplus annually for export that aggregates
hundreds of millions of dollars.

The increased interest shown agriculture by legislative representatives is a spontaneous acknowledgment of the importance of husbandry as compared with other national industries.
The wealth annually produced from the soil in the United States has reached the enormous sum of $8,000, 000,000. A source of such immense wealth not only attracts the attention of state governments, but also stimu-lates their assistance.

The problem now being considered by the Washington government is,
How can the attraction of country life
be improved to encourage migration from cities to rural districts? During the early history of the American republic the population of 4,000,000 people were distributed 96 per cent. in the country and four per cent. in cities.
The trend of population for the last half century has been toward cities rather than rural districts. When there were 1,500,000 farms in the country the great mass of the people occupied farms, but to-day, when there are 6,000,000 farms in the United States, 70 per cent. of the population lives in cities.

Metropolitan cities are growing rapidly, principally from the gregarious instincts of immigrants who flock to cities and seek out a precarious existence in preference to settling in the country, where the opportunities are multiplied, as compared with the advantages in cities, to accumulate wealth. The department of immigration should arrange to show foreigners who come to our shores to make a home the great inducements that the country offers a laboring man to establish his home as compared with the opportunities of cities.

Feeding Cow Peas to Milk Cows.

Cowpeas are the next thing to alfalfa for making milk and butter.
Mix them with oats, about half and half, and sow 2 1/2 bushels to the acre. If cut when beginning to pod they make two or three crops. In poor land cut the first crop in July and after the second has made a growth of 10 or 12 inches plow it under. The peas are as good as alfalfa for enriching the land.

Lice and Worms.

The most insidious enemies of the average hog raiser are lice and worms. The feeder will often insist that he has neither in his pens, when a careful examination will detect the presence of both in large numbers.
We prefer to dip all pigs soon after weaning and to give them a course of treatment with worm powder.

What the World Owes to Baptists

By REV. A. C. DEKOR, D.D.,
Pastor of the Chicago Ave. Methodist Church, Chicago.

"This is the love of God that we keep his commandments."—1 John 5:3

for the regenerate.

In emphasizing the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's Supper as the molds of doctrine, Baptists have kept before the eyes of the world the great fundamental facts of the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. They believe that the Lord's Supper memorializes the death of Christ, while baptism symbolizes his burial and resurrection.

Baptists have always exalted the blood of Christ as the only power for cleansing the soul, alleging that there is no cleansing power in baptism.

The principle of strict obedience to every command of Christ has made Baptists for the most part enthusiastic missionaries, though a misinterpretation of the sovereignty of God caused some churches to stand aloof from the modern missionary movement. When young William Carey stood before a ministers' meeting in London and asked them whether Christians were under obligation to take the Gospel to the heathen, Dr.
John Ryland, a learned minister said:
"Young man, sit down."

The heroism of Adoniram Judson in preaching the Gospel to the Burmese, translating the Scriptures and suffering unutterable agonies in prison at Oungpenia is equaled only by the greater heroism of his wife, Anna Hassetine Judson, who, with her infant child, followed him and ministered to him in prison by supplying him with food and cheering him with words of hope.

There is a long list of Baptist hymn writers, from Felix Mantz, who in 1527 gave his life for his faith, to S. F. Smith, who wrote our national hymn, "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." Among them Benjamin Reddome, who wrote "Did Christ O'er Sinners Weep?" Samuel Stennett, who wrote
"Majestic Sweetness Sits Enthroned Upon the Saviour's Brow;" Samuel Medley, who wrote "Oh, Could I Speak the Matchless Worth" and "Awake, My Soul, in Joyful Lays;"
John Fawcett, who wrote

Best be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love.

Edward Mote, who wrote "On Christ
the Solid Rock I Stand," Oliver Holden, the author of "Coronation."

Among the Baptist preachers whose ministry has blessed the world is Christmas Evans of Wales, whose impassioned eloquence awayed the multitudes and won thousands to Christ, of whom Robert Hall said: "His one eye was so brilliant that it would light an army through a forest on a dark night."

Charles H. Spurgeon, whose preaching stirred London and in printed sermons went to the uttermost parts of the earth, and Alexander MacLaren of Manchester, famous as the greatest Biblical sermonizer of the century. F. B. Meyer, whose preaching and writing have circled the globe, and A. J. Gordon of Boston, whom Mr. Spurgeon called a "titanic ex-pounder of God's word."

I close with a quotation from the last words of Sir Henry Havelock, the hero of Lucknow, who was not only a Baptist, but so spiritual and aggressive in his religion as to win to Christ
many of his soldiers, who were known as "Havelock's Saints," and were in the habit of going from a prayer meeting to battle. As he lay dying,
November 22, 1857, he said to Sir James Outram at his side: "For more than 40 years I have so ruled my life that when death came I might face it without fear. I am not the least afraid; to die is gain. I die happy and contented." Then turning to his son, he said in a tender voice: "Come,
my son, and see how a Christian can die." He had shown how a Christian could live, and now it was an easy matter to show how a Christian could die. The Christ who died for him, was buried and rose again, in whom he trusted, had helped him so to live that death was the consummation of a noble life on earth and the beginning of a noble life in heaven. And if the Lord tarries, thus may we die
He who lives thus shall never die.

Date Cake.

One cup of sugar, creamed with half cup of butter, two well beaten eggs,
one-third quart of milk, in which dissolve half teaspoon of soda, two even cups of sifted flour with one teaspoon of cream of tartar well mixed in a pinch of salt. Have ready one cup of sliced fresh dates stoned and chopped to about the size of raisins. Roll these in very little flour and stir well through your cake. Bake in shallow pan for a full half hour. It is better if you add a pinch of all kinds of spices.

wholesale dealer in prophesies and chimes at an address in the "Manish or Italian, and giving each one a sheet bearing the prophesy already written in the language chosen. My loyal partner never permitted herself the luxury of a smile at the gross credulity all around us. Each dupe wrote his initials with lead pencil on a proper blank sheet of paper, handed to him and when 20 or 40 sheets had been collected I put them in a solid block in the wood box and numbered a jumble of polysyllables at the crowd while the invisible words were stewing into visibility.

This done, I tapped the box with the wand most majestically, opened it to the accompaniment of an incensation and distributed the sheets to its rightful victim. Shall I ever forget those scenes, always alike, the quick gasps of surprise, the gleam of staring eyes, the hastening off to a remote corner, there to read in admiralty the oracular hodgepodge I had cooked for them. Sometimes I could have sworn that I heard the paper-mache laughing. Poor old Ab! He did the work and got none of the They'll fall easy."

The machine has been seen by millions of Americans and trusted impledily by hundreds of thousands. It is to be found at nearly every seaside
and mountain resort in the country.
What met the eye of the victim was a swarthy, hollow bodiless head of paper mache mounted on a tall tube that sprang from a pedestal. The head was wrapped in a turban and the dreamy eyes peered afar into the future over a scrubby plantation of black oriental beard. That head was my familiar, and I was Abdul Aziz Khan. Had I, too, been of swarthy and oriental appearance, that fact might have been some palliation of the folly of the gables, who looked around the chest. But, far from suggesting the mysterious east, I am a blonde, blue-eyed, thin, nervous American, impossible to be mistaken for a citizen of any land east of Cape Cod.
The stupidity of the dupes was gross

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Matters of Especial Moment to the Progressive Agriculturist

As long as the union is true to itself it will command the respect of the world.

If you owe your local anything, always pay your dues before the coming is sung.

If the farmer would quit, about all that would remain for everybody else
to do would be to lie down and die.

This fight for fair prices and a square deal is not for one, two or three years, but for all time to come.

The educational work of the union is along the right lines, proper business methods and success are sure to follow.

If you have no union in your neighborhood and want one, write to the president of the union to send you an organizer.

The farmer is master of the situation. He is the king pin of the whole "backed match." All they have to do is win to pull together.

Know your colors, claim your own.
Don't fight your own battle. That's what it takes to make a true blue member of the union.

Madam and I collected the nickels and distributed the blank sheets of paper among the dupes, asking each whether he or she preferred an answer in English, French, German, Spanish or Italian, and giving each one a sheet bearing the prophecy already written in the language chosen.

FOLLOW THE GOLDEN RULE.

Write in Co-Operator Advocates
That "We Do Unto Others as We Would Be Done By."

A correspondent of the National Co-operator H. M. Courtney, insists that members of the Farmers' union should follow the golden rule in all their actions. Among other things he says:

"We are glad to learn that the world around us is learning that we are not organized to destroy legiti-mate business, but that we are to help build such business and to educate our people to better methods and ways of country life.

"We want out people to raise the standard of farm life to that degree which will command the respect of the business world. I do believe that we are fast coming to the time when a union tag to any article put on the market by the farmers will mean
such to the value of the article.

There is one way by which this can be done by doing unto others as we would have them do to us. (The Golden Rule.) Brother, how would you like for a man to gather up spilled eggs and palm them off on you for good ones? You would not like this. Let's get the best eggs, the best and best butter, best hay, best everything we have for the market.

Mean by this for us to improve along all lines by giving good weights, good measures, running over, by having everything in the best possible condition so that when our products of the farm go on the market the purchaser will know that he is dealing with strictly honest people, and that everything we sell will be just as we represent.

"A man from Denmark bought every bag of cotton from a certain farmer.
When asked why he did so, the Denmark man said that he had for the eight years bought this man's cotton, because it was gathered neat and clean and baled the same way, neat and good, and it came up to the sample all the way through.

"This is the way we want, that we, as a body of obligated brothers, will stand by the right and condemn the wrong.
I wish to say there is another way by which to learn these facts which confront us, and that is by every member of the union subscribing for the National Co-Operator and reading and studying its offered methods."

"Suffice it to say that Erath is moving up and that we are now doing business and preparing to do more in the near future. We have our warehouses and cotton yard; our cotton house is doing well, and we are now taking subscriptions for cooperative gains."

"What we want is for our people to work the raw material all we can into the manufactured product.

"The golden rule is the foundation of the institution, and as long as we recognize this and practice it we cannot fail."

"This is the pith of common sense in what Mr. Courtney says. In all transactions both by the members of the union and its agents honesty and squareness should be strictly observed. The great object of the union is to correct existing evils. In order to accomplish this end it should be strong enough to command the respect of the public and confidence of the business world. Only through fair dealing can this organization hope to succeed."

The Parcels Post.

The parcels post would help the farmer mightily, but because the merchant places a mortgage on him
when spring says it will hurt him,
the farmer opposes it, and some of these are union men. Why so? The merchant good to the greatest number is the motto of all farmers, and especially so of the union farmers, who ought in their constitution to do nothing others as they would have them do unto you, and love thy brother as thyself.—National Co-Operator.

The union stands for the best interests of the man who works. This is shown in many ways, but it stands out in bold relief in its championship of the man who tills the soil and defends the downtrodden and oppressed
in all walks of life.

The old Grange had its merits and its demerits and it did a great good in its day, but it fell short of the scientific principle of making a man's labor or the products of his labor bring its actual worth in the markets of the world.

The Farmers' Alliance was a revelation as to the power of organization and with a growth that annoyed the civilized world it fell short of its true purpose in emancipating the tillers of the soil from bucket shop bondage and the grasping greed of commercialism, yet with its shortcomings and political mistakes it taught a lesson that has been profitable to other agricultural organizations and stamped its impression upon the public policies of the world.

The union now comes upon the scene of action and stands for the best and most approved and scientific methods in farming and in marketing the products of the soil. By the proper use of the three words "education, organization and co-operation" the union and those who stand for union principles are enabled to cope with all the "powers that be" in the production and in the marketing of the products of the farm and in stamping their impression upon the public policies of the state and nation, writes George B. Terrell in National Co-Operator.

The union has not yet accomplished all it set out to do, but no man will deny that it has not been a strong factor in the development of our agricultural interests and in fixing the price of our products and in impressing our true greatness upon business men everywhere.

The failure of the union to accomplish all that its most enthusiastic followers could even hope to accomplish was caused solely by a lack of education, organization and co-operation.

I now appeal to union men everywhere to redouble their efforts, for they have just fairly started upon the great work there is to do. They can now secure the co-operation of the American Society of Equity and all other agricultural organizations in the western states. These people realize now that our interests are identical with theirs, for they see that the bucket shop gambler is the same on the boards of trade that he is in the cotton exchanges and his purpose is one and the same—to rob the wheat grower as well as the cotton grower;
in other words, he is a vampire sucking the life-blood from the wealth producers of this country.

The union is now making itself felt in a political way, without entering the domain of partisan politics. It simply uses good business sense, like all other organizations, by voting for men who represent the interest of the farmers and by sending capable men to the law-making bodies of the state and nation to impress the importance of honest laws upon those who are entrusted with authority to make the laws.

The union's demands before the recent legislature were heeded and respected as no other demands were before that legislature. The house of representatives especially heeded the requests of the union. When the bill to repeal the anti-bucket shop law was introduced it hardly got a decent hearing before the committee on agriculture, because the union men presented a solid front against the repeal of the law.

When the bill to allow nobody to weigh cotton and other products but duly elected or appointed public weighers came up, the union presented a solid front against that measure because it would virtually have put our warehouse weighers out of business. The man who introduced the bill dropped it like a "hot potato"
when he found the union was against it.

There is a great field ahead of us and we can't afford to lie down and quit the work we have undertaken until the interstate commerce commission shall work in harmony with every state commission and a just and fair system of freight and passenger rates are fixed on all the railroads in this country and until the last wheat and cotton exchange where the parties gamble in agricultural products is put out of business in the United States.

We need to unite the south and west, the sections that produce the bread that stops the hunger and the clothing that repels the cold of winter in one great band of workers for a common cause, that of humanity and the emancipation of the farmers from the slavery of commercialism.

This can be done and is being done
and when the south and west move upon congress in solid phalanx and demand the abolition of the bucket shops and gambling halls their demands will be heeded and the people will come into the possession of their own once more and reap the rewards of their own labor.

Tamworth Hog.

The Tamworth has been bred for several generations with a view to shaping this middling up differently and now we have a hog that will produce a side of backbone and from belly to backbone and from shoulder to ham, nearly all of which lean throughout, nearly all of which will be made up into the choicest breakfast bacon.

OIL KING IS VICTOR

Forced Village Saloon Keeper to Sell by Clever Coup.

How Mr. Rockefeller Bought Up Entire Town and Innkeeper Was Unable to Renew License Without Consent of Property Owners.

Tarrytown, N. Y.—John Melin, the Sleepy Hollow innkeeper, has sold his place and John D. Rockefeller has become the owner of it and closed up the only saloon in Briggsville. The sale was made through a third party, but it is known that Mr. Rockefeller is the actual buyer.

H. W. Nichols, agent for Mr. Rockefeller, and a representative of the Lawyers Title Guarantee Company of White Plains, drove up to Melin's in his automobile. The sale was fixed up so that the property passed into the hands of Edward A. Nichols, son of the guarantee company's representative. Mr. Nichols also announced the purchase of 84 acres belonging to William H. Leonard and adjoining Melin's place by John D. Rockefeller for $5,000. Mr. Rockefeller now owns all of Briggsville excepting a house south of Melin's place, which belongs to the Levy estate, and it is believed that he will eventually get that.

The price paid for Melin's place, according to Melin, was $5,500. Mr.
Nichols says it was under $5,000.
Melin said that he had no feeling about Mr. Rockefeller.

"I know nothing against Mr. Rockefeller. He is all right. He paid me my price and I sell out. To show you that I think John D. is all right I will tell you that I have packed my trunk
now to take home to Sweden with me
a book giving an account of his life.
Rockefeller is all right."

Auctioneer Robert F. White a few days ago sold all Melin's household effects, including crockery, tables, pictures, books, etc.

This ends a tedious struggle. Mr.
Rockefeller was sure to win, although Melin gave him a long chase. Mr.
Rockefeller's money was too much for the innkeeper, and when Mr. Rockefeller bought up nearly all of Briggs-ville and placed Italians in the houses with instructions not to buy anything at Melin's, it was the beginning of the end.

Melin's license expired on July 1,
and it could not be renewed without the consent of the property owners within 200 feet. As Mr. Rockefeller controlled the situation, it was impossible for anyone else to get a license.
So Melin could not sell the place, to anyone but Mr. Rockefeller, as it was of no use to anyone as a saloon, and no one could pay Mr. Rockefeller's price.

In closing the saloon Mr. Rockefeller has pleased the people in that vicinity. Melin, now that he has Mr.
Rockefeller's check, is not nearly so sore as he was.

It was reported that Mr. Rockefeller intended buying all Briggsville and turning Sleepy Hollow valley into a big lake. Others say that Mr. Rockefeller never destroys anything, and even Melin's saloon will be turned into flats or used as a clubhouse for the men on his place.

POSTAL BUSINESS BY WIRE.
German Authorities Have Plan to Telegraph Correspondence at Greatly Reduced Rate.

Berlin, Germany.—The German postal authorities are perfecting plans for an innovation of inestimable value to the business world by which letters virtually can be sent by telegraph
at a cost far below the ordinary telegraph rates. Any person desiring to communicate with another in any part of Germany has only to write a letter on a telegraph form and hand it in. It will be transmitted during the night and delivered by a letter carrier on the first regular delivery the following morning. The object is to provide a cheap and fairly rapid means of communication in those cases where instant delivery is unnecessary, or where the messages are too long to justify the expense of ordinary telegrams. The rate for the service has not yet been fixed, but the intention is to make it so much less than the present rate of five pfennigs (14 cents) a word that it will invite a large use of the convenience.

Woman Has Rare Disease.
Washington, Ind.—Mrs. Samuel Taylor, wife of a prominent retired farmer of Odon, is suffering from an illness that baffles the attending physicians in their efforts to give relief.
Little hope is entertained for her recovery. Mrs. Taylor was taken to her bed several days ago, and it was found that her blood is slowly drying up, and black spots are breaking out all over her body. Doctors say cases of this description are rare, and members of the medical profession in Davies county are watching Mrs.
Taylor's case with great interest.

Dog Reveals Woman's Death.
Pittsburg, Pa.—A dog's mournful whines at his mistress' door resulted in the finding of Mrs. Annie Graham dead in a trunk in her home. She was a widow, aged 55, and lived alone.
The coroner's deputies reported that she fell, accidentally, her neck being broken by striking a trunk, into which her body tumbled. She had been dead several days.

PHONE GIVES MARRIAGE RITE
by such destroyers as gypsy and brownish moths is pointed out by Dr.
L. O. Howard, chief of the bureau of entomology, who has just returned from an extensive trip abroad, where he inspected a number of exporting nurseries.

Dr. Howard has had imported and sent to the parasite laboratory, Melrose Highlands, Mass., many of the parasites and other natural enemies of the gypsy and brownish moths, and these will be scattered throughout the New England forests, where the pest is most prevalent.

It is declared at the bureau of entomology that the United States is almost unique in its indifference to the great importance of importing injurious insects, as quarantine and inspection laws are in force in nearly all the civilized countries of the world.

Check to Growth of Berlin.
Berlin, Germany.—The people of Berlin have met an unwelcome surprise in the disclosure that the growth of the city's population has come to a standstill.

The official figures show that in 1909 the population is 2,007,000, which is a decrease of about 50,000 from 1907. Of the suburbs belonging to "Greater Berlin" all but one show decreases. Altogether they and the city proper aggregate more than 3,000,000, but the result is a disappointment to the local enthusiasts, who have been claiming that the city would reach 6,000,000 in the next 25 years. The decrease is attributed to the depression effects of the recent business crisis.

Woman Finds She Has Sister.
New York.—Mrs. Frederick Boy-hart, wife of a Brooklyn dentist, has just discovered that she has a sister —Mrs. Laura Van Name of Flinfield, N. J. When Mrs. Boyhart's adopted mother died a month ago she left a note saying that she was not Mrs. Boyhart's mother, but had adopted her when she was a baby.
This led to the finding of her sister,
who had been adopted by another family.

BAR ICED OYSTERS

Shipping and Serving Without Licenses Forbidden.

Agricultural Department Rules That Ice Packed with Raw Product Constitutes an Adulteration—Mixes with Bivalve Juice.

Washington.—The agricultural department, which has charge of the administration of the pure food law, has ruled that ice packed in with raw oysters constitutes an adulteration. That is, the water which melts out of the ice is an adulterant addition to the oyster juice within the meaning of the law.

This decision, which has been officially conveyed by the department to the National Oyster Growers' and Dealers' association, is soon to be followed by the active enforcement of the new regulations which provide that raw oysters must be shipped in refrigerated packages where the ice and the bivalves do not come in direct contact.

This latest and most curious government interpretation of "adulteration" will not only considerably increase the cost of oysters to the consumers in New York and other large cities, but will, it is said, drive out of business many firms and corporations in New York and on Long Island and elsewhere which make a specialty of the packages in which oysters are now almost universally shipped from Fulton market to the interior of the country.

Under the new regulation it will be unlawful to serve raw oysters in cracked ice at the Waldorf-Astoria, for instance, unless the sign "These oysters are adulterated" is stuck on the plate. It will be against the law, too, for a retailer, for example, to send a dozen on the half shell on ice even to his nearest customer, who may be waiting only next door.

The big New York oyster dealers are protesting against the government's views on the subject of oyster
"adulteration." It is just plain unadulterated "tommyrot," they say, particularly in view of the fact that the agricultural department, in its secret investigation, admits it shipped oysters in ice from Biloxi, Miss., to Denver, Col., where the bivalves, at the end of the long journey, stood all tests, gastronomic and chemical.

Nowhere, the dealers say, has the claim been made by the government or anybody that the use of manufactured ice infected the oysters or made them deleterious to health. Some eastern shippers who use natural ice,
it is said, are responsible for the crusade.

The New York dealers with a southern trade are considering adopting a form of vacuum container to take the place of the ordinary shipping tubs.
The oysters will be put in them at a very low temperature and the containers will have to be re-iced at points en route.

Captive Parrot Lays Egg.
Muncie, Ind.—The theory that parrots in captivity do not lay eggs has been disproved by one whose owner is C. C. Radabaugh, a Muncie contractor. The bird is very intelligent and has been in Radabaugh's family for 21 years. She is about 25 years old. The egg is now being exhibited.

The Legislature finally adjourned Tuesday night, thus bringing to an end an eventful session.

The extra session of the Alabama Legislature, called by Senator John J. King, "the greatest political convention that ever assembled" has finished its work, and the political aspects of the results may now be determined and studied.

Greatest of all the political work accomplished was the act which plunged the State in a heated three months campaign on the amendment to place prohibition in the constitution. Then the Legislature refused to pass the biennial sessions amendment, and thus open the way for Governor Comer to run for the United States Senate. On the other hand by passing the Jury Commission bill the Legislature gave the Governor the opportunity of appointing three jury commissioners in each county and thus build up an effective political machine.

Changes in the gubernatorial situation came thick and fast. Hon. H. S. D. Mallory, most prominent in the eye of the public as a gubernatorial candidate came to the rescue of the constitutional amendment when it was hitched in the Senate with every prospect for its defeat. As a result of his timely aid he will receive the support for Governor of most of the prohibition leaders in the State. On the other hand he will probably lose a number of the local optionists of the State.

Judge Werkley, it was figured when the Legislature met would be greatly strengthened by the extra session, as a candidate for governor. It was expected that the prohibition legislation, the bills for which he wrote, would greatly strengthen his prestige.—Advertiser.

Sleeping Car Trips.
"I have noticed one thing about sleeping car journeys," he remarked, "and that is that I always sleep better coming home than I did going away. Whatever may be the cause, such is the case. Sometimes leaving home a man has worries or thoughts that won't let him rest easily, and by the time he finishes his work in the place he went to his mind has swung around all right again. It doesn't make the slightest difference whether I have an upper or a lower berth when I make the trip away. Then I can't sleep. On the contrary, I can sleep anywhere on the way home."—New York Sun.

His Worthless Son.
There lives an old negro truck farmer in Alabama who has frequent occasion to reproach his children for their lack of industry.

"What yo' talkin' 'bout, pap?" asked the son. "What yo' think yo' do den?"
"I'd disinherit yo'! Dat's what I do!" exclaimed the old man wrathfully.—Lippincott's.

YOU'RE going to have, this coming Fall, a chance to buy and wear the Best Clothes in the World; the kind of clothes that well-dressed men are always glad to buy.

HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX CLOTHES

are to be the features of our line this coming season; and we want every man of you to know it early, and keep it in mind for the time you next think of buying clothes.

We are making a specialty of these goods because we want you to get the greatest possible value for your money.

You want value; that's the only real way to economize in clothes; and value means the sort of quality Hart, Schaffner & Marx put into their goods. They're all wool, in every thread of fabrics, they represent the products of the best weaves in the world, and they offer a greater variety for your selection than you'll find in any half-dozen other make put together.

But all-wool, vitally important as it is to your interest as a wearer, is not the only thing we know about Hart, Schaffner & Marx quality. These clothes are designed right; the whole question of fit depends on that; and it's important to you to know that you can be correctly fitted without trouble here.

They're correct in style, of course, and perfectly tailored; these makers know their business well enough not to spoil good all-wool fabrics, fine linings and trimmings by designing and tailoring that are wrong.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx are the best clothes makers in the world; and every dollar of value they put into the goods is there for you to get out in the wear.

We are discontinuing our other CLOTHING at a sacrifice price to make room for the Hart, Schaffner & Marx line, while they last, 50 cents on the dollar from the original price will be what we ask; better get into one quick.

GENTLEMEN!

We are going to sell every Suit of Clothing in this house before going to market, if possible. If you want to buy two suits for the price of one, now is your time to take advantage of the opportunity.

You know the BONAR HAT like a book; there's no better hat made; they are worth $5.00, but we are going to let you buy them for a few days at almost half that amount.

SHOES

Crossett & Peters, the best shoes found in the South. OXFORDS in either line at a sacrifice. To fit you to sell you.

FANCY VESTS

They'll be worth twice the money this Fall; better buy a couple now.

Kodol
For Dyspepsia and Indigestion

If you Suffer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gas on
the Stomach, Belching, Sour Stomach, Heart-burn,
etc., a little Kodol will Relieve you almost Instantly

Kodol supplies the same digestive
juices that are found in a healthy
stomach. Being a liquid, it starts
digestion at once.
Kodol not only digests your food,
but helps you enjoy every mouthful
you eat.
You need a sufficient amount of
good, wholesome food to maintain
strength and health.
But, this food must be digested
thoroughly, otherwise the pains of indigestion and dyspepsia are the
result.
When your stomach cannot do its
work properly, take something to help your stomach. Kodol is the only thing that will give the stomach complete rest.
Why? Because Kodol does the same work as a strong stomach, and
does it in a natural way.

So, don't neglect your stomach.
Don't become a chronic dyspeptic.
Keep your stomach healthy and
strong by taking a little Kodol.
You don't have to take Kodol all
the time. You only take it when you need it.
Kodol is perfectly harmless.

Our Guarantee
Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say that it has not done you any
good, return the bottle to the druggist and
he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist.
Don't hesitate, all druggists know
that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 24
times as much as the fifty cent bottle.
Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

Special Crockery Sale.

We have just received a nice lot of Crockery imported to us from England, order for which was placed last January, long before we had any idea of going out of business, and as we will be in the Hardware business only a few weeks longer, we are offering the trade these excellent goods at extremely low price, considering the quality. It is the genuine Ironstone China, the kind generally used many years ago, which is guaranteed never to change color or crackle.

We doubt if Clanton has ever received a similar shipment and this is your first opportunity to buy here of such good Crockery, but many of you will recognize the brand and appreciate the quality and the price. Remember we are closing out and rather have cost for our goods than to keep them.

HIGHEST POINTS ON EARTH

By
HOWARD S. COLTER

THE NIPES MOUNTAIN

GEOPHYSICAL exploration has proved fascinating during the last half century. Lofty mountains in the various quarters of our globe present a great field. Modern mountaineering dates from the first ascent of Mont Blanc in 1788, and for more than half a century ascents of importance were confined almost exclusively to the Alps. Another epoch-making date was 1857, in which year was founded the English Alpine club, destined to become the prototype of more than eight score similar organizations, represented in nearly every civilized land, societies whose leaders generally turned to the playground of Europe for the enjoyment of their chosen recreation. Hence it is not strange that in the next quarter of a century Switzerland and Tyrol had become hallowed, with scarcely an important peak left unclimbed.

In 1868 Messrs. Freshfield, Tucker and Moore of the English Alpine club, visited the Caucasus and made the first ascent of Elbruz (18,414) at the westerly end of Kasbek (16,546) at the easterly end of the great central chain. They may perhaps be regarded as the pioneers of a different type of mountain exploration and certainly as the revealers. If not discoverers, of a new "playground" on the confines of Europe and Asia, destined to witness in the last two decades of the century the coming of experts of different nationalities, who soon would leave, as in the Alps, no remote valley unvisited and no proud summit unvanquished.

A glance at the map of the world shows upon the several continents vast systems of mountain ranges or striking instances of isolated peaks. To note only the principal ones, we have here upon our western hemisphere that belt of varying width which, rising to markedly different altitudes, extends from the Arctic ocean to Cape Horn a distance of hardly less than 10,000 miles. In Alaska it attains 18,100 feet in Mount St. Elias, about 19,000 in Mount Logan, a comparatively near neighbor, and over 20,000 in Mount McKinley, some degrees nearer the Arctic circle. In South America from the equator southward, it soars yet higher in such giants as Chimborazo, Huascarán, Sorata and Aconcagua. It is here that the western continent reaches its culminating altitudes.

In Asia a similarly irregular and much interrupted chain runs in a general southeasterly direction from near the black sea. Beginning with the Caucasus and passing by way of the Elbruz mountains, several minor ranges and the Hindu Kush to the mighty Himalayas, which for a distance of over 1,200 miles form the frontier of India, it extends to the sources of the Brahmaputra and the Irrawadi, great spurs like the Kuen Lun mountains and the trans-Himalayan range, lately explored by Sven Hedin, strike eastward from it. This system has a reach of perhaps 4,000 miles and in it (as it in Mount Everest, 29,002 feet, or some loftier peak, possibly caught sight of once or twice by men of the occident) we have the crown of the world. Yet farther north, in central Asia, another notable range, very recently explored, must also be mentioned, for in it rise peaks of truly Himalayan proportions, the Tian Shan mountains, with Khan Tengri, some 23,600 feet in altitude.

Compared with these great systems such limited regions as the European Alps sink into insignificance, and yet for inspiring grandeur and variety and beauty of form, also as a school for the art of climbing on crag and snow, these readily accessible peaks will always retain their prestige.

The vast continent of Africa presents no corresponding mountain system. The Atlas range in the north is of minor importance; for, while its summits surpass 13,000 feet, they are devoid of alpine features. Yet almost upon the equator, east of the median line of the continent and in the neighborhood of the great lakes at the sources of the Nile, a complex of snowy peaks, Ruwenzori, and yet farther east and south isolated giants like Kenia and Kilimanjaro rise to altitudes far surpassing Europe's long-esteemed "monarch of mountains." Mount Blanc measures 15,781 feet above the sea. Kenia is 18,620 feet; Kilimanjaro 19,680, while nine of the chief summits of Ruwenzori measure between 15,800 and 16,815 feet.

The tales of the sea are not without their claimants for honor. If, in our extreme deference for crowns of snow, we pass by the Hawaiian volcano Mauna Kea (13,953), prime of the peaks of the Pacific, and Fuji-San (12,365), the sacred mountain of Japan, and its compeers, we shall find on the southern island of New Zealand, at a latitude of its hemisphere about that of our White Moun-

CREST OF SINDOLCHUM IN THE HIMALAYAS 23,000 FT.

SUMMIT OF JAMHOO 25,000 FEET

THE MATTERHORN

live credit shall be accorded to those who bring to us the knowledge of the world's mysterious heights we must consider not only the inherent difficulties offered by the type of mountain ascended, but its remoteness from civilization, the character of the country to be traversed in reaching its base, the climate, whether temperate or affording such contrasts as those reported by Dr. and Mrs. Workman on the occasion of their recent climbing (1906) in the Nun Kun Himalayas, where, at an altitude of over 21,300 feet, the mercury in the tube of the solar thermometer fell from 193 F. to 4 degrees below zero within 15 hours, or amid such comfortless surroundings as those of Dr. Cook and his single companion, passing the last night of their four days' ascent of Mount McKinley in a cavity stamped out in the deep snow slope, with a thermometer reading of 11 degrees below zero. Then there are such dangers as the risks from savage or ill-disposed natives, as in some of the valleys of the Caucasus and beyond the English sphere of influence in the Himalayas, or insidious fever and the deadly "sleeping sickness" of the forests of equatorial Africa, to say nothing of the vexatious problems arising from the necessities of transportation of supplies by undisciplined porters.

Some of the names of the victors recur several times in the annals of conquest. We have named the pioneers of 1868, members of the Alpine club. Moore, of that party, returned with F. C. Grove and others of the club in 1874 and scaled with them the western, slightly higher, of the twin domes of Elbruz (18,470), like its fellow an easy mountain. Deby, a Hungarian alpinist and expert photographer, came first in 1884, then in the three following years, devoting his efforts rather to the glaciers and passes than to the higher summits and procuring the remarkable views that adorn his recently published volumes. Dent came again with Donkin in 1886 and climbed Gostola (15,923). They both returned in 1888 with Fox added to their party. A fortunate indisposition detained Dent, while Fox and Donkin went on to climb Dongorun (14,547) and then to attack the stronghold of Kohtantau. Here they and their guide perished; just how we shall never know. To solve the sad mystery Dent returned a year later with Freshfield, H. Woolley, the present president of the Alpine club, and others, and found high up on the grand peak the on the southern tower of Ushba. This was secured in 1903, after a repulse that nearly cost him his life, by Herr A. Schulze with others.

Germany was also represented as early as 1881 by Herr Portscheller and Merzbacher, of whom the former had climbed Kilimanjaro in 1887, and the latter was to distinguish himself as a pioneer in the Tian-Shan mountains.

If the keen interest that had attended the continued revelations from this semicircular region to the Caucasus was beginning to wane at the end of the eighties, new matter came pouring in from various quarters to whet the appetite for alpine grandeur. The Rev. W. S. Green (A. C.) had visited New Zealand in 1882 and ascended Mount Cook (Aorangi), which attains an altitude of 12,349 feet. A pioneer there at the antipodes, stimulating the ambition of the young men of that new country and exciting other emulation nearer home, he shortly directed his steps to the freshly opened mountain region of British Columbia, and here, too, became the forerunner of a new generation of alpinists, bringing out the first mountaineering book for this New Switzerland.

A New Zealand Alpine club was formed in 1891, and not only its own periodical but also the pages of the Alpine Journal have since brought out numerous articles descriptive of the noble scenery and stirring adventures among these Southern Alps. Of its members one of the most active has been Mr. G. E. Mannering, author of "With Axe and Rope in the New Zealand Alps" (Longmans, 1891). Doubtless the most exciting of the works that deal with this region is that of Mr. E. A. Fitzgerald, who in 1895 made several brilliant ascents, including the Silver horn, Sefton and Cook. Among the episodes the story of his slip on Sefton and hanging in mid-air supported only by the rope in the hands of Zurbriegen, himself but insecurely placed, is one of the sort calculated to make the heart even of the experienced climber stand still.

Returning now to the western continent, it may be in order to say a few words concerning the development of mountaineering as a sport on this side of the Atlantic.

The far west, and especially the Pacific slope of our continent, offers a much better field; yet even here, at least in the United States proper, distinctly alpine features are for the greater part absent. That vigorous societies have arisen here is not strange; the Sierra club in San Francisco (1892) and the Mazamas (1894) in Portland, Ore. The former finds a grand field for rock climbing in the high Sierra, the latter makes exhilarating and inspiring snow excursions to the summits of the extinct volcanoes of the Cascade range. These beautiful snow-covered domes, Shasta (14,449), Hood (11,225), St. Helena (10,900), Adams (12,470) and Rainier (14,394), present no serious technical difficulties, as may be judged from the fact that large parties of 30 to 40 of both sexes not infrequently make their summits. This is not true of Mount Baker (9,827), which a selected party of Mazamas found almost beyond their powers in 1907.

Mount Ritter (11,156) was ascended by John Muir in the early seventies; Mount Whitney (14,499), the highest summit in the United States proper, by Bengole, Lucas and Johnson in 1873, and Mount Abbott (13,706), whose "forbidding summit" is one of the only two great Sierra peaks which has not been ascended (so wrote Prof. J. N. Le Conte in 1907), was conquered in 1908 by that leading authority on the Sierra Nevada, to whose camera we owe our picture of its precipitous upper slopes.

Like an Earthquake

Former High Sheriff of Middlebrooks, whose home was on land, lake stands partly on the sea on stone and cement foundations, was awakened at four o'clock the morning by loud noises which shook his bungalow like an earthquake.

He says that, after the building had been shaken out of a sound sleep, he, not waiting to dress, went outside to ascertain the cause of the noise. He found, he says, that a monstrous frog had its bed directly under the bungalow. The frog was about six pounds, he says, and when it croaked the bungalow trembled and shook.

Mr. Middlebrooks bought an iron, strong rope and enough rope to fasten half 100 hooks, and went to secure his property by capturing the big frog. Winsted, Conn., Springfield, New York World.

Valuable Knowledge Spreading

Every day sees hundreds of new recruits in the war against consumption, and every day brings new methods of the fighting of the plague. The national association predicts that the present degree of interest is maintained, within five years, throughout the United States will have been formed on the way to prevent and cure tuberculosis, and concerning the infectious nature of the disease, the things in particular are needed, and for these the National association is working in every way. There is a more complete registration of tuberculosis cases, and the further extension of dangerous advanced cases of consumption.

A Sunday Sermon

One must accept life as it is. It gives us great happiness, as we wise enough to see it, and to measure the scales by sending great sorrow, too.

But that is life.

If you would make the most of life, or try to forget your troubles, or eyes and turn to help, these are the pressure of a friendly, and an encouragement of a smile.

Sorrow and trouble, which should teach one a great lesson of universal kindness, the New York Times.

ON FOOD

The Right Foundation of Health

Proper food is the foundation of health. People can eat anything for a time until there is a collapse of the digestive organs, and all kinds of trouble follows.

The proper way out of the difficulty is to shift to the pure, simple, Grape-Nuts, for it rebuilds from the foundation up. A. A. New Hampshire woman says:

"Last summer I was a very thin woman with indigestion and a great deal of trouble and could not eat without great pain. My stomach was so sore I could hardly move. I kept up until I was so miserable I was not worth living."

"Then a friend finally after much argument, induced me to try Grape-Nuts. Although I had not before, I commenced to use it, and great was my surprise to find that I could eat it without the usual pain and nausea in my stomach."

"So I kept on using Grape-Nuts and soon a marked improvement was shown, for my stomach was performing its regular work in a normal way without pain or distress."

"Very soon the yellow coating disappeared from my tongue, the heavy feeling in my head disappeared, and my mind felt light and clear. I languid, tired feeling left and, altogether I felt as if I had been reborn. Strength and weight came back rapidly and I went back to my work with renewed ambition."

"Today I am a new woman in mind as well as body, and I owe it all to this natural food, Grape-Nuts. There's a Reason."

Designs of Merit

DRESS.—Of course, this dress is made up without lining in either bodice or skirt. Our model is in white lawn, but colored lawn or white printed muslin would be equally suitable.

The skirt, which is slightly full at the waist, has a deep-gathered flounce trimmed with insertion; it is gathered at the top, then set to insert a waist-band fastened at the back.

The bodice is cut to the waist, and is joined to top of skirt-band; it has a row of open-work embroidery outlined with insertion; the lawn is tucked between band and yoke. The lawn sleeves are also tucked, the setting lower parts being of embroidery to match the yoke. The waistfastens at the side under a rosette, from which hangs a knotted end with tassels.

Materials required: 10 yards lawn 36 inches wide, 1 1/4 yards embroidery 36 inches wide, about 8 1/2 yards insertion.

Design for Linen.—Here is a semi-princess dress of linen in a soft shade pink. The front panel, that extends the whole length of skirt and bodice, is edged with embroidery edging about two inches wide; this is set over a heading of embroidery, through which narrow ribbon is threaded; skirt is tucked twice above the hem at sides and back; and the fullness is set in tiny tucks extending over the hips; tucks are also made on the shoulders, and in sets of three round the sleeve. The fastening is buttoned.

Materials required: for the dress, 7 yards 42 inches wide, 4 yards embroidery, 4 yards insertion.

WIS OF CLEANING CHIFFON. CHIFFON FOR THE SLEEVES.

Requires Care in Cleansing. and Some Time Must Be Devoted to the Work.

Chiffon should be washed in soap by carefully rolling and pressing between the hands, then rinsed in water and stiffened in gum water. It should be laid flat to dry, and then pressed with a hot iron. It should be placed on a clean white cloth and ironed with the selvedge, as ironing across will displace the fibers and destroy the appearance of the delicate fabric. When the chiffon is being ironed it should be held tightly up in front of the iron to remove wrinkles that are produced by washing and to make it even and smooth.

Chiffon ties with a natural crepe should not be ironed, but the ends should be pinned out flat, the tie just stretched to permit of the crinkles falling into their natural shape. When dry fold it without pressing and hold in air and put carefully away.

LINGERIE WAIST.

HEARTFELT SYMPATHY.

Wife—If my first husband were alive we should be celebrating our silver wedding today.

Husband—What a pity he died so soon.

Almost Any Mother.

The mother of a large family fell ill and died, and the attending physician reported that she died of starvation. It was incredible, but he proved it. The woman had to get the dinner, and then spend the next two hours in waiting on the family and getting the children to the table. It was never on record that she got all of them there at the same time, and they came straggling in all the way from potatoes to pie. By the time she had wiped the last face, her own hunger had left her, and she had no desire to eat. Chickens, the doctor said, come running at feed time, but children don't. A hen has a better chance to eat than a mother.—Atchison Globe.

Pleasant for Mr. Bennett.

William S. Bennett, a representative from New York city, went to address a political meeting in his district one night, when he was much younger than he is now.

"The chairman," said Bennett, "was a very liberal person. He looked at the gallery, where one woman was sitting, and said: 'Lady and gentlemen, this is a most momentous campaign. There are grave issues to be discussed. Later we will hear from our best speakers, but for the present, we will listen to Mr. Bennett.'"

Died in Good Company.

A clergyman, who was not averse to an occasional glass, hired an Irishman to clean out his cellar. The Irishman began his work. He brought forth a lot of empty whisky bottles, and as he lifted each one looked through it at the sun. The preacher, who was walking on the lawn, saw him and said: "They are all dead ones, Pat." "They are," said Pat. "Well, there is one good thing about it—they all had the minister with them when they were dying."—Tit-Bits.

Praises American Woman.

Alfred East says that American women, like American machines, need but little man power. The American woman, he says, is the most chum-mable woman in the world, therefore she is the most charming. Our excellent educational system, he thinks, is responsible for the fact that American women are such "good fellows."

Important to Mothers.

AS STRAIGHT MEN SEE HIM.

The Dead-Beat is Probably the Most Despised Creature That Walks the Earth.

No man is wholly free from sin, but so many lesser evils are tolerated that a man should hesitate long before becoming a dead-beat. Criminals are despised and shunned, but to the dead-beat all that is coming, as well as the contempt of his fellow men. There is something at once so mean and so little in taking advantage of the confidence which comes with friendship that the hand of every man is turned against a dead-beat as soon as his reputation is well established. The dead-beat may fondly imagine he is living easy and making money without work, and, of course, he takes no account of the confidence he violates and the hardships he inflicts on others. But, that aside, he really has a harder time than the man who is honest and fair. He is compelled to move a good deal and peace of mind he knows not. Like other types of crooks, he doesn't prosper, and his finish is more unpleasant than the beginning.—Atchison Globe.

CHILD HAD SIXTY BOILS.

And Suffered Annually with a Red Scald-Like Humor on Her Head.

Troubles Cured by Cuticura.

"When my little Vivian was about six months old her head broke out in boils. She had about sixty in all and I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment which cured her entirely. Some time later a humor broke out behind her ears and spread up on to her head until it was nearly half covered. The humor looked like a scald, very red with a sticky, clear fluid coming from it. This occurred every spring. I always used Cuticura Soap and Ointment which never failed to heal it up. The last time it broke out it became so bad that I was discouraged. But I continued the use of Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent until she was well and has never been troubled in the last two years. Mrs. M. A. Schwerin, 674 Spring Wells Ave., Detroit, Mich., Feb. 24, 1908." Peter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston.

Evening Things Up.

There is much rivalry between Judges Rosalsky and O'Sullivan of the general sessions in New York and last week it looked as if O'Sullivan had the laugh on his rival for all time. He had a man before him whose name was Rosalsky, but who swore that he was an Irishman. But Friday things were evened up when a man named Flynn was brought before Judge Rosalsky and swore that he was a Jew.

The Doctor Explained.

The doctor had brought a patient to the hospital. The operation was not to be a complicated one.

"Was it really necessary for the patient to go to the hospital?" somebody asked.

The doctor nodded.

"Yes," he replied. "It means a roof for the new house I am building."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Worm Turned.

The clerk in the shoe store was tired. The day was insufferably hot. The customer who was trying to catch a train was clamorous. Goaded to desperation the hard-driven clerk expostulated.

"No, we don't have a salesman for each customer. This ain't no Chinese Sunday school."

Says a Press Humorist.

"Shakespeare, it is said, never repeated."

"He didn't have to run a daily humorous feature."

"But Montaigne, whenever he saw a good thing, annexed it."

Strictly After Nature.

A public building was in course of erection in one of the western towns of Scotland, in front of which a bust of The Bruce was being carved. A well-known baillie halted opposite the sculptor one day and called out:

"I say, sculptor, d'ye no think ye hae that beard inclining a wee thing to the left?"

"Man, baillie," said the sculptor, "d'ye no see the win's blawin' up the street the noo?"—Tit-Bits.

Couldn't Blame the Boy.

"Young man," said the stern parent, "when I was your age I had to work for a living."

"Well, sir," answered the frivolously inclined youth, "I'm not to blame for that. I have always disapproved of my grandfather's attitude in the matter."

Antioch

Editor Banner—Will you allow me a space in the dear old Banner to say a few words in regard to the place? Health is not good. We are sorry to say that Mr. G. B.
Klinner is on the sick list, but hope
he will be up again soon.

Mr. S. B. Ratliff has gotten back from the infirmary at Montgomery and is getting along very well.

Our Sunday school at this place is progressing nicely under the cheerful management of Mr. W. D.
Smith as superintendent.

Some of the young people took in the barbecue at Stanton last Saturday and report a nice time.

I will close, wishing the Banner
and its many readers much success.

Editor Banner—I thought I would write to the dear old Banner once more as I have not seen anything from this place in some time.

Our school is progressing nicely
at this time under the careful management of Miss Bessie Belle Durbin.

IN MEMORIAM.

On Friday evening, Aug. 20, 1909, at Lawley, the messenger of death bore the spirit of Bro. M. F.
Lawley to the realm of eternal bliss. His death was very sudden.
On Tuesday morning he was out in town seemingly as well as usual when he suddenly collapsed. He was revived and was thought to be getting alright until Friday evening, when he relapsed and was dead within a few minutes. Mr.
Lawley was a few days over 74 years old. Years and years ago he attached himself to the Baptist church at Dogwood, Ala., and in 1873 he moved to Lawley and moved his membership to Rehoboth cemetery, where for 37 years he lived a consecrated Christian. He survived his companion something like two years, they having lived together for about 50 years. His remains were interred in Rehoboth cemetery, surrounded by a very large concourse of mourning relatives and friends, who feel very sensibly the loss they have sustained in losing such a grand and noble man.

It was one of the pleasures of his life to help those who couldn't help themselves, speak cheering words of comfort to the despondent and in every way to alleviate the cares of the troubled. He helped others not for personal gain, but purely from a Christian motive.
He was surely a friend indeed.

He is survived by six children,
all of whom are married and have families.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Honeycutt, and short but impressive talks by Rev. Martin and Rev. Smithman. His life will continue to exercise a potent influence for good, and which we all should emulate. We feel sure he is basking in the smiles of a loving Saviour, whom he always trusted and obeyed. We know too that nature makes it heart-rending for us to give up those who are near and dear, yet we should console ourselves with the thought that blessed are they who die in the Lord, and to the bereaved we would say put your trust in Him who doeth all things well.

Though we cannot bring Mr.
Lawley back to us, we can do as we feel sure he did, love and serve our Master, and ere long we too shall be called from among the walkers of men to pay the debt we all owe, then we shall know in reality that "Asleep in Jesus is a blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep." And then we will join him in the sweet beyond where sorrow, pain, trouble and care are known no more, and all join in ascribing praises to God throughout the ceaseless ages of a never ending eternity. A. L. G.

Stanton

Editor Banner—Please give me space in the Banner to tell you about the barbecue at Stanton.
Everything was as good as good can be, that is telling it in my own language. There was perhaps fifteen hundred people present, and we had plenty of meat and bread for all.

Well, the most interesting feature of the day was the speeches of Gov. B. B. Comer and Col. H. S.
D. Mallory. Gov. Comer speaking in the morning on the present issues of the day, and of course constitutional prohibition was the text, and I am quite sure that our people are all prohibitionists, from the fact that all this great crowd of people was cool sober. The Governor made a great speech in the right place, at the right time and had the right subject. Thank God for such men as Gov. Comer, and may his life be one of happiness
in this world, and in the end here may he hear the glad and welcome plaudits, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

Col. Mallory spoke in the afternoon on almost the same subject,
full of truth and good advice,
which almost polled the vote of this part of the county for him for governor in the next election if he so wishes. We know the Colonel's ability and we know his religion and we know his politics, and we do not believe there is a greater or a grander man living than Col.
Mallory. We would like to express our gratitude to them both for their special favor and their instructive speeches, but we do not know how to begin or where to end. All told we had one of the greatest days in the history of Stanton and we feel so much honored in having Gov. Comer and Col.
Mallory with us. Perfect order prevailed throughout the whole day.

Two games of baseball were played during the day, between Stanton and Maylene in the morning, resulting 12 to 11 in favor of Stanton. The feature of the game was Williams' pitching and Head-ley's catching and batting a home run. Second game, between Centreville and Maylene, resulting in favor of Centreville 13 to 3. The feature of the game was the pitching of Brown of Centreville and all-round good playing of the Centreville team. All the teams are invited to come down again and bring a basket full of balls and a bar load of umpires and we will have a good time.

STATE AND NATIONAL SCOPE

Gist of the World's News Gleaned
From All Sources and Boiled
Down for Busy
Readers.

Tom Harding, a negro, at Nashville, Tenn., fatally shot his wife, wounded a policeman and attempted suicide.

Edward Leonard, an inmate of the National Military Home at Dayton, Ohio, shot and killed Oscar Eastmond, a fellow veteran, and wounded two other ex-soldiers.

Although there are less than 100 claims in the Spokane reservation, 100,000 persons have already registered. W. C. Faucette of Argenta was the only lucky Arkansan.

Two robbers surprised while looting the state bank at Kiefer, Okla., shot and killed City Marshal Inford and probably fatally wounded Casner Calmer Webber. They then escaped. A posse was quickly organized and hurried in pursuit.

Hospital authorities at Colorado Springs state that, with the possible exception of H. K. Whitsett of Jericho, Mo., and Emil Kaupfer of Chicago, all of the injured in the Denver & Rio Grande wreck at Husted had passed the danger point.

A commission representing the International Printing Pressmen's union, and headed by President John Berry of Indianapolis, is in Tennessee for the purpose of inspecting proposed sites for a Pressmen's home.

An earthquake shock was felt at Waterloo, Ill., at 4:15 o'clock Monday afternoon. No serious damage was done. The scene of the great earthquake of 1811 is a short distance from there, across the Mississippi river in southeast Missouri.

The war maneuvers will be continued by the army of the Department of the East on the New England coast for a week, and the Atlantic squadron will engage in naval maneuvers off the Virginia Capes.

Dock strikers broke loose at Fort William, Ont., on the arrival of strike breakers and shot several police, including the chief, perhaps fatally. All of the strikers are heavily armed. The riot act was read and the militia called out.

There is reason to believe that Spain's warfare in Morocco against the Moors will continue for some time to come. General Marina, the Spanish commander, has close upon 40,000 men under his command, and Spain has sent to his support every available vessel in her navy.

A gathering of far-reaching influence is the twentieth annual session of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress at Denver. Governors, mayors, representatives of chambers of commerce and other similar organizations throughout the country are in attendance.

China expects a visit from Theodore Roosevelt some time next year. While Colonel Roosevelt was president he discussed such a visit with Tang Shao Yi, the imperial ambassador, who came to Washington last winter to thank this government for its generosity in remitting a $7,000,000 claim.

The stockholders of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway have ratified the plan of the directors for a merger with the Baltimore & Ohio road.

Secretary of the Interior Charles Nagel will visit several of the large immigration stations, with the view of making observations for the purpose of recommending legislation to congress.

The Cascade Distilling company of Nashville, Tenn., will be allowed to settle the case against it and its officers, on account of whiskey seizures in April last, for $10,000 and costs.

The Federal Oil & Gas company, a million dollar corporation organized in Delaware last January, has been given authority to do business in Oklahoma, with Gustave Erickson of Guthrie as the state agent.

Forty-six men, indicted while the state militia patrolled the county, were dismissed in the Calloway circuit court at Paducah, Ky. This is believed to end the night riders' war in western Kentucky.

With a message from President Taft, addresses of welcome by Governor M. E. Hay of Washington and Mayor S. N. Pratt of Spokane, and numerous responses, the National Irrigation Congress began its session at Spokane, Wash.

The wave of efficiency tests which started under Secretary Nagel in the Department of Commerce and Labor has struck the Treasury Department, where it is to be more sweeping than in other departments.

Forty guests had a narrow escape from death when the Hotel Hessel, at Hessel, Mich., burned to the ground. A number of them escaped in their night clothing and lost all their baggage. The loss is about $15,000.

Riches almost beyond compare will be brought to the farmers and business men of the United States this year through the bountiful crops which are forecasted in the government's official report for August.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief chemist of the Agricultural Department at Washington, D. C., and guardian of the pure food laws, has started a crusade against embalmed cucumbers and gherkins inoculated with alum.

The American Bank of Nicaragua, which has been chartered in the United States, has been given a fifty year concession for the establishment of a bank at Managua, the capital of Nicaragua, and in other cities of that country.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Lloyd C. Griscom, former ambassador to Italy, and James Deering, the harvest machine manufacturer, have been elected members of the Aero Club of America. Young Roosevelt is an enthusiastic aeronaut and will make a balloon ascension shortly with A. Holland Forbes.

The record of the naval inquiry into the death of Lieut. James N. Sutton of the United States marine corps, recently concluded at Annapolis, will be in possession of the navy department at Washington shortly, and it is possible that the result of the inquiry may be made public within the next few days.

Chinese Minister Wu Ting Fang has been recalled from Washington and ordered to Peking for further assignment. His successor will be Chang Yin Tang, formerly chargé d'affaires at Madrid, and now deputy vice president of foreign affairs. Mr. Wu is now in Peru, to which country he has been credited along with the United States.

What the police declare to have been a suicide pact was revealed when Mrs. Edna King was found dead and Harry C. Harrell dying in the woman's room at 2405 South Seventh street, St. Louis. Mrs. King had been shot through the forehead. Harrell is unconscious from the effects of a similar wound. Mrs. King's husband is a resident of Blytheville, Ark.

Governor Patterson has made an official request for an extradition warrant to bring Roy W. Dulaney, the absconding Washington county clerk, back to Tennessee. The warrant was addressed to the secretary of state. Dulaney is under arrest at Kingston, Jamaica. His short-term is at least $30,000.

Delegates to the National Irrigation congress set about to relieve the arid land situation by adopting resolutions making a request for ample funds, and ending with an appeal for $5,000,000,000.

Several important changes in the designs on the paper money of the country are to take place soon.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt and Arcene, Quentin and Ethel Roosevelt were met at Lyons station by Arthur Bailey-Blanchard, second secretary, and Commander Chapin and Captain Gignard, respectively, naval and military attaches of the American embassy.

Ex-Governor A. R. Van Sant of Minnesota was elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Fire at Wadley, Ga., destroyed the plant of the Wadley Yellow Pine Lumber company, causing $150,000 loss.

A cargo of anchors on board the naval tug Nezinecot, Captain Ned Evans, proved too great a burden as she rolled down the coast from Portsmouth to Boston, and she sank off Cape Ann, four of the crew losing their lives.

Propositions looking to a settlement of the differences that have sprung up between the American Society of Equity and the Burley Tobacco Society have been submitted at a conference at Winchester, Ky.

A man half crazed, half clothed, with his flesh burned to a crisp, and running through the streets, was the spectacle that followed a tenement house fire in Cincinnati. The suffering man, Michael Hoff, fell unconscious at the door of the city hospital and died soon afterward.

Charles Foster Willard, a young New Yorker, made five successful flights in the aeroplane Golden Flyer, of the New York Aeronautic Society, over Hempstead Plain, near Mineola. The length of the flights varied from seven-tenths of a mile to two miles.

The orphanage committee of the North Carolina grand lodge, K. of P., meeting at Clayton, located its $60,000 orphanage at that place. This will be for the present the only Pythian orphanage in the south. It will be built on the cottage plan.

The bill to prevent negro social or fraternal organizations from using the names, insignia or ritual of established "societies or corporations, whether social, benevolent or charitable," was passed by the Georgia house of representatives and needs only the governor's signature to make it a law.

Thirty-two skeletons were unearthed near Piedmont, Tex., in excavating for the Houston & Texas Central cutoff railway line. The oldest inhabitants know nothing about them. It is believed they were Spaniards killed in a battle with aborigines while on an exploring expedition.

Bronze statues of George Washington and Robert E. Lee, Virginia's contribution to the nation's hall of fame, have been placed in Statuary hall at the national capital in Washington. Formal ceremonies attending the unveiling will take place at some time yet to be determined.

TOM HARWELL GIVES BOND.
Man Who Killed Joe Hamilton Released From Custody.

Pine Bluff.—Tom Harwell, who was bound over to await the action of the Jefferson county grand jury by Magistrate L. E. Cheek on a murder charge, gave bond in the sum of $2,500, which was granted by Judge A. B. Grace in the Jefferson circuit court, and was released from the county jail. Harwell's attorneys, Hunt and Toney, filed habeas corpus proceedings to bring about his release on bail, but a hearing was not necessary, as the issuance of the writ was waived by the attorneys and Prosecuting Attorney Jones consented to Harwell's release on bond.

Harwell shot and killed Joe Hamilton near Humphrey on August 2. He was released by the coroner, but was rearrested on a warrant applied for before Magistrate Cheek in this city by relatives of Hamilton.

PAY CAR FOR ROCK ISLAND.
Little Rock.—The Rock Island is making arrangements to change its plan of paying its men on this portion of the system. Heretofore the men employed here on the Little Rock side of the river have been paid at the local freight house.

Off to Europe with his sister, Katherine, on the North German Lloyd liner Kron Prinzessin Cecilie, from New York harbor, Orville Wright declared that he would spend a full month in Berlin, where he will teach the members of the German Aero Club how to fly.

HORSE IS NEGLECTED

Undeveloped Resources of the South and Southwest.

In Better Demand and Brings Higher Prices Than Ever Before, Notwithstanding the Advent of Steam and Electricity.

So much has been said and written about undeveloped resources and industries of the south and southwest of recent years that the following information relative to the horse, a largely neglected field of development seems timely, in view of the fact that "horse power" has received little, if any, attention at the hands of the development bureau.

There are more horses in the United States to-day than there ever were before; they are worth more money than they ever were before; they are increasing in numbers and in value, notwithstanding the electric street cars, the motor wagons and omnibuses, the bicycle, the automobiles and the adoption of steam and electricity as a motor power in farming and in every business and trade that requires locomotion.

The number of horses in the United States January 1, 1908, was 19,992,000, and were worth a total of $1,867,530,000, or an average of $93.31 each. During the succeeding year, ended January 1, 1909, the number of horses had increased to 20,640,000; their value had advanced more than $100,000,000 to the sum of $1,947,052,000, and the average price was $95.64, or $2.33 more than the previous year.

The average price of horses throughout the United States for the ten years previous to 1908 was $60.25 per head, which shows that they are worth an average of $35.40 more, notwithstanding the circumstances which senators and others have so mournfully deplored.

Automobiles came into general use more rapidly during the year 1908 than at any previous period, but notwithstanding that fact the number and the value of our horses increased more rapidly during that period than ever before. During the calendar year of 1907 the horses increased 240,500 in number and $20,952,000 in value. During the calendar year 1908 they increased 648,000 in number and $106,523,000 in value.

The same can be said of mules, which should also be taken into consideration, because thousands of mules have lost their job because of the introduction of electricity as a motive power. There are now in this country 4,053,000 mules, which are valued at $437,082,000, or an average of $107.84 per head; that is about $12.25 more per mule than horses are worth. This is an increase of 184,000 mules during the year 1908, $20,143,000 in value and eight cents per head.

The increase in 1907 was 52,000 mules, but in 1906 there was a decrease in the total value of $11,125,000, or an average falling off of $4.40 per head.

HANDY STOOL IN COW YARD

Convenient One That Can Be Fastened Around the Waist by a Strap and Buckle.

A very convenient stool for use in milking the cows in yard or field is shown in the cut. It is merely a one-legged stool to which are attached four straps connected with a broad strap that is buckled around the waist. The stool is quickly fastened to the milker and is always in a position so one can sit down anywhere. Such a stool with a short leg is also useful in the garden.

Demand for Cotton Mules.

Mule markets in the south report considerable demand and steady sales of cotton mules, that is, mules to be used in getting out of the cotton crop. Three types of mules are used in this work. The small mule for the bottom country, and the larger mule for the hilly country, and the average mule for the prairie country. In 1909 all mules are good sellers, some better than others. More farmers are raising mules than a few years ago.

Variety of Feed for Hogs.

It is a mistake to try to raise hogs on an exclusive diet. You ask what kind of feed to give them. I will ask what kind of feed can be produced on your farm in your locality, then give them a variety of it, says a writer in an exchange. These feeds should be given in such relation to each other as to meet the varied needs of the swine system.

HOW TO MAKE TREES GROW

Some Interesting Information About the Use of Nitrate of Soda in Fruit Culture.

State Zoologist Surface of Pennsylvania, in a recent address, said among other things that the cherry is the hardest to start and that 60 per cent. of them usually die in the first year. This is due chiefly to the fact that the tree has so few fine or small roots, such as are needed for taking up immediate moisture and plant food, and it takes some time for it to form such roots. Its first effort to grow is a drain on its stored vitality. When this is exhausted the tree is liable to die by wilting at this time of year.

Last year the professor performed a series of important experiments in stimulating declining trees that had been planted only a few weeks. He used various vegetable alkaloids, such as nux vomica, strychnia and nitrate of soda. He found the last named was far the best and most efficient stimulant, and it is also the cheapest.

He had excellent results from watering, dehorning and cutting back, and especially from watering declining trees, a teaspoonful of nitrate of soda being dissolved in each gallon of water. The watering should be very extensive. Before applying the water, the soil should be well tamped firmly around the roots. Of course, this should not be done while the ground is wet. Pack it well around the roots, then apply as much water as possible, or at least a bucket to each young tree, after having dissolved a teaspoonful of nitrate of soda in each gallon of water. Two or three good waterings of this kind, and mulching around the tree with stable dressing will do more good than anything else to give it a start.

If the top was not cut back well, he said, removing at least two-thirds of the woody growth, it should be trimmed, in order to throw vigor into the few buds that remain. Most persons in setting trees do not cut back far enough.

As to the time of planting, the earlier in the spring the cherry tree is planted the better it is. There is no kind of fruit tree that demands such early planting as the cherry, and it will suffer more severely from late planting than any other kind.

FOUNTAIN-LIKE FEED DEVICE

Constant Supply of Grain Is Always Kept at the Horse's Mouth by Use of the Nose Bag.

A great deal of ingenuity has been exercised by inventors in the direction of devising a feed bag which would be at the same time satisfactory to the owner and animal. To this end it must be portable and compact and must be of such a shape as will contain the grain within easy reach of the animal without loss by spilling. Almost everyone has noticed the painful efforts of the unfortunate horse which is compelled to take its noonday meal in this manner. In order to get the feed the horse must throw the bag and its contents into the air and catch a mouthful as he can. Besides the industry he is compelled to exercise in the pursuit of his feed, the horse loses about half the grain by reason of the fact that it is thrown over the top of the bag.

The nose bag shown in the accompanying cut is designed to overcome this trouble. The feed supply is contained in a reservoir which is secured to the bridle and is suspended between the animal's eyes. The feed flows down of its own weight into a saucer-like receptacle which is held under the animal's mouth. The feed is always in reach and there is no occasion for the painful gymnastics which are so commonly seen under the circumstances.

A pure bred bull of any kind is an acceptable animal, but crossbred ones are doubtful. It does not matter what the object of breeding be—milk production in the extreme or beef with great development on the most valued parts—a superior bull will always make its mark and have a big share in securing all that is required, both for ornament and utility, and the wise breeder loses no time in securing him.

Improving the Vealers.

The practice of using a beef bull on a herd of dairy cows for the purpose of improving the vealing qualities of the calves usually results in a confused mixture of dairy and beef qualities in the working herd itself. Such a system is finally disastrous to the dairy interests, for it is not only a barrier to improvement but effectively blocks the transmission of what desirable or exceptional qualities may be represented in the herd.

IDEAS FOR LUNCHEON TABLE

Delicious Meal Served by One Helper That Can Be Very Easily Duplicated.

Stuffed potatoes are prepared by baking them in their jackets in an oven so as not to injure the skins, removing the pulp and mixing it with butter, salt, pepper (sometimes adding green chives). One hostess who has been around the world and eaten in every tongue served this ideal menu at luncheon:

Cold Soup (Consommé), Escaloped Chicken, Roasted Potatoes, Broiled Chicken, Baked Potatoes, Applesauce and Lemon Sauce, Cakes with Strawberry Sauce, Coffee.

The cold soup was served in a bowl, the cauliflower in ramkins, the potatoes were especially pretty. The applesauce tips were passed through a strainer, pimientos (Spanish peppers) and one side of the plate was a garnish of lettuce, French dressing and served.

The dessert was a small round cake over which was poured a sauce made of ripe strawberries prepared for shortcake and sweetened with creamed butter and sugar, flavored with vanilla. The hostess who served the sauce over the cake, so it had no chance to become soggy and soggy.

At a dainty Sunday evening tea the menu was cold consommé, fruit salad, toasted crackers and cream cheese, and ice cream served in individual forms, and wafers. The fruit salad was served on a tall centerpiece around the edge of the table, and a small frill. In the center was a combination of grape fruit, orange, pineapple and berries.

WAYS OF PICKLING ONIONS

English Method Is a Good One, Though Another Can Be Used if Preferred.

Put desired quantity of small white onions into hot water and peel. When all are done, put into fresh salted water with a small piece of alum and leave over night. The next morning drain, cover with fresh water, adding a little salt and a piece of alum about as large as a hickory nut and leave a second day. Drain and put in jars, placing in each jar one or two shallots of mace, one or two chillies, a few white peppercorns and a small quantity of horse radish. Pour in vinegar to cover, cork tightly and keep in a dry place. These will be ready in a month. This is the English way of pickling onions.

A little different way is to choose fine small onions, peel in hot water and let them stand in strong salted water for two days. Change the brine the second day. Put more brine to the boiling point, add the onions and cook three minutes. Drain off the brine, rinse in cold water and leave several hours. Put in jars, season with cloves, mace and whole peppers, and fill with vinegar to which sugar has been added in proportion of one cup to a gallon of vinegar. Seal while hot. This can be used in a month, but is better if older. —Emma Padlock Telford.

Ice Substitute.

When unable to obtain ice or when not convenient to a refrigerator, or when an upper floor or sick room, the following will be found a simple way of preserving an article of food, says the National Food Magazine. Place an inverted saucer or small fruit plate in a pan or other receptacle containing about three inches of fresh water and set on top of saucer, in its holder, the milk bottle or other article to be preserved. Invert a flower pot tightly caulked over the food into the pan of water. The flower pot being porous, evaporation of the water keeps the temperature underneath at a low degree and a cooling process results.

TALKING SHOP WITH A WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

COPYRIGHT, 1909 BY W.A. PATTERSON

WASHINGTON—Talking shop is said to be one of the unpardonable sins. Possibly writing the shop may be forgiven; but whether or no the chance is to be taken. Readers of newspapers complain occasionally about the indefiniteness of the sources of Washington correspondents' information.

Readers of newspapers do not know, possibly, that the law of official Washington is against quotation marks coupled with the name of the one who talks, unless specific permission for name and quotations be given. Ninety-nine times out of 100 when a newspaper having a Washington correspondent publishes, under a capital letter, that on high authority in a certain department "it may be said," etc., the correspondent has been talking with the chief of the department or with one so close to him that the voice of the one is the voice of the other.

The president of the United States never to be quoted, but it is probable that things the president has said directly have gone to the public eye thousands of times through the newspapers of the country, although it is extremely likely that many of the readers, in view of the fact that the president has spoken and quotation marks were absent, hesitated to believe that what they read came warm from the White House.

It has been said that the president of the United States is never to be quoted. That is the rule. Once in a while presidents take the ban and say: "You may say that I said so." Ordinarily when Mr. Taft or any of his predecessors in office have had occasion to put forth a pronouncement it has been prepared with forethought and has been given out in printed form to be put upon the wires for general consumption.

The president talks to the Washington correspondents perhaps more than semi-occasionally and unless inhibited they may charge their own words with the spirit of what he has said and then give it to the readers of what they write. The first lesson that a newly appointed correspondent has to learn is that to matter how sharp and direct a statement is given to him by an official it is not to be used with a name unless permission is given.

Permission generally is given, save in the case of the president and the cabinet officers, and even in these cases there is the general understanding that the statements may be put before the public in such form that it may be known definitely that either executive or cabinet authority has spoken.

The White House is the source of the greater part of the vitally interesting news that goes out of Washington and by the White House one does not necessarily mean the president. More legislative news is to be had in the outer offices of the executive mansion than is to be had in the capitol itself. Of course this statement has no reference to the actual passing of legislation.

No bill of great importance having a Republican origin ever goes into the hopper of congress unless its merits or demerits have been pretty well discussed in the office of the president. The Republican member who has a measure of national moment to introduce to congress naturally goes to the president to get from him his opinion.

Frequently, more than frequently, the senator or representative who has conferred with the president is willing to tell the world through the newspapers how the chief executive looks upon the legislation which he has in hand. This holds of course only when the measure has been met with presidential favor and not with presidential frowning.

Senators and members and callers from a legislative access to the president's room through an outer office, where during the morning hours newspaper correspondents assemble. From this little office there is a shadowy forth of future events.

It may not be wide of the mark to tell how many a time a Washington correspondent, with 20 of his fellows, was in the outer White House office, secured what is known to the daily writing fraternity as a "scoop" and under the very noses of his fellows. This thing hardly can happen more than once in a newspaper man's lifetime under the best of circumstances.

It was in the early days of railroad rate regulation that the whole country was anxious to know what the president intended to do. What bill for rate regulation he intended to introduce and what member of congress was to be the lucky father of the measure which was to hold the country's interest certainly for an entire session.

When the correspondents were in the White House office a man came out from the president's room, passed unchallenged by the newspaper men, for apparently none of them knew him, and walked rapidly away from the entrance in the direction of Pennsylvania avenue. The correspondent did know this man by sight, but he held his peace and his own took him. The correspondent was taking the one chance in 500 that he could "land" a story. He happened to know that the president's visitor was an absolutely new member of congress from Michigan and a man who had made a considerable study in his home state of railroad problems.

The one chance in 500 won out. The visitor who had been at the White House was Representative Charles E. Townsend and he had with him on that morning the assurance of Theodore Roosevelt that there was presidential approval of every line of a railroad rate bill which Mr. Townsend had in his pocket and which he was going to introduce into congress.

Mr. Townsend told the correspondent all that he asked about and furthermore he volunteered the information that the bill which he had in his pocket would be the railroad rate bill which would pass the house of representatives at the session which was yet young. Mr. Townsend never would have made this statement unless he had the firm assurance of Mr. Roosevelt that the bill had his sanction and would have back of it all the influence which the White House properly could use.

The correspondent secured an exclusive piece of news for his paper and felt justified apparently in saying that the Townsend measure would be the railroad rate measure which the house would do its part in enacting into law. Subsequent events proved that when the Michigan representative said that his bill would be the bill to be sanctioned by the house of representatives he knew what he was talking about. The bill did pass the house and it failed to become a law only because the senate wanted time to consider the legislation.

When the summer comes and congress is not in session and the president is on his travels or at his warm weather quarters at the seashore, the correspondents get many of their writing texts from the departments.

Three years ago there was fear that congress might fail to pass the appropriation necessary for continuing the usefulness of the biological survey. The members of congress were in dense ignorance about the things that the naturalists of the survey were doing for the good of the country. These field workers save the country millions of dollars annually and yet at times in the past they have had a hard time to get the paltry $52,000 appropriation needed to keep the survey alive. This year the scientists were given about $17,000 additional to carry on their work. The money was secured after Dr. Merriam, the survey's chief, had made a strong appeal.

When it was feared that no appropriation at all was to be made for the survey three years ago by the members of the Fifty-ninth congress, news of the fact that the department might pass from its sphere of usefulness was sent through the country by the Washington correspondents. The response was instant. The mails were loaded with letters of protest from every state and territory. The chief of the survey had letters of support and the members of congress heard in protest from hundreds of people who no one supposed from their vocations in life would take any interest in natural history research.

There were letters by the hundreds also from the farmers and the stock raisers and from the students of ornithology and mammalogy who had benefited by the painstaking work of the naturalists whose headquarters are in Washington, but whose homes, when it is possible, are in the fields and the woods. The weight of public opinion was felt by congress and an interest was aroused among members who barely knew that there was such an institution as the biological survey.

It might be asked what the biological survey does to benefit the country. Instances of its service are not difficult to find. The stock-raising interests of the western states suffer losses—or rather have suffered until recently—to the amount of about $12,000,000 yearly through the depredations of wild animals—wolves, coyotes and cougars.

Poison was the instrument employed to kill the predatory animals. Strychnine was the means of death and while it cost thousands of dollars a year it was by no means efficacious. The stockmen complained that the wolves bred in the forest reserves were in a large measure responsible for the increase in the numbers of the ravaging packs.

This argument is used to combat the forest reserve plan of the government. Vernon W. Bailey, of the biological survey, went west and studied the wolf question. He found that the wolves did not breed in the forest reserves in any numbers. He located their breeding places and in his report told the stockmen how to rid themselves of the pests without the necessity of resorting to the costly strychnine poisoning process. The reports show that the wolf work of the survey already has saved the stockmen many times the amount of money that the government supplies yearly for the support of the survey.

In the Humboldt valley of Nevada there was a plague of field mice. An expert of the biological survey was sent to the scene of trouble. He found that in some sections of the valley the mice averaged 8,000 to the acre, a number that seems almost impossible, but the truth of the report is verified.

The mice were destroying the alfalfa which is grown in the valley at a rate which made it certain that within a short time the industry of alfalfa raising must disappear. The crop of the year was cut short one-third by the ravages of the mice and a loss of $50,000 was entailed.

When absolute ruin of the industry was confronting the alfalfa ranch owners the work of the naturalists of the survey was begun and it is now practically certain that the plague of mice will disappear as did the plague of Egypt at the word of Moses.

The survey was appealed to by the bureau of irrigation for help in checking the damage done to ditches by burrowing animals. One gopher hole in an embankment caused a loss of $2,500 and in many places irrigation was almost impossible because of the undermining work done by small animals. The work of the burrowers made way for the water which by the erosion process did the rest. The scientists of the biological survey, after experimenting, taught the men interested in irrigation how to protect themselves against the inroads of the small beasts "that work in darkness."

The scientists recently were engaged in the work of checking the depredations of the ground squirrels of the far west and northwest. The annual damage that these animals inflicted on growing crops was enormous. The biological survey worked out a plan for the extermination of the squirrels, a plan that brought success.

One of the labors of the scientists of the survey has been to show the different states how the full benefits of game protection may be obtained and how the game in each state may be made to yield an important annual revenue. Illinois alone, as a direct result of information received from the biological survey, has added to its income annually $125,000. The state of Missouri has benefited to the extent of $50,000 and more money will come to it if it follows more closely the directions which it can get gratis from the government officials.

Not one-tenth part of the good that the biological survey has done and is doing has been set down here. The survey needs more money to carry on its field work. Every dollar spent means dollars returned to the people and yet it was hard work to induce congress to grant the additional sum of $17,000 which the scientists asked that they might enlarge the field of their good work.

Women Becoming Flat-Footed

Are the women of the American nation becoming "flat-footed?"

This is a question which has been propounded and which is answered by a man who has spent the last 15 years in the study of the subject and who unhesitatingly claims that a fate is awaiting many young women, who are careless of their feet.

The tendency of women to high-heeled shoes and pumps is working disaster to their feet and the ailments of the feet are in turn working disaster to their nervous systems. A shoe with the original shape well preserved indicates the woman with an even temperament, well-poised mind, careful in the details of her existence and lacking of a frivolous nature.

A shoe with the sole upturned in front and the top wrinkled indicates the woman who walks much, is either a hard-working salesgirl or a belle in society. She is of the happy-go-lucky sort, in either case, and with proper training may be brought to a reasonable appreciation of the stern realities of life. Not that she is frivolous, but she is just a good sort of a woman whom anyone can love.

A shoe with the top stretched, showing that the foot within is spread out, indicates the student woman, the kind who are society reporters on newspapers or who write thrilling love tales with a trend toward socialism.

A shoe with the sides of the sole turned up indicates the woman whose mind turns to amusement and who is frivolous to a degree. She is the sort of a woman who loves flirtations and who is fickle.

A shoe with the heel run down on either side is indicative of a woman whom all should look out for. She is negligent in her habits and inclined to slovenliness—the kind who will let the dinner dishes go unwashed until morning if she chances to be your wife. Beware of her, because she has an ungovernable temper.

A shoe with the heel shoved forward indicates the woman of extreme nervous temperament. If you have ever observed you have found that in nine out of ten cases the hysterical woman, with nerves unstrung, wears out her shoes in this fashion.

These are a few of the most important rules in determining the character of women, but the phase upon which the foot authority places the greatest emphasis is the tendency toward flat-footedness. Nearly everyone is troubled in this respect and the affliction does not bespeak any special trait of character. But the dictation of style is so common in America that unless something is done to check it, only a few years will elapse before women, and men too, will be as flat-footed as the mongrel natives of the African forests.

DISCOURAGED WOMEN.

A Word of Hope for Despairing Ones.

Kidney trouble makes weak, weary, worn women. Backache, hip pain, dizziness, headache, nervousness, indigestion, urinary troubles make women suffer untold misery. Ailing kidneys are the cause. Cure them. Mrs. S. D. E. H. N. Broadway, La. Mar. Mo. says: "Kidney trouble wore me down till I had to take to bed. I had terrible pains in my body and limbs and the urine was annoying and full of sediment. I got worse and doctors failed to help. I was discouraged. Duane's Kidney Pills brought quick relief and a final cure and now I am in the best of health."

A Realist.

"I am a great believer in realism," remarked the poet.

"Yes," we queried with a rising intonation, thereby giving him the desired opening.

"I sometimes carry my ideas of realism to a ridiculous extreme," continued the poet.

"Indeed!" we exclaimed in amazement, somewhat impatient to reach the point of his wit.

"Yes," continued the poet, "the other day I wrote a sonnet to the gas company and purposely made the meter defective."

Your Salary.

The universe pays every man in his own coin; if you smile, it smiles upon you in return; if you frown, you will be frowned at; if you sing, you will be invited to gay company; if you think, you will be entertained by thinkers; and if you love the world and earnestly seek for the good that is therein, you will be surrounded by loving friends, and nature will pour into your lap the treasures of the earth. Consume, criticize and hate, and you will be censured, criticised and hated by your fellow men.—N. W. Zimmerman.

Look at the Names.

In 4 A. D. Fearadhaich Fionashtas was an Irish king, a "most just and good prince," who was slain by his successor, Fiachadh Eion, who was treated to a similar fate by Fiachadh Fionashtas, "the prince with the white cows," who died at the hands of "the Irish plebeians of Connaught." Eochair Moidmheadhain was one of the half dozen who died of natural causes, and Flaithbheartagh was one of the two to resign the monarch's scepter for the monk's cowl.—New York Press.

And Ma Fainted.

"Why did she refuse you?" she asked her son, with fine scorn.

"Well," the boy replied between his sobs, "she objects to our family. She says pa's a loafer, that you're too fat and that everybody laughs at Daise Mayne because she's a fool and talks about nothing but the greatness of her family." (Chauncey threw water in his mother's face, but at three o'clock this afternoon she was still in a swoon, with four doctors working on her.)—Atchison (Kan.) Globe.

BAD DREAMS Caused by Coffee.

"I have been a coffee drinker, more or less, ever since I can remember, until a few months ago I became more and more nervous and irritable, and finally I could not sleep at night for I was horribly disturbed by dreams of all sorts and a species of distressing nightmare."

"Finally, after hearing the experience of numbers of friends who had quit coffee and were drinking Postum, and learning of the great benefits they had derived, I concluded coffee must be the cause of my trouble, so I got some Postum and had it made strictly according to directions."

"I was astonished at the flavor and taste. It entirely took the place of coffee, and to my very great satisfaction, I began to sleep peacefully and sweetly. My nerves improved, and I wish I could wave every man, woman and child from the unwholesome drug—ordinary coffee."

"People really do not appreciate or realize what a powerful drug it is and what terrible effect it has on the human system. If they did, hardly a pound of it would be sold. I would never think of going back to coffee again. I would almost as soon think of putting my hand in a fire after I had once been burned."

"A young lady friend of mine had stomach trouble for a long time, and could not get well as long as she used coffee. She finally quit coffee and began the use of Postum and is now perfectly well. Yours for health."

SOUTH'S NEW SPIRIT.

The revival of prosperity in the South has developed a new co-operative citizenship. In the announcement of the Alabama State Fair in Birmingham, October 11 to 20, the directors say:

"Prosperity is founded on public spirited citizenship. Industry and commerce are descendants of active co-operation, hence the business men of Birmingham and district have organized to create prosperity and disseminate that element throughout the entire State. No agent can better reach all sections and interests than a State Fair—bringing together all classes of industries and the products of various enterprises. Exhibitions are educational factors, and advertise intelligent methods, and results—not only to promote sales, but to give ideas to others."

"The Alabama State Fair and Exhibit Association invites the co-operation of every citizen of Alabama—each county of the State is urged to represent the work or industry of its people at the Fair. This spirit of advertising the State's resources creates a more general interest in business success and brings together her citizens in a closer relation as co-workers, and promotes a co-operative spirit that is beneficial commercially and socially. The Fair in October will be filled with interest to visitors, and to each of you, the management, the Business men's league, and Birmingham extends a cordial welcome."

KEEPING HIS BALANCE.

A Story With a Moral That is Told Among the Tartars.

There is a story told among the Tartars which has a moral for the civilized men of the present day. It is to this effect: Robo, cousin of the great mogul, was condemned to death for participation in a rebellion. The most skillful swordsmen in the empire were provided for the execution, and the great mogul and his court were present as spectators.

The thin, keen blade flashed in the sunlight and descended upon the bare neck of Robo, who stood upright to receive the stroke.

The executioner's work was so deftly done that, though the head was severed, not a vital organ was disturbed. Robo remained standing.

"What, Robo, art thou not beheaded?" exclaimed the great mogul.

"My lord, I am," replied Robo, "but as long as I keep my balance right my head will not fall off."

The great mogul was placated. A band was put on Robo's neck, and he recovered. He afterward became a loyal subject and was made cashier of the empire because, as the great mogul remarked:

"He knows that if he keeps his balance right his head will not come off."—Exchange.

MAKESHIFT COMPASS.

Floet a Magnetized Sewing Needle in a Bowl of Water.

If a thoroughly dry and clean sewing needle is carefully laid on the surface of water in a basin the needle will float in spite of the high density of steel—seven or eight times that of water. On close inspection it is found that the surface of the water is depressed under the needle, much as if there were a thin film stretched over the water and slightly indented by the weight of the needle.

This property of liquids of offering a certain resistance to a force exerted upon their surface is termed "surface tension." The magnitude of the force of surface tension varies from one liquid to another. It is greatest in the case of mercury. The cause of the phenomenon must probably be looked for in the attraction of the liquid molecules to one another.

A sewing needle thus floating upon water may be used as a compass if it has previously been magnetized. It will then point north and south and will maintain this position if the containing vessel is moved about. If the needle is displaced by force it will return to its position along the magnetic meridian as soon as the restraint is removed.—Chicago Tribune.

This space for Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothing--the best Clothes on earth

YOU'RE going to have, this coming Fall, a chance to buy and wear the Best Clothes in the World; the kind of clothes that well-dressed men are always glad to buy.

HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX CLOTHES

are to be the features of our line this coming season; and we want every man of you to know it early, and keep it in mind for the time you next think of buying clothes.

We are making a specialty of these goods because we want you to get the greatest possible value for your money.

You want value; that's the only real way to economize in clothes; and value means the sort of quality Hart, Schaffner & Marx put into their goods. They're all wool, in every thread of fabrics, they represent the products of the best weaves in the world, and they offer a greater variety for your selection than you'll find in any half-dozen other make put together.

But all-wool, vitally important as it is to your interest as a wearer, is not the only thing we know about Hart, Schaffner & Marx quality. These clothes are designed right; the whole question of fit depends on that; and it's important to you to know that you can be correctly fitted without trouble here.

They're correct in style, of course, and perfectly tailored; these makers know their business well enough not to spoil good all-wool fabrics, fine linings and trimmings by designing and tailoring that are wrong.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx are the best clothes makers in the world; and every dollar of value they put into the goods is there for you to get out in the wear.

We are discontinuing our other CLOTHING at a sacrifice price to make room for the Hart, Schaffner & Marx line, while they last, 50 cents on the dollar from the original price will be what we ask; better get into one quick.

GENTLEMEN!

We are going to sell every Suit of Clothing in this house before going to market, if possible. If you want to buy two suits for the price of one, now is your time to take advantage of the opportunity.

HATS.

You know the BONAR HAT like a book; there's no better made; they are worth $5.50, but we are going to let you buy them for a few days at almost half that amount.

SHOES.

Crossett & Peters, the best shoes found in the South, OXFORDS in either line at a sacrifice. To fit you is to sell you.

FANCY VESTS.

They'll be worth twice the money this Fall; better buy a couple now.

When to Stop.
The shrewd lawyer knows when to stop questioning, and says is more shrewd than the one who, conducting a case of bribery, questioned a man
the other day who is rated high in the business world.

"Have you yourself ever refused a bribe?" he asked.

"No, but—"
"That is all," said the lawyer.

At a later time he was asked why he had dismissed the witness so soon.

"Because," he replied, "I knew by the 'but' that he was going to tell me
no one had ever attempted to bribe him."—New York Times.

Compensation For Injury.
Compensation for injury in the volume of the accounts of the lord high treasurer of Scotland, just published, tells incidentally of payments made to sufferers in the siege of Glasgow in 1544. To a currier who lost his horse $25 was paid, but $10.50 suffered for a woman whose husband was killed, a like sum being given to the owners of two broken drums.

Forenight.
Little George, who was four years old, had been told many Bible stories.
Among them was the story of the flood and the building of the ark by Noah.

One day a storm threatened. The clouds grew darker, the wind arose,
and suddenly the rain began to fall.

"Auntie," said George, "do you think it is going to storm?"

"Yes, I think it will," was the reply.

"Do you think it will be a hard storm?" asked the little fellow.

"Yes, I think it will be a hard storm," the aunt replied.

"Well, don't you think some of us had better begin building an ark?" he asked.—Los Angeles Times.

Better Not Get
Dyspepsia

If you can help it, Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion.
But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it.
Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), dizziness, headache, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia" tablets, physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peptic is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.
Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well
as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest.
That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say, that it has not done you any
good, return the bottle to the druggist and
he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good.
This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 24 times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

NEW CHIEF OF NAVIGATION

Rear Admiral William P. Potter, who recently became chief of the bureau of navigation, succeeding Rear Admiral Pillsbury. This post is considered one of the best in the navy department. Admiral Potter was formerly commander of the fourth division of the Atlantic battleship fleet. He was born in New York and was graduated from Annapolis in the class of 1889. In the war with Spain he was executive officer of the cruiser New York, flagship of the fleet. On the world cruise he was in command of the Vermont until advanced to his present rank, coming home in charge of the fourth division.

DREAM REVEALS GEM

Man Who Lost It at Dance Recovers It Months Afterward.

Takes Advice of Woman Who Believes in Visions and Recovers Ring in Gutter—No One Had Stepped on Jewel.

Holden, Mass.—After dreaming he saw a diamond ring, lost six months ago, lying in a gutter in Holden, George A. Moore of No. 724 Main street, Worcester, Mass., came here and picked up the ring in the spot where he saw it lying in his dream. As a result the lucky possessor of the $250 ring has joined the ranks of those who firmly believe in dreams.

Moore, who travels much, told the story of the recovery of the ring while here. It is best told in his own words:

"In February last the dancing school I attended in Worcester had a barn dance in Holden, and I dressed myself up in the costume of a Reuben and went to the dance. I decided not to wear my diamond ring, and wore instead one of those large carbuncle glass rings sold in any five and ten-cent store. I put my diamond ring in my pocket, however.

"During the evening one of the young women saw the ring I had on and began to jolly me about it. I stood for the jollying for awhile, but when the other girls began to kid me I took out my good ring, and said I had a good one if I chose to wear it.

"One of the girls said she would like to wear it awhile, but I said 'I guess not,' and put it back in my pocket. I had on my 'Rube' costume then. I thought nothing more of the incident until I changed my clothes before returning to Worcester. Then I missed the ring. A careful search of all my pockets failed to bring the ring back, and even the search made of the car on which I rode home was unsuccessful.

"The months wore on and the ring was all but forgotten. Friends who knew of the incident had helped me search for it, and even advertising for it did no good. The other night, however, I had a dream. Now I don't ordinarily dream. I'm not accustomed to it. But this was a real dream and I had to stand for it. In my dream I saw that ring, and there was no mistaking it.

"It was lying in a stone gutter, near a big building, and I had to guess where the spot was. Then I recognized the place, for I was sure it was at the rear end of the town hall. I woke up suddenly, but there was no ring in sight, and then I decided it was more sleep I wanted.

"That dream worried me some. I talked about it to a woman friend of mine, and she being a more firm believer in dreams than I, quite insisted that I go to Holden and take a look around the town hall. I had some business in Greendale and when I finished that I took a transfer for Holden. I went to the place where I dreamed the ring was lying, and to my astonishment and joy, there it was. The gold was scratched and the stone covered with dirt.

"How many people," Moore asked, holding up the ring, "do you suppose have walked on that ring?"

"Those who heard the story wouldn't even hazard a guess, but he was sure there had not been one.

TRADE SLUMPS $550,000,000

Big Decrease for 1908 Shown in the International Union of American Republics.

Washington.—Economic causes which affected commercial centers throughout the world during 1908 had a serious effect on the countries composing the international union of American republics, as shown by figures compiled by the international bureau of American republics.

The aggregate of trade for the various countries during 1908 was $4,848,019,947, against $5,415,798,197 in the preceding year, a loss of over $550,000,000. In the total for the year the share of the United States is represented by $2,869,282,928, as compared with $3,346,596,025 in 1907, a decrease of $477,313,097 being indicated. Latin America figured in the grand total for $1,977,737,019, showing a decline of $89,647,589 in the trade volume as compared with 1907.

Imports into all of Latin America during 1908 showed a decline of $107,043,854, while on the other hand exports show a gain of $15,578,701 over 1907.

To Seek South Pole.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Capt. Rowland W. Webster, appointed by the Royal Geographical society to lead an expedition in search of the south pole, has left for New York. He will embark from there for London to prepare for the antarctic trip which will begin next August.

Notification of the appointment came to Capt. Webster as he reached San Francisco on his twenty-fifth journey across the world.

He earned his title in the Sudan with Lord Kitchener. He also served in the Boer war.

Fall in Naval Test.

Washington.—Because of mental or physical deficiencies half the candidates for commissions in the United States marine corps failed to pass the examinations here. Eighteen of 29 who failed were mentally fit, but were deficient physically. Seven failed mentally, and the four other candidates did not pass the final, or professional, examinations.

NEW MOUNTAIN ROAD

Picturesque Austrian Line from Gastein to Spittal Finished.

Cost Millions to Build and Open New Country to Tourists—Also is an Important Connecting Link.

Vienna, Austria.—At a cost of $90,000,000 the Austrian ministry of railways has just completed building the Tauern railway between Gastein in Salzburg and Spittal in Carinthia. The line is only 30 miles in length and its enormous cost was due to the engineering difficulties, which included the construction of a tunnel 5 1/2 miles long costing $6,000,000.

For Austria the Tauern railway will have great value in opening up a new stretch of country to the home and foreign tourist of surpassing picturesque interest. But it has also great international importance, as in conjunction with three other railways built by the Austrian ministry within the past few years, the Wochener, Karawanken and Pyhrn lines, it forms a new connecting link between central Europe and the Adriatic. This means lower freight rates between Germany and the Mediterranean. And it is not without political significance, too, as these lines, making a second route to Trieste, pass through German districts of Austria, whereas the present main line to the south runs largely through Italian and Slav districts.

The Tauern is one of the prettiest bits of mountain railway in the Alps, running as it does through a magnificent region of mountains and fertile valleys. It is especially interesting from the engineering standpoint. The Tauern tunnel is the second longest in Austria and took seven years to build. The work was full of trouble and peril. Water rushed in frequently and the laborers suffered greatly from the heat when reaching the center. The rock was unusually hard and the boring process was necessarily slow.

A new kind of explosive rock met with for the first time, gave the engineers much trouble. The "knalgestein," as it is called, detached itself from the sides of the tunnel without the slightest previous warning, and with a loud report, in great slabs half an inch thick, causing much alarm among the workmen and frequently bruising and injuring them.

The building of the line, in fact, was at the cost of many lives. An avalanche suddenly swept down the mountain side one morning in March, 1908, carrying away a workmen's dining room, where some 50 men were breakfasting at the time. Only 11 were saved.

The workmen, of whom there were some 3,000, were a very cosmopolitan lot. Italians were the most numerous, but there were also Macedonians, Croats, Albanians and Servians.

Extends Use of Oil as Fuel.

Salt Lake City.—The trial of an oil-burning locomotive on the Southern Pacific division between Sparks and Carlin, Nev., has proved so satisfactory that the company has decided to retire all the coal-burning engines on that division. The change will be made at once.

THINK THEY CAN FOOL HENS

Pennsylvania Farmers Will Experiment by Rapidly Alternating Darkness and Light to Produce Eggs.

Ringtown, Pa.—Can a hen be fooled by a trick of the imagination into laying three eggs instead of one every 24 hours?

This is the question which several farmers in this agricultural region propose to test. Hens are to be kept in absolute darkness for several hours to represent the night, then a brilliant electric light is to be turned on at intervals to represent daylight.

Chicken fanciers declare that hens carry large numbers of embryo eggs which are never laid because of the long established habit of laying but one every day. They theorize that if this habit can be broken up and the hens given additional nutriment the supply of eggs can be greatly increased.

Rides Horse into Hotel.

New York.—Frank J. Mackey, the well-known California millionaire, who has resided chiefly in England for a number of years, has been fined $10 and costs in a London police court for riding a horse into one of the hotels, according to a cablegram received here.

Mr. Mackey is said to have made a wager that he would ride the horse into the hotel and around the billiard table. He did so and was cited to appear in police court. In paying his fine, he said he was satisfied because he had won the wager.

Latham to Try Again.

Calais.—Hubert Latham, the aviator who made two unsuccessful attempts to cross the English channel in his aeroplane, has determined to attempt to win the Deutsch prize of $5,000 for the first aeroplane to cross the channel with a passenger.

Finds Diamond in Well.

East Las Vegas, N. M.—T. R. Gentry while digging a well on his claim, eight miles south of Tucuman, in Quay county, excavated a genuine diamond in a bucket of dirt which he took from the well.

His 13-year-old daughter, who was playing near the well, discovered the sparkler when the dirt was dumped from the bucket. Mr. Gentry sent the stone to St. Louis jeweler, who pronounced it genuine and offered him $500 for it.

SCARES AWAY THE INSECTS

Spider Painted on a Bald Head Scares Away the Pestiferous Little Mosquito.

Winsted, Conn.—Otis E. Gillette, enterprising porter at the Highland Lake hotel, is bald-headed. There have been a number of New Jersey people at the hotel this season and he thinks they must be responsible for a consignment of Jersey "skeeters," which made his bald head their lighting place. Gillette, of ingenious turn of mind, had a large spider painted on his bald crown and now, he says, the mosquitoes do not bother the bald man.

Gillette is so well pleased with the result of his experiment that he is going to have a spider tattooed on his head, as the painted one wears off too quickly.

Messenger Finds Gem.

Newport.—A published notice that a valuable diamond brooch attached to a black silk bow had been lost near the Newport Casino, started Robert Welsh, a messenger boy, out on the Bellevue avenue in front of the residence of Frank Work of New York. He returned the gem to the jeweler who advertised, and received $25 for his honesty. The brooch is the property of Miss Ruth Trembly, daughter of H. McK. Trembly. It is worth $9,000.

Try Water Cure for Pellagra.

Hot Springs, Ark.—The thermal waters of Hot Springs are to be tested in an effort to find a cure for the disease of pellagra. Two subjects have been brought to this city from Mississippi for treatment and observation by local medical men.

Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 5, 1909

Specially Arranged for This Paper

LESSON TEXT.—Acts 20:22. Memory verses II. 2. GOLDEN TEXT.—"I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."—PHIL. 4:13. TIME.—Paul left Ephesus late in A. D. 54. December, 24. January and February, 57, at Corinth. He reached Miletus and conferred with the Ephesian elders the last of April. PLACE.—Paul, after leaving Ephesus, went through Macedonia to Corinth and returned by the same route to Philippi, Troas and Miletus.

Suggestion and Practical Thought. A Pastor's Wise Counsel Reechoed by Example.

1. Paul's Journeys Among the European Churches.—Vs. 1-5. We learn from 2 Cor. 1:8-10, written not a great while after Paul left Ephesus, that he left that city because his life was in danger if he remained, and he could no longer do his work there. He was in depressed frame of mind from ill health. From Ephesus he took a trading vessel to Troas on his way to Philippi. Here a door was opened, but he was restless because Titus failed to meet him there with news from the church at Corinth. (2 Cor. 2:12, 13, 5, 6, 8-16.)

Paul took another vessel to Philippi, where he was joined by Titus, and later to Berea and Thessalonica, where Timothy joined them, and they joined in addressing the second letter to the Corinthians. In the autumn he went to Greece and spent three months there, chiefly in Corinth, where he had much to do amid sickness and afflictions on every side, "fightings without and fears within" (2 Cor. 4:7-11; 7:5, 6) in caring for the churches (2 Cor. 11:28) and correcting wrong conduct (2 Cor. 12:20, 21; 13:1, 2). It was four or five years since he had left them, after a stay of a year and a half.

During all this time collections were taken up in the various churches on this tour for Paul to carry to the poor disciples at Jerusalem, according to his promise seven years before (Gal. 2:10). Seven delegates had been appointed to accompany Paul, but a plot of the Jews determined him to change his plans and, instead of going by water, he, together with five delegates from Europe, went by land to Troas, where two delegates from Troas joined him.

2. Paul's Experience at Troas.—Vs. 6-12. Paul and his company remained a week at Troas, a seaport on the Aegean sea. They reached Troas five days after the Passover. Paul, on the evening of the Lord's day, held a preaching service and holy communion in an upper chamber. As Paul was to sail the next morning the service lasted till midnight. A young man was sitting in the latticed window of the third story. The place was crowded and hot, the hour was late, and the young man was weary, so that he was overpowered by sleep and fell down three stories to the ground and was taken up for dead. Paul immediately went down by the outside stairs common in Oriental houses, and fell on him, embracing him, as Elijah in the case of the widow of Zarephath (1 Kings 17:21), and Elisha, in that of the Shunammite's son. Doubtless Paul prayed as earnestly as those prophets, and the close contact, the clasp of warm affection gave new intensity to the prayer of faith. His prayer was answered, and the young man was restored. The incident revealed the love, the faith and the power of Paul and the religion he represented.

3. Paul's Review of His Life at Ephesus.—Vs. 13-17. Luke, the change of pronouns to "we" in v. 13 shows that Luke had now joined the party, and he continues with them till they reached Jerusalem (Acts 21:17).

On the fourth day they reached Miletus, beyond Ephesus. The vessel was detained here for an uncertain length of time and Paul sent for the Ephesian elders to come to Miletus and meet him, for it would not be safe for him to go to be ready to embark at short notice. Paul meets the elders of Ephesus. Luke was probably present at the meeting, so that he was able to report what Paul said.

Those present knew that he was speaking the truth. What he had done and taught was an example for them to follow and an inspiration to faithfulness.

1. He did his work (v. 19) "with all humility of mind." He was not self-seeking; he was ready to do the humblest service for the humblest person. He worked with his hands, although brought up in the midst of wealth and learning. Paul set Christ forward and kept himself in the background.

2. Amid great difficulties. "With many tears," not for himself, but for others. And this (v. 31) "night and day with tears, expressing the intensity of sympathy and desire for their good." (V. 19) "And temptations." Trials of his temper, of his patience, through persecutions and bitter hostility of those he came to help.

3. Vs. 20, 27. "I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." All that God had revealed to him concerning salvation, whether men were willing to receive it or not. They hated to be told of their sins, and that they could not be saved unless they repented and forsook their sins. "I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you."

4. Paul used both of the two great methods of bringing men to Christ—by masses and by individuals. Every wise preacher and Sunday school teacher teaches both "publicly and from house to house."

THE SECRET OF HAPPINESS.

Unselfishness in Life is the One Thing That Will Transform All Things to Gold.

The moment we set about the task of making every human being we come in contact with better for knowing us—more cheerful, more courageous, and with greater faith in the kindness of God and man—that moment we begin to attain the third purpose of life—personal happiness.

Would you possess the magic secret of the alchemist which transforms all things to gold?

It is unselfishness—or, to use a better word, selflessness.

He who goes forth bent upon being always kind, always helpful, in the little daily events of life, will find all skies tinted with gold, all his nights set with stars, and unexpected flowers of pleasure springing up in his pathway.

And all his tears shall turn into smiles.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Severe.

Samuel Gompers was talking in the smokeroom of the Baltic about a recent newspaper attack on a rich corporation.

"It was a cruel attack," Mr. Gompers chuckled. "It was as cruel as the Jonesville Clarion's paragraph about old Deacon Hiram Ludlow."

This paragraph headed the Clarion's obituary column. It said:

"Deacon Hiram Ludlow of Frisbie township, aged 82, passed peacefully away on Thursday last from single ailment to matrimonial bliss after a short but severe attack by Maria Higgins, a blooming widow of 37 summers."—Detroit Journal.

The Newer Way.

Many ideas in regard to women have entirely changed, and among the better and wiser changes is that old thought that the women who were given to good works must needs be dowdy. It is undeniable that "good" women used to wear dowdiness as a sort of hall mark of virtue. As a matter of fact, dowdiness is merely a mark of bad taste and a sign of some lack in the mind. Women are no longer lacking in the wisdom that chooses pretty rather than ugly clothing, and those who do not make the best of their appearance are losing a golden opportunity of giving pleasure.

Aid Fight Against Tuberculosis.

At the recent meeting of the National Association of Bill Posters, held in Atlanta, Ga., it was decided to donate to the campaign against tuberculosis $1,200,000 worth of publicity. The bill posters in all parts of the United States and Canada will fill the vacant spaces on their 3,500,000 boards with large posters illustrating the ways to prevent and cure consumption. The Poster Printers' association has also granted $100,000 worth of printing and paper for this work. This entire campaign of bill-board publicity will be conducted under the direction of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in cooperation with the National Bill Posters' association.

They Were Good Mothers.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton is quoted as saying that a woman's first duty is to develop all her powers and possibilities, that she may better guide and serve the next generation. Mrs. Stanton raised seven uncommonly healthy and handsome children, says a admirer of hers, and the children of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe testify to the virtues of the noted woman as a mother. Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Matters of Special Moment to the Progressive Agriculturist

Where everyone has an axe to grind there will be little bowing to the No advantage is realized by gained by taking advantage.

The careful policy of a progressive agriculturist is to assist and encourage as much as possible the agricultural industry. Plant crops and raise stock, home use first, next market, then stock for sale. Visit farmers who raise crops and stock. Either to buy or to sell, a narrow market.

To bleach or not to bleach, that is the question that is asked by the present time. The farmers are hoping that the weather will be one way or the other and that a going away.

All political parties look alike. The Farmers' union is long as the business in such a way as to get the interests of the farmer. What we need most is better laws.

A more just administration of the law. Dairyman usually figure their costs received for butter fat. The taking into consideration the feed value of the skim milk or the value of the manure produced. If the latter items could be figured as well as the first there would be fewer complaints that dairymen don't pay.

One man, who seems to know, says: "They sell us fruit jam made without fruit, butter that never has the milk pail, potted chicken, all goods that never said 'bush', but let it to the buyer to say it." If the modern industry the good old days are preferable when the farmers had their own chicken and spun their own yarn.

SPECULATOR NOT TO BLAME

Farmers Must Have Strong, Comp. Organization and Good Leaders to Win.

Cotton has left the produce lands and the same bales which farmers sold for eight cents are being sold by the speculators at a price that would buy 11 cents. Is the speculator to blame for this? No, he is to blame for the farmers' loss. The speculator paid the price required to get commodity which was being offered on a market long gutted and held until the spinner needed it for spinning. The speculator had nothing to do with forcing the farmer to sell at eight cents. At least he exercised no controlling influence in the matter.

Farm and Ranch has condemned where condemnation is deserved. In the duty of a paper to do this, condemnation of speculators.

Members will never bring fair prices for cotton or other crops. The restriction of the influence of the speculator and gambler will clear the road to fair prices of great oblation. But after all the farmer is self-taught, by his own efforts, to reach that goal. No one else will call him—no one else can carry him. Merchants and bankers can make money easy, but there are obstacles which he himself must overcome. There are streams which himself must bridge.

Sometimes it may be necessary to appeal to men's prejudices, in order to move them to action; but it is ways dangerous to do so. There is little old saying that "he whom you would destroy, they first must lead."

No military campaign was ever won without a well-organized and well-commanded by men worthy of confidence of those whom they were capable of properly planning, carrying into execution their plan. With a loose sort of organization in which every soldier feels free to do as he chooses, and who serves the right to act as he will, general can succeed.

With men in command who do inspire their subordinates with confidence in their ability to direct campaign to successful issue, private in the ranks cannot do their best. The bravest and truest will, nevertheless, but they will do so only to be slaughtered. Now is the time. Victory. Remember that organization, compact, and leadership, and of competent, are necessary. Organization first and then action. Army organized for the purpose of war will become restive under discipline.

Let the farmers' organizations double their efforts for recruits, to their ranks. Select men of highest degree of capability and put a solid front in defense of prices of this year's crop.

Let the newspapers, bankers, merchants and everybody in the agricultural section aid them. Farm and Ranch is doing its best to rectify the situation. The men who do the crop must defend their prices.—Farm and Ranch.

Cow Peas in Melons.

Cow peas are not bad for a melon after the crop is well advanced. They shade both the ground and the melons, besides gathering nitrogen from the crops.

A CRUMB OF BREAD.

Its Effect on the Tip of a Vivacious Woman's Nose.

"Isn't it terrible," said the society woman, "what a tiny thing can prove a tragedy to poor, self vaunting mankind! A speck almost invisible in the eye of an athlete may disempower him utterly and render him as helpless as a baby. And a lost hairpin or the breaking of a bowtie may transform the most smartly groomed woman into an object of amusement to all observers."

"At a dinner I attended not long ago a lady sitting opposite me lodged in some inexpressible manner a large crumb of bread directly on the end of her nose without being conscious of the fact, and there it remained. The ludicrous effect was beyond the power of words to describe or of human riches to resist. She is an extremely vivacious woman, generous with smiles and little bows and motions of her head, and as she chatted gayly with those about her it was impossible for us to restrain our unseemly mirth. Naturally she thought this was caused by her remarks, and she continued to toss off jests with a lightness of air. We were all in agony, but no one summoned courage to tell her, each of us preferring to leave that kindly act to another. After a time she addressed a remark to her husband, who sat next to her and had been deceiving himself to the lady at his own side. He turned to look at his wife, and in an instant a clever touch of his napkin removed the offending fragment, but I can never forget it as long as I live."—New York Press.

THE PENGUIN.

The penguin does not fly—he hops, balancing himself by his flippers, or rudimentary wings. He is about two feet in height, and has a long, neckless body, and a head that is not a bit of fun for the penguin, though, when Oxford led the way in adopting the new fashion of trousers that were to supersede light breeches and top boots. Just about that period a don of Trinity met an undergraduate arrayed in all the splendor of the new fashion. "Young man," said the don reverently, "you will come to no good. You wear a broken leopards and keep a dog." The young man afterward became Dr. Sumner and bishop of Winchester.—London Chronicle.

Laxative for Women Free

There is a great difference in the purposes to which a laxative should be put. Tablets and pills, salts, etc., are usually violent purgatives or cathartics, and altogether too powerful for the average person.

A woman at all times needs only a mild laxative—in fact, none other is needed by anyone, weak or strong though she may be, for the object is simply to move the bowels, and if a gentle laxative will do it, what is the use of a violent one?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has earned a well-deserved vogue among women and children and old folks—people who must necessarily be careful of what they take. It is a liquid laxative tonic and admittedly the greatest stomach, liver and bowel remedy before the American people. The price is only 50 cents or $1 bottle, as it comes in both sizes, and all druggists sell it. Its pleasant taste and gentle action make it an ideal remedy for women in constipation, torpid liver, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn and such like digestive complaints. Its use for a short time will remove the trouble entirely so that future medication will be unnecessary. Its tonic properties build up the stomach and intestinal muscles so that they act naturally again. That this is so is the experience of many heads of families, like Mrs. Brannan, of Alameda, Va.; Mrs. E. L. Stout, of Louisville, Ky.; and numerous others; in fact, way out in Williams, Cal., as Mrs. J. E. Blackmore, of the place, writes, "the whole town seems to be using it."

If the remedy is new to you and you want to make a trial of it before buying, send your name to the doctor's address as below and a free test bottle will be sent you. Then, if you are satisfied with the results, you can buy it of your druggist.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 260 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

THE DON'S OPINION.

Fashion is as inexorable in men's as in women's dress. The undergraduate is perhaps the most telling example of this. It was so even a century ago, when Oxford led the way in adopting the new fashion of trousers that were to supersede light breeches and top boots. Just about that period a don of Trinity met an undergraduate arrayed in all the splendor of the new fashion. "Young man," said the don reverently, "you will come to no good. You wear a broken leopards and keep a dog." The young man afterward became Dr. Sumner and bishop of Winchester.—London Chronicle.

TO THE VOTERS OF ALABAMA.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 25, '09

Patrons: to the request heretofore made that a conference be held in Montgomery on September 15th, 1909, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of taking steps to inaugurate a campaign against the adoption of the constitutional amendment at placing prohibition in the organic law of the State, we beg to advise that this conference will be held in Montgomery on the date and time above mentioned at the Auditorium, and it is requested that a delegation from each county in the State send a full delegation.

We suggest that each precinct should have representation if possible.

This conference will adopt such methods as it may deem best to combat the proposition. Send the names of the delegates who will attend as soon as possible, and at any time before the conference meets, to J. Lee Long, room 612, Exchange Hotel, Montgomery, Alabama.

ARE YOU SICK?

Much sickness is due to a weak nervous system. Yours may be. If it is, you cannot get well until you restore nerve strength. Your nervous system is nature's power house; the organs of your body get their power from it. If the power is not there, the action of the organs is weak, and disease (sickness) follows. Dr. Miles' Nervine cures the sick because it soothes the irritated and tired nerves and gives the system a chance to recuperate. Try it, and see if you do not quickly feel its beneficial effect.

"I was given up to die by a leading doctor. Get one of Dr. Miles' Nervine pills at once. From the very first dose I took I got better. I am better now than I have been for years, and do all my own work on the farm. That's what Dr. Miles' Nervine has done for me, and I am glad to recommend it to others."

ARE YOU SICK?

Much sickness is due to a weak nervous system. Yours may be. If it is, you cannot get well until you restore nerve strength. Your nervous system is nature's power house; the organs of your body get their power from it. If the power is not there, the action of the organs is weak, and disease (sickness) follows. Dr. Miles' Nervine cures the sick because it soothes the irritated and tired nerves and gives the system a chance to recuperate. Try it, and see if you do not quickly feel its beneficial effect.

"I was given up to die by a leading doctor. Get one of Dr. Miles' Nervine pills at once. From the very first dose I took I got better. I am better now than I have been for years, and do all my own work on the farm. That's what Dr. Miles' Nervine has done for me, and I am glad to recommend it to others."

JOHN JAMES, Riverton, Neb.

Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nervine, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.

Smith, aged 16, at the family home
at Frayer's station, near Memphis, Tenn., Miss Blanche Smith, a teacher in the public schools and sister of the dead boy, collapsed suddenly under the strain and expired. The assemblage was dismissed, the brother's funeral was postponed and both were buried side by side.

Stories that have gone abroad
about the great speed at which President Taft's chauffeur takes the chief magistrate along the smooth
oil roadways about Beverly, Mass., have caused the summer White house mail to be flooded with letters from timid admirers of Mr.
Taft, urging that Robinson, who drives the president's car the greatest part of the time, be directed to exercise more caution.

One man was shot in the right leg and several others slightly injured by stones during a small riot
in the vicinity of the Pressed Steel Car company's works at McKees Rocks, Pa., where a strike has been in progress for six weeks. The trouble occurred when fifty strikers attempted to prevent an alleged strike breaker from entering the While driving to church at Frisbee station, near Kennett, Mo., five children of A. H. Hyde, a farmer, were killed by St. Louis & San Francisco train No. 811, which struck the wagon on a crossing a mile east of the Hyde home. The dead: Leila Hyde, 23; Julia Hyde, 20; Jesse Hyde, 17; Susie

During the last twelve years, the period covering the administration of Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson, the agricultural balance of trade in the United States increased from a yearly average of $234,000,000 to $411,000,000, or 75.7 per cent, according to the department's year book, just made

Two more American Dread-

each to cost $6,000,000, and will be equipped throughout with the latest improvements.

That $2,000,000 has been wasted
in digging drainage ditches in eastern Arkansas, and that the whole
drainage scheme on which millions
of money and years of energy, toil
and effort have been spent is a failure, is the startling feature of a report made by Arthur E. Morgan, superintending engineer of the government.

Richard D. Watkins, aged 24, cashier of the Central of Georgia railroad, was shot and probably fatally wounded at Augusta, Ga., by Miss Elvira Todd, aged 22. The police were compelled to break down the door of Watkins' office to capture the young woman, who, in her statement to the police, says
Watkins betrayed her.

Centralization of the combined

building of homes, club houses, libraries and gymnasiums for 8,500 employees, is a part of the plan.

In the opinion of Acting Mayor
John T. Walsh of Memphis, Tenn., and other members of the legislature council, who returned from Nashville, where they appeared before the Railroad commission in behalf of a union station, not less than two, and probably three, passenger stations will result on account of the failure of the railroads to get together on a union depot.

With the publication of Acting Secretary of the Navy Winthrop's approval of the findings of the court of inquiry that Lieut. James N. Sutton, Jr., of the United States marine corps was "directly and solely responsible for his own death at Annapolis two years ago," the famous Sutton case became a closed incident as far as the navy department is concerned.

The legislature of Coahuila, Mexico, refused to accept Governor Cardenas' resignation. Troops are being rushed to Monterey.

Lillian Ringheim, 7 years old,

AID THE FARMERS

Congressmen Meet State Agents of Co-Operative Demonstration.

Government Appropriates Money for Educational Work in the Southern States—Prepares for Appearance of Boll Weevil.

Representatives Clayton, Hoffman
and Dent met the other day at Dr. Knapp's office in Washington with the state agents of the farmers' co-operative demonstration work. This work is carried on under the supervision of Dr.
Knapp and this meeting was composed of agents representing 11 southern states. The object of the work is to improve farming conditions in these states. Demonstration is made in various sections to show how results may be increased by improved methods.
The various reports showed that the work is accomplishing wonderful results.

Heretofore Alabama has depended for this work upon contributions from the educational board, but beginning with the first of September next the government appropriations will apply
there.

This work has been done in some portions of districts represented by the congressmen who attended the meeting, and they asked for and were assured of an increase of the work in each of their districts.

Each congressman expressed hearty approval of and sympathy with the work. Representative Clayton asked for and obtained the services of two lecturers to be held at Columbia, Houston county, August 4, 5 and 6. Mr. Wilson, who has charge of this work in Alabama, said that the boll weevil is now about 80 miles from the west line of Alabama, and that it travels at the rate of 35 to 40 miles a year. At this rate it will soon appear in that state, and will possibly be doing damage in the next three years.

He is endeavoring with much success to prepare the farmer for its appearance. He says the first year of the weevil is generally the worst, because the farmers become panic-stricken. He is trying to prevent a panic and have the farmer prepared to meet the condition when it arrives.

Mr. Evans, who has charge of the work in Louisiana and Arkansas, said
the boll weevil had not been an un-
mixed evil; that the farmer, to meet
the condition, has intensified his farming and diversified his crop. By this means he is raising other crops to support himself and family and feed his
live stock and raising about as much
cotton upon a very much smaller acreage. He said that, as a result of this demonstration work, Louisiana this year would raise all the corn that she needed for home consumption, and that is the first time in her whole history that this has been done. The methods of combating the weevil, in brief, are the picking off of the first to appear and the gathering up and burning off of all dead squares in which the
eggs have been deposited; and improved, intensive cultural methods.

The congressmen say that they expect to have reports of these state
agents gathered and printed this fall.
They will then be ready to distribute
them to their constituents.

USEFUL FOR DRIVING POSTS

Portable Staging That Is Light Enough to Be Pushed About the Farm by Hand.

It is not always convenient to use a wagon drawn by horses as a platform for driving posts.

Platform for Driving Posts.

Build a platform of the kind indicated in the drawing and attach a pair of wheels. Old wagon wheels made of boards will suffice. They should be not less than 12 inches in diameter.
The dimension of the other parts should be: Length of platform, three to four feet; width of platform, two and a half to three feet; height, thirty to forty inches. A board nailed across the handles will render it easy for the worker to ascend and descend.

None Too Early.

The favorite time for seeding any crop of tame grass or alfalfa, with the exception of clover, is everywhere recognized as the fall, and more especially in the southern half of the corn belt. Where nature attempts to cover all bare ground with a binding crop of grass, starting it soon after an early spring, this grass seed becomes an enemy of spring seeding. This is more particularly the case with alfalfa. Fall seeding is the only way of circum-venting the grass pest.

Makes a Good Lamb Ration.

A recent feeding test shows that
lamb fed on a mixture of two parts
corn meal and one part cottonseed
meal made a weekly gain of three pounds per head for ten weeks. The lamb was fed 8 1/2 pounds each of the mixture per week. This is a very profitable gain for the grain fed and furnishes a hint to sheep feeders this fall. The lamb was fed on pasture, which partly accounts for the fine
results.

FENCE POST OF CONCRETE

Illustration and Directions Showing How One May Be Made Substantially and Cheaply.

Every practical farmer knows the value of a good concrete fence post.
As shown by the accompanying diagram I would bevel the seats of the post so as to take the strain off the bolt, which is the weak point in the concrete, then I would give the post two seats instead of one, making the joint somewhat like a ship lap or ship splice in a timber. The outer edge

Concrete Fence Post Plan.

of the lower seat must be beveled in the opposite direction from the main part of the seat so that the water will not run into the joint and rot the post. Instead of using old pipe for reinforcement as suggested I would put the bolts right through the pipe and not use wooden plugs, a smooth pipe would have little value as a reinforcement for concrete, and the strain being transversely of the post the reinforcement should be put in vertically and should consist of twisted iron or steel rods, or even the twisted and serrated fence band of tape would be of more value than a smooth piece of iron of any kind.

TO ERADICATE THE MOSQUITO

German Government Experimenting with Water-Plant to Kill Infection Carrying Pest.

Under the heading "A Vegetable Mosquito-Exterminator" the Municipal
Journal and Engineer of New York
published the following article:

"The effort to eliminate malaria by exterminating the mosquitoes which
are credited with transmitting the germs, is by no means confined to the United States and Cuba. The German government has been carrying on operations along this same line, and
is now investigating the practicability
of importing into its colonies the water-plant known as azolla, which
is semi-tropical and owes such efficacy as it may have in mosquito
extermination to the fact that it completely covers the water in which it grows to a thickness of over two inches, thus suffocating the mosquito larvae and preventing the deposit of eggs in the water. As this is a semi-tropical plant, it is probable that it would not thrive in the northern part of this country. If any ideas are entertained of testing its virtues in the southern states, we trust that the experience of a few years ago with the water hyacinth in southern waters will not be forgotten. It will be remembered that within a few years after the introduction of this water plant it had spread so abundantly as to almost entirely interrupt navigation in certain rivers. Should the azolla take kindly to our southern waters and spread over them a continuous layer of two or three inches of vegetation the result would certainly be disastrous. Until the existence of otherwise of this danger has been established, precaution should be taken by the government against the introduction of any plant which offers such possibilities of becoming a serious pest."

Harvest Plenty of Roughness.

You all remember the story of the school boy who said there were two seasons, one of the season of planting
and the other of picking. We are now rapidly approaching the season of picking, so far as the crop of roughness is concerned. By roughness, it is aimed to include all hay crops and any crop
of fodder or other forage usually fed
to stock through the winter, says Missouri Valley Farmer.

Feed of all kinds was scarce last spring. Grain was exceptionally so
and on many farms where the corn
crop could have been made to yield
an abundance of roughness for the mere work of putting it in stock, stock
lived through the spring months on a short ration of roughness. The long and short of it was this, many farmers
concluded they had enough of such
feed and quit harvesting long before
they really had. As a gentle reminder,
mentioned when timely, be sure to put
up enough this year.

Don't Mix Dairy Herd.

It is not wise to mix breeds in the dairy herd. That is, we do not deem it wisdom to have the herd composed
of Jerseys and Holsteins or of Jerseys and Shorthorns for the reason
that no two breeds require the same
treatment to get the most satisfactory
results at the milk pail. Select your breed and stick to it. You can't make a mistake in selecting either Holsteins, Jerseys, Guernseys or Ayr-
shires.

IN CONSTANT FLOW

SAMOAN VOLCANO POURS LAVA
INTO OCEAN

Only Four Years Old, But It Is Truly
the Titan of Them All—New Coast Line Is Being Created

In the island of Samoa, in the Pacific, during an eruption in the year 1903 there arose from the midst of a peaceful sea a volcano still rears its active head, and more motionless than the mountain range of which there is no doubt that it is a part.

Today this flow of lava has placed 100 feet in depth in the sea along a front of 100 feet, and seven miles, has destroyed the villages and as many as 100
what was once the most fertile
area in all Samoa. The lava has flowed 10 miles away from the crater.

It is sometimes possible to see
the lava flow at night, and it is
then by the glare of the lava
cane, whose twin plumes of smoke
become columns of fire, that the
lava becomes visible.

Above the ever settling lava, by
within the crater hangs a dense
son cloud, while eight miles
from the volcano cone a column of cloud, sometimes divided into
columns of apparent fire, is
the steam arising from the lava
poured by the red glowing lava
pours a Niagara of fire over the
that the ceaseless torrent of lava
rock builds higher and higher every
day. The ocean steamers passing Apia pass within close range of
this dramatic spectacle.

Scientists who have been here
recent flow say that every 100 300,000 tons of lava flow over the lower rim of the crater, and this resembling in any way the lava
va, but like molten iron spreads
the old field and beyond until the sea there is a Niagara of fire
miles in width. As this molten falls into the ocean, says Harper's
Weekly, it turns to a fine black
and sinks, and so a new coast line
being built up in water 100
feet deep.

This moving molten lake advances
at the rate of four miles an hour
it pours itself into the sea, columns
of water are raised in steam to
calculable heights, and this descending
in a fine rain of brine, destroys vegetation and corrodes the galleons
iron roofings of churches and trading stations for miles around.

As the torrents of boiling lava
break against the basalt cliffs or mounds left by the old flow cliffs are melted by the heat, hummocks dis-
integrated and carried forward by the flow to be hurled into the sea, where they explode like Titanic bombs, and
this is taking place every moment
along an ever widening area of ten miles at least. For more than a mile out in the ocean the lava boils,
and from the crater still flows a steady stream of lava greater than
said, than man has ever seen in the past from any volcano of which there is record.

Never once since that night four
years ago, when this volcano was born in a peaceful valley has it remained for a moment quiescent.

villages and as many as 100
what was once the most fertile
area in all Samoa. The lava has flowed 10 miles away from the crater.

It is sometimes possible to see
the lava flow at night, and it is
then by the glare of the lava
cane, whose twin plumes of smoke
become columns of fire, that the
lava becomes visible.

Above the ever settling lava, by
within the crater hangs a dense
son cloud, while eight miles
from the volcano cone a column of
cloud, sometimes divided into
columns of apparent fire, is
the steam arising from the lava
poured by the red glowing lava
pours a Niagara of fire over the
that the ceaseless torrent of lava
rock builds higher and higher every
day. The ocean steamers passing Apia pass within close range of
this dramatic spectacle.

Scientists who have been here
recent flow say that every 100
300,000 tons of lava flow over the
lower rim of the crater, and this
resembling in any way the lava
va, but like molten iron spreads
the old field and beyond until the
sea there is a Niagara of fire
miles in width. As this molten
falls into the ocean, says Harper's
Weekly, it turns to a fine black
and sinks, and so a new coast line
being built up in water 100
feet deep.

This moving molten lake advances
at the rate of four miles an hour
it pours itself into the sea, columns
of water are raised in steam to
calculable heights, and this descending
in a fine rain of brine, destroys vegetation and corrodes the galleons
iron roofings of churches and trading
stations for miles around.

As the torrents of boiling lava
break against the basalt cliffs or
mounds left by the old flow cliffs are
melted by the heat, hummocks dis-
integrated and carried forward by the
flow to be hurled into the sea, where
they explode like Titanic bombs, and
this is taking place every moment
along an ever widening area of ten miles at least. For more than a mile out in the ocean the lava boils,
and from the crater still flows a
steady stream of lava greater than
said, than man has ever seen in the
past from any volcano of which
there is record.

Never once since that night four
years ago, when this volcano was born in a peaceful valley has it remained for a moment quiescent.

According to the statistics of the national bureau of education, New England is conspicuous in the number of libraries. Her states lead the rest of the country, except that California is ahead of Rhode Island. The former state has one library for every 6,102 persons, while in Rhode Island there is one for every 8,411. The number of volumes per capita is, however, the little state is ahead having 200 volumes for each person, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut are ahead of her in the named, and Maine and Vermont are low.

Then remember the story of the school boy who said there were two
seasons, one of the season of planting
and the other of picking. We are now
rapidly approaching the season of picking, so far as the crop of roughness is concerned. By roughness, it is aimed
to include all hay crops and any crop
of fodder or other forage usually fed
to stock through the winter, says Missouri Valley Farmer.

Feed of all kinds was scarce last spring. Grain was exceptionally so
and on many farms where the corn
crop could have been made to yield
an abundance of roughness for the
mere work of putting it in stock, stock
lived through the spring months on a short ration of roughness. The long
and short of it was this, many farmers
concluded they had enough of such
feed and quit harvesting long before
they really had. As a gentle reminder,
mentioned when timely, be sure to put
up enough this year.

It is not wise to mix breeds in the dairy herd. That is, we do not deem
it wisdom to have the herd composed
of Jerseys and Holsteins or of Jerseys and Shorthorns for the reason
that no two breeds require the same
treatment to get the most satisfactory
results at the milk pail. Select your breed and stick to it. You can't make
a mistake in selecting either Holsteins, Jerseys, Guernseys or Ayr-
shires.

A recent feeding test shows that
lamb fed on a mixture of two parts
corn meal and one part cottonseed
meal made a weekly gain of three pounds per head for ten weeks. The
lamb was fed 8 1/2 pounds each of the mixture per week. This is a very profitable gain for the grain fed and
furnishes a hint to sheep feeders this
fall. The lamb was fed on pasture,
which partly accounts for the fine
results.

Undergoing an operation that might have resulted in his death,
in order to save the life of the woman he loves, Isa T. Weill, a prominent merchant of Memphis, Tenn., submitted to opiates for four hours
while surgeons transfused a quart of blood from his arm to the body of his bride of a few months, who lay ill with typhoid fever.

That $2,000,000 has been wasted
in digging drainage ditches in eastern Arkansas, and that the whole
drainage scheme on which millions
of money and years of energy, toil
and effort have been spent is a failure, is the startling feature of a report made by Arthur E. Morgan, superintending engineer of the government.

Mr. Evans, who has charge of the work in Louisiana and Arkansas, said
the boll weevil had not been an un-
mixed evil; that the farmer, to meet
the condition, has intensified his farming and diversified his crop. By this means he is raising other crops to support himself and family and feed his
live stock and raising about as much
cotton upon a very much smaller acre-
age. He said that, as a result of this demonstration work, Louisiana this
year would raise all the corn that she
needed for home consumption, and
that is the first time in her whole history that this has been done. The methods of combating the weevil, in
brief, are the picking off of the first to
appear and the gathering up and burning off of all dead squares in which the
eggs have been deposited; and improved, intensive cultural methods.

The congressmen say that they expect to have reports of these state
agents gathered and printed this fall.
They will then be ready to distribute
them to their constituents.

Under the heading "A Vegetable Mosquito-Exterminator" the Municipal
Journal and Engineer of New York
published the following article:

"The effort to eliminate malaria by
exterminating the mosquitoes which
are credited with transmitting the
germs, is by no means confined to the United States and Cuba. The German government has been carrying on
operations along this same line, and
is now investigating the practicability
of importing into its colonies the water-plant known as azolla, which
is semi-tropical and owes such
efficacy as it may have in mosquito
extermination to the fact that it completely covers the water in which it
grows to a thickness of over two
inches, thus suffocating the mosquito

The conference of citizens of Alabama, called to meet in Montgomery next Wednesday is timely and promises to be very interesting.

From the experience we already have of the prohibition statutes, it would be the height of folly to try to incorporate them into the organic law of the State until their value shall have been demonstrated, or their fallacy proven. With officers entering the homes of respectable citizens, on the mere suspicion that liquor may be discovered therein, it is time to call a halt, or goodness knows what will come next.

But it appears the prohibitionists are so elated with the success they have already attained, and afraid to give their venture into the unknown
a fair trial, are eager to engraft their views in the constitution
at once.

This the conference, called largely by many of the leading men of Alabama, will take steps to avert.

Cooper.

Cooper and Clanton baseball teams crossed bats at Clanton, September 6, 1909, in which Coopers was the winning team by a score of 16 to 2. Battery, for Clanton, Shepherd, Pyron and Pyron; for Coopers, Headley, Jones and Castle. The feature of the game was the pitching of Headley and Jones; Headley pitching the first six innings and not allowing but one hit, which was made by A. Pyron in the 5th, and that connected with two errors gave the Clanton boys two scores. Jones went in the box in the 7th inning and didn't allow a hit. The game was also featured by the heavy slugging of C. Holley, and E. and B. Headley, and the Clanton team decided that E. Headley had quit running and gone to flying, and just touched the ground now and then to steady himself.

This space for Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothing--the best Clothes on earth

YOU'RE going to have, this coming Fall, a chance to buy and wear the Best Clothes in the World; the kind of clothes that well-dressed men are always glad to buy.

HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX CLOTHES

are to be the features of our line this coming season; and we want every man of you to know it early, and keep it in mind for the time you next think of buying clothes.

We are making a specialty of these goods because we want you to get the greatest possible value for your money.

You want value; that's the only real way to economize in clothes; and value means the sort of quality Hart, Schaffner & Marx put into their goods. They're all wool, in every thread of fabrics, they represent the products of the best weaves in the world, and they offer a greater variety for your selection than you'll find in any half-dozen other make put together.

But all-wool, vitally important as it is to your interest as a wearer, is not the only thing we know about Hart, Schaffner & Marx quality. These clothes are designed right; the whole question of fit depends on that; and it's important to you to know that you can be correctly fitted without trouble here.

They're correct in style, of course, and perfectly tailored; these makers know their business well enough not to spoil good all-wool fabrics, fine linings and trimmings by designing and tailoring that are wrong.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx are the best clothes makers in the world; and every dollar of value they put into the goods is there for you to get out in the wear.

We are discontinuing our other CLOTHING at a sacrifice price to make room for the Hart, Schaffner & Marx line, while they last, 50 cents on the dollar from the original price will be what we ask; better get into one quick.

GENTLEMEN!

We are going to sell every Set of Clothing in this house before going to market, if possible. If you want to buy two suits for the price of one, now is your time to take advantage of the opportunity.

HATS.

You know the BONAR HAT like a book; there's no better hat made; they are worth $5.00, but we are going to let you buy them for a few days at almost half that amount.

SHOES.

Crossett & Peters, the best shoes found in the South, OXFORDS in either line at a sacrifice. To fit you is to sell you.

FANCY VESTS.

They'll be worth twice the money this Fall; better buy a couple now.

TIES.

The noblest line in the country will be included in this great sale.

Bethlehem

Editor Banner: This community was thrown into deep gloom when the Angel of Death entered the home of Mr. J. D. Hand, of Shelby and carried therefrom the soul of his little child, leaving behind a large number of relatives and numberless friends to mourn their loss. All that was mortal of this sweet little girl was tenderly laid to rest Sunday afternoon, surrounded by mourners who, though their grief and sorrow be great, are consoled with the words of Him who taught us that of such is the kingdom of heaven.

The crops around here are in a sorry condition, and it is feared that much suffering will result in the future among our people, but the Lord knows best, and if we will only trust and have faith in Him all will be well.

The church here has increased in every respect. We had a fine time on our last meeting day. Our pastor, Mr. Jefferson, preached on his regular appointment, which is the fourth Sunday. We had a great revival at the close of the protracted meeting just closed. Fourteen members joined the church and were baptized on the last day.

Mr. Frank Webb and wife, of Talladega Springs, have gone to Shelby on a visit.

I have just returned home from a very pleasant visit to relatives for the past week.

The farmers in this vicinity have commenced to gather their crops, which, although way below the standard, are nevertheless valuable. Success to the Banner. Yours, FELIX BAXLEY.

Professor Rasco will leave us on Saturday to teach law in Florida. We are sorry the Professor is going and wish him much success and happiness in his new home.

Concord

There will be a dedication service held at this place Sunday, Sept. 19th.

A dedication sermon will be delivered at 11 a. m. by Rev. F. M. Woods, of Clanton, Ala. There will be singing the remainder of the day.

Everybody is invited to come. Bring your books and baskets and enjoy yourself in the service.

Editor of the Banner—Will you please allow me a small space in your dear paper to say a few words about this community?

The health of this community is not very good at the present time, there being a great deal of sickness. Mr. Hugh Hunter is down with fever, but is better, and we hope to see him up in a few days.

Cotton picking's all the go now. Mr. Bob Roebuck went to Selma Friday last and came back with a hurting in his side on account of not being able to get a thing to drink.

Mr. B. Henley has come home to stay a while.

Miss Ella and Gertie Klimes visited their cousin, Miss Minnie Klimes, Saturday last.

Mr. David Hanson is still going to Mr. Owen's regular, and Mr. Henry Klimes is still sparking at the same place, while Mr. Hugh Hunter has quit sparking out at Mr. Bill Klimer's.

Miss Rosie Mivas and sister visited Miss May White's Sunday last and report a nice time.

Misses Sallie and Eula Owens and Owens and Miss Alpha Pool visited Miss Everette Ratliff's Sunday last. They report an enjoyable occasion.

Mr. Harvie Pool and Mr. Harvie Owens visited Mrs. Tom Minor's Sunday evening after the girls got home. Boys, don't wait until they get home next time; put the brass on your face.

I'm ring off, hoping this will escape the waste basket. Best wishes to the dear old Banner and its many readers.

REVIVAL AT CLANTON.

The meeting at the court house, conducted by the Baptist state evangelist, Rev. W. J. Ray, continues to grow in interest. There is no one who hears him once but wants to hear him again. He presents the truths contained in God's word in the clearest home-like illustrations. His little dashes of wit never miss their mark, and the conceit of the people in this "neck of the woods" will be below par when the preacher is through "doing business" in "Nickelstown". If the church people recognized themselves, when he went fishing on Monday night and held them up to view as he pulled them out, as well as their neighbors did, he will have done a great work for Clanton. He is a great man, and God is using him for His name's honor and glory.

The music is an attractive feature of the meeting. Miss Nell Mullins presides at the piano. Miss Jattie Lawrence, our accomplished school teacher, lends valuable aid with her violin. The cornet playing of Mr. Parker is indeed a treat to the good people of Clanton. Mr. Carson, the singer, is a young man of rare gifts, and his life should be an inspiration to the young men with whom he comes in contact.

SHEEP AID TOBACCO

Later Is Almost Positive Cure
for Worm Parasites.

Fat Stocks Thought to Be Fit Only for Fertilizer Prove Fine Feed on Which Animals Wax Healthy.

In the recent past much has been said in the agricultural press about tobacco for the parasite worms in sheep. We live in one of the chief tobacco growing regions of Ohio and have a large flock of sheep. Some of our personal experience on this matter without the least idea of egotism might be of benefit to others who are interested in sheep, writes Ira G. Shalabarger in Farmers' Review. That tobacco is almost a positive cure for the worm parasite in sheep is an established fact, but too few really know how valuable it is and hesitate to use it.

One year ago weather conditions caused the tobacco to have a large amount of what is known as fat stems. Fat stems are the top leaves on tobacco stalks which are dark in color and are always sabby or are like tobacco when in high case and dry out only when hot, dry weather or summer comes and are fit for nothing but for fertilizer or possibly trash except to sheep breeders.

Our crop of tobacco was not exempt from them and we thought they were fit for only manure. As the crop of tobacco was stripped the stalks with fat stems still clinging to them were hauled to a large orchard, which is in blue grass, around the apple trees. The sheep were pastured in this orchard and to our utter amazement they ate the fat stems off the stalks as readily and with the relish that a child eats candy. Salt and water were always given the sheep, and in the stable night and morning they were fed oats and sorry to say, timothy hay as no other roughage was available. The sheep and lambs were wonderfully healthy and proved money makers.

This year the sheep have an occasional feed of tobacco saved from last year's trash with alfalfa, oats and run on grass. They are very healthy, lambs are growing nicely with no signs of worms. Somehow the flock of sheep in question seem to eat tobacco given them without being chopped fine or mixed with salt as some advocate. They don't eat vast quantities of it. Only sparingly. The tobacco growers of this section are anxious to sell their trash tobacco at from one to one and one-fourth cents per pound. It is believed that all who keep sheep could buy this tobacco at this price and feed it to the sheep at a big profit.

We heartily recommend tobacco for sheep and to get them started to eat it, powder it up or cut fine with a spade or other tool, mix with salt and put it where the sheep will have access to it. Feed no other salt and they will learn to eat it.

TETHERING THE FAMILY COW

Method Used in Holland Should Be Adopted Where Only One or Two Cows Are Kept.

Small farmers having one or two cows and not having any well-fenced pasture for them, should tether the animals as practiced in Holland and in other portions of northern Europe. says a writer in the Baltimore American. Have a good leather holster for each cow, a 20-foot tethering chain, with a swivel to prevent chain from wrapping up, can be had for 75 cents. The chain should be attached to a crooked stake down securely in the ground—the stake should be moved twice during the day. Horses are tethered by the following method: This consists of a pole, the short end of which is weighted, swiveled on stout stake driven securely in the ground. The halter strap is attached to the long end of pole. This allows the horse to graze all the grass around the pole. The halter being attached to the upper end is always above the back of the animal while feeding. This arrangement prevents the horse of cow from getting tangled up. It takes a little more time, but it is a safer method of tethering than by stake and chain. This is much the better method for tethering a horse or young cow. By tethering 12,000 feet of good grass land will feed one cow the entire summer months. This is a little over one-quarter acre of land. The droppings should be spread over the ground once a week. The tethering lot should be given a dressing of fine, raw bone meal at the rate of 100 pounds to the quarter acre and a thin coat of long horse manure spread over the sod before winter sets in. By this method the quality of the grass can be kept up and the stock economically fed throughout the summer.

Better Sell the Hogs Early.

Following a summer of scarce and high grain there is always a lot of hogs "roughed through" the summer which are sold during the fall after they are fattened on the new corn. By November they are generally present in such numbers in the market that they lower the price to quite a degree. By pushing the hogs it is possible to sell them before this rash occurs and it generally pays to do so. There is a large number of hogs this year to be fattened on new corn, hogs which would ordinarily have been sold during the summer.

SWEEPING TOBACCO IN BULK

Experiments with Priming and Wrapping Leaf Demonstrates Method to Be Profitable.

Experiments in recent seasons with priming and "bulk" sweating wrapper leaf tobacco have been so satisfactory that it is believed a much larger percentage of growers will profit by this method in the season of 1900.

The accompanying cut shows one-half of a bulk which weighed 7,000 pounds. It was composed of hands of experimental breeding tobacco raised by John H. Stegert, U. S. tobacco expert, in charge of the federal and the Connecticut state tobacco station at Hartfordville and also director of the experiments in Massachusetts.

Bulk sweating, it is claimed, has great advantages over the old method of case sweating. In the present instance every hand of tobacco was stanced up of leaves of a single plant tied and numbered according to a system, so that the seed of any particular plant might be sown for reproduction of the tobacco.

The bulk was laid in a stone and concrete sweat room. The bulk process may be followed in the same room in which case tobacco is being sweated. The hands of tobacco were piled or bulked, as shown in the accompanying picture, with stems all in one direction. Tubes were placed at various points for the insertion of a thermometer into the center of the bulk. When the temperature of the interior of the bulk rose to 115 degrees, the bulk was torn down, the tobacco taken out, thoroughly shaken and rebulked. That part of the tobacco which was on the inside of the bulk was put on the outside. The fermentation process was again allowed to go on. This was repeated until every part of the tobacco was thoroughly cured. The tobacco was then baled, matted and burlap being sewed over the tightly pressed bale. By the case sweating method the curing is not so thorough. The ends near the case are not sweated as much as the interior.

By the priming of tobacco, that is, plucking the leaves as they ripen, and bulk sweating, a much finer grade of wrapper is produced. There are several farms on which outdoor grown wrapper tobacco was produced by these methods and sold at 75 cents per pound. Farmers who insist on attempting to grow wrapper by old-fashioned methods have to put up with prices ranging from 12 to 14 cents. Priming is more expensive, but the percentage of profit is greatly increased.

ORCHARD ONE-MAN MARKER

With One That Is Practical Man Can Easily Mark Fifteen Acres
in One Day.

I have been reading several articles on setting orchards recently, most of which may be practical if a man has plenty of time and lots of help, as both are necessary in lining, sighting and staking, says a writer in Rural New Yorker. I send sketch of a marker I made about ten years ago, and which we are still using in all our orchard setting. With this marker all that is necessary is to mark ground

A One-Man Marker.

both ways by getting inside the frame at point marker x and drawing the marker across the field to a stake, the same as in marking corn ground. There are no small stakes to bother with, and we have a distinct cross mark to dig our holes to and then set the trees where the cross line intersect, which point can be determined at a glance, as you are setting the tree without any unnecessary sighting. One man can easily mark 15 acres, in a day (of peach ground) ready for the holes to be dug. This marker is also useful in marking gardens or any other ground where a horse marker is not practicable, but a word is in regard to setting trees: by all means pack the dirt firmly under and around all roots with your hands, and your trees will stand a much better chance of living than if set carelessly.

Weeds Are Robbers.

Weeds on the farm are great robbers of soil moisture. For every pound of dry matter in a weed it requires from 400 to 750 pounds of water to produce it. Keep down the weeds and retain the water for the growing crops.

CHANGE IN FLAVORS

HOUSEWIFE WHO MAKES MANY KINDS OF SHORTCAKE.

Points Out One of the Best Ways to Use the Summer Fruits and Berries—Canned Preparation
in Winter.

One of the best ways to use the summer fruits and berries is in shortcakes. We use all kinds of them to make individual shortcakes by the following rule: Sift one pint of flour with one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonsful of sugar and two teaspoonsful of baking powder into a tin with the hands a few times, butter the size of an egg and a piece of lard the same size, mix together enough to mix into a ball, and roll out. Knead as little as possible, and handle as possible. Roll out to about four inches in diameter, and cut with a round cutter. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven. This recipe makes one dozen cakes.

Strawberries, raspberries, blueberries, blackberries, peaches, plums and bananas all make delicious shortcakes. We like blueberries best. The pineapples should be stewed some time before using, sprinkled with sugar and allowed to stand until the juice will come out well. For banana shortcake, the bananas must be thoroughly mashed and well drained, but they should not be allowed to stand. Cream may be added to the banana shortcake, if desired. In serving have the shortcakes hot. Split them, butter well, put two large spoonfuls of the mashed and sweetened fruit inside and one on top. In winter we have apple and orange shortcakes. We also use canned fruit. We find this a very economical way of using fruit, one box of berries or pineapple being enough for four shortcakes.

Frenched Chicken.

Dress a chicken which is too large for frying, or almost grown. Drain all parts, cut the breast in two, the salt and pepper and roll well in flour. Fry in hot lard (part butter is good), but add butter after chicken has been fried to fry well. Cook in this way until a golden brown. The chicken will not be tender nor nearly so, but have ready a steam cooker or old fashioned steamer, with a pan in it to hold the juice from the chicken. Then put in the chicken and cook one hour, or until tender. The grease in which the chicken was fried must be heated again, as it must be placed on the back of the stove to be ready for gravy. One large tablespoonful of flour, brown as you wish, and a bowl of sweet milk and water makes a delicious gravy. Also add the juice from the steamed chicken to the gravy while cooking. You will find this the most satisfactory way of cooking a large chicken—not an old one, by any means, be certain it is young.

Tomato Rabbit.

Fry about two tablespoonfuls of onion in butter size of an egg, add one quart of tomato juice. When boiling, stir in one-half pound of finely sliced cheese. When this is well mixed add two broken eggs, salt and pepper to taste. This cook until all ingredients are well mixed and the mass thickens. Serve hot on crackers or toast. This is delicious.

Mincied Fish.

Take any pieces of cold fish and put through your food chopper. To a cup of the fish add a large cracked rolled very fine, one beaten egg, a tablespoonful of milk, and salt and pepper to taste. Fry brown on both sides, after dropping a tablespoon at a time in hot fat. I think there is nothing as good for this purpose as a slice of dried out salt pork.

The Quick Return to Prosperity

Financial—Over $100,000,000
Gold Exported Since Jan.

Washington, Jan. 1.—The financial situation of the United States, which involves the question of whether or not the country is to have a year of depression, is the subject of much discussion here. The present situation is a result of the gold exportation, which has been going on since January 1. The gold exportation has been a result of the financial situation, which is a result of the gold exportation. Taking the gold reserve as a criterion of the trend of financial affairs, it is not generally known that the United States has over $100,000,000 gold in the treasury. This is a large sum of money, and it is a result of the gold exportation. The gold exportation has been a result of the financial situation, which is a result of the gold exportation.

Talking to Son.

Detroit, Mich.—Alleging that Burden, a Flint Rock school teacher, has such influence over his son that there is grave concern becoming known, E. Shore, a Brownstown farmer, granted an injunction by Judge Burden restraining the young man from calling upon the young man from holding any conversation and also from doing anything the affections of the young man. The father alleges that his son is 17 years old, has been in school. Using this case, he says, Miss Burden, private lessons in this was the woman gained such an over the son that his mind is under her control. He has influenced the young man has become temporarily insane. He was recently cured, but so soon as the teacher again took the youth with the result again in her hands. The father declares that between his son and the teacher there is a scandalous relationship that she was asked to resign.

CHANGE IN FLAVORS

HOUSEWIFE WHO MAKES MANY KINDS OF SHORTCAKE.

Points Out One of the Best Ways to Use the Summer Fruits and Berries—Canned Preparations in Winter.

One of the best ways to use the summer fruits and berries is in shortcakes. We use all kinds of fruits. We make individual shortcakes by the following rule: Mix one pint of flour with one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoons of sugar and two heaping teaspoons of baking powder in a bowl. Rub with the hands a piece of butter the size of an egg and a piece of lard the same size. Stir in milk enough to mix into a batter to roll out. Knead as little as possible on the board and roll out with as little handling as possible. Cut in rounds about four inches in diameter. We use the cover of a pound coffee tin as a cutter. Bake 20 minutes in a quick oven. This recipe makes five shortcakes.

Strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, blueberries, peaches, pineapples and bananas all make delicious shortcakes. We like blueberry shortcake almost better than blueberry pie. The blueberries should be stewed a little. The peaches should be cut up some time before using, sprinkled with sugar and allowed to stand so that the juice will come out well. For the banana shortcake the bananas must be thoroughly mashed and well sweetened, but they should not be allowed to stand. Cream may be added to the banana shortcake, if you like it. In serving the shortcakes hot, split them, butter well, put two large spoonfuls of the mashed and sweetened fruit inside and one on top. In winter we have apple and orange shortcakes. We also use canned fruit. We find this a very economical way of using fruit, one box of berries or one pineapple being enough for four shortcakes.

Frenched Chicken.
Dress a chicken which is too large for frying, or almost grown. Disjoint all parts; cut the breast in two, then salt and pepper and roll well in flour. Fry in hot lard (part butter is good), but add butter after chicken has begun to fry well. Cook in this way until a golden brown. The chicken will not be tender nor nearly done, but have ready a steam cooker, or old fashioned steamer, with a pan in it to hold the juice from the chicken. Then put in the chicken and cook one hour, or until tender. The grease in which the chicken was fried must be heated again, as it must be placed on the back of the stove to be ready for gravy. One large tablespoonful of flour, brown as you wish, and a bowl of sweet milk and water makes a delicious gravy. Also add the juice from the steamed chicken to the gravy while cooking. You will find this the most satisfactory way of cooking a large chicken, not an old one by any means, be certain it is young.

Tomato Rarebit.
Fry about two tablespoonfuls of onion in butter size of an egg, add one quart of tomato juice. When boiling, stir in one-half pound of finely sliced cheese. When this is well mixed, add two broken eggs, salt and pepper. Let this cook until all ingredients are well mixed and the mass thickens. Serve hot on crackers or toast. This is delicious.

Minced Fish.
Take any piece of cold fish and put through your food chopper. To a cup of the fish add a large cracker rolled very fine, one beaten egg, a tablespoon of milk, and salt and pepper to taste. Fry brown on both sides, after dropping a tablespoon at a time in hot fat. I think there is nothing as good for this purpose as a slice of fried salt pork.

FEARS A REACTION

Government's Financial Situation Interests Washington Experts.

The Quick Return to Prosperity Regarded as Adverse Factor to Financiers—Over $60,000,000 Gold Exported Since Jan. 1.

Washington.—In analyzing the financial situation of the government, which involves the question of whether or not an issue of three per cent. year certificates shall be issued to replenish the working balance of the treasury, students of finance in Washington regard a too quick return of prosperity as an adverse factor. The export of gold shows no sign of diminution at present time, is also being carefully watched with a view to ascertaining its real meaning and probable effect on the business later.

Generally speaking, anything which would tend to reduce greatly the work of the treasury from $37,000,000 to its present stage, would be viewed with concern. It is now understood that the treasury department has high hopes that the increase in customs duties, supplemented by a demand among the small merchants for subsidiary silver coin will keep the balance about where it now is during the summer.

Taking the gold reserve as an indication of the trend of financial conditions it is not generally known that over $60,000,000 gold has been exported from the United States since January 1 last. This outgo can be partially accounted for in that approximately $30,000,000 went to South America for coffee loans, while, within the last two months, Japan has bought more than $10,000,000 in gold at San Francisco instead of buying in London, as formerly. Should Japanese continue these purchases at the same rate this act would, of course, have a significant effect on the financial situation.

The balance of the exports, amounting to nearly $40,000,000, remains unaccounted for and financial students here believe that it indicates a redundant currency. Acting on this belief they have reached the conclusion that if prosperity, following the passage of the tariff law, starts too rapidly it may be followed by a sharp reactionary movement in the fall. A tendency to speculation is especially feared on the theory that any undue frenzy of speculation, with paper money so abundant, may create a disturbance which would react on business.

WOMAN MUST NOT MAKE LOVE

Michigan Farmer Secures Injunction Restraining Teacher from Talking to Son.

Detroit, Mich.—Alleging that Lily Burden, a Flint Rock school teacher, is so persistent in her love-making and has such influence over the mind of her son that there is grave danger of his becoming insane, Ernest D. Shove, a Brownstown farmer, was granted an injunction by Judge Donovan, restraining the young woman from calling upon the younger Shove, from holding any conversation with, and also from doing anything to gain the affections of the young man.

The father alleges that his son, who is 17 years old, has been backward in school. Using this as an excuse he says, Miss Burden gave him private lessons. In this way, he says, the woman gained such an influence over the son that his mind was completely under her control. He said she influenced the young man that he has become temporarily insane, and was confined for several months in a hospital. He was recently discharged, but no sooner was he out than the teacher again took up with the youth, with the result that he is again in her toils, the father asserts.

The father declares that the affair between his son and the teacher created such a scandal two years ago that she was asked to resign her position.

FIGHT EGRETS SALE

Thousands Join in Protest to Stay Government's Hand.

Proposed Disposal of Bird Plumes Seized by Customs Officials to the Milliners Resented in Nearly Every State.

New York.—Shocked by the thought of Uncle Sam selling the nuptial plumes of many mother birds, butchered in the midst of their young, which were left to starve, thousands of Americans have joined a movement of protest against such a disposal of the egrets seized by the custom house in this city, which the government has just ordered to be sold here.

From almost every state in the union scores of communications have been received by the National Association of Audubon Societies offering support and urging action to prevent the nation from engaging in this business which the milliners are insisting upon. By its lax legislation and law enforcement against the bird butchers the Empire state is alone responsible in this instance for thus making the government traffic in these spoils. It is declared.

While these costly heron plumes are held here at the custom house to be auctioned off, hundreds of wives and mothers in this city and throughout the country are organizing a protest. Backing the Audubon workers in this movement the National Federation of Women's Clubs already is arrayed, as well as many sportsmen's organizations and granges, whose members want the birds to protect

DUCKS CLEAN UP OHIO TOWN

Lakeview, O., Installs a Corps of White Wings to Whom Name Applies Literally.

Bellefontaine, O.—The white wings of the Town of Lakeview, near here, are literally white wings now. They're ducks.

Recently the finances of the village fell to such a low ebb that it was impossible to longer employ a street sweeper, so his services were dispensed with. Still there remained a few dollars in the treasury. One of the aldermen proposed that the money be invested in a flock of ducks which would forage in the streets and eat the rubbish.

Lean ducks were brought and turned loose in the streets. They started in to eat the waste from the streets at one end of town early in the morning and eat to the other end, when they are turned backward or shifted to another street.

"Dead" Bride Tells of Angels.
Des Moines, Ia.—Mrs. Walley Oleson, a young bride of Marshalltown, was pronounced dead by an attending physician and the family was standing about her bed mourning when she suddenly awakened, the family says.

Throwing her arms about her husband she exclaimed: "Oh, Walley, I've come back to tell you that I saw angels. It was so grand that I've come back to take you with me." With these words she sank back upon her bed and never breathed again.

Message Buttons Belle's Dress.
Washington.—A new role for A. D. T. boys was developed the other night when one of these young Mercuries, in the employ of a local company, was summoned to a fashionable apartment house by a prominent society girl.

The girl, whose maid had deserted her an hour or so before she was due at a dinner party, needed an assistant to button her dress up the back.

Not being able to find anybody else, she summoned a messenger, not revealing the nature of the service for which she intended him.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Matters of Special Moment to the Progressive Agriculturist

Why not systematize your business of farming?

Incompetent employers are responsible for a lot of incompetent men.

To never admit being mistaken is an easy way to prove oneself a fool.

The man who proxies his region will doubtless have a proxy in heaven.

As dogs bark at strangers so are weak men scared at new and strange ideas.

Niggardliness is not economy, the first boards money, the last makes good use of it.

There is good money in shipping grain direct to reliable commission men, and it is easy to do.

Before election some politicians feel that the Lord calls them to public office, but after election the people are sure it was the call of the public feeding trough.

The man who experiments with new crops and methods may lose money at first, but he will strike it right in the long run, and when he does, he usually strikes it rich.

When the boy wants to do something you know will not pay, but that will bring him pleasure and delight, don't forget that you were a boy once, and that what seems simple to you now was very important then.

The object of life should not be to make money. One should not live for the purpose of making money, but should make money to live. The difference is great. The man who saves the money he should spend has lost it.

Optimism is a philosophy, based on a sound digestion and a clear perception. The optimist sees as much, perhaps more, of the world's sorrows as does the drooping-mouthed one, but he prefers to be as one who, "marched on, breast forward, never doubted clouds would break."

OBSERVE THE GOLDEN RULE

Members of Farmers' Union Will Gain Nothing by Resorting to Violence to Boom Organization.

While men ignore the golden rule and disregard all moral obligations from a humanitarian standpoint, they are not violating the laws of the land. If members of the union seek to coerce such men by lawless acts they become law-breakers themselves, and men may not violate the law even to accomplish the right. Besides it can't be done that way. Every strike where men have resorted to violence has failed. Every act of violence by members of the union will only contribute to ruin the organization. If the organization would make other things right it must be right and do right itself, and there can be no better way of convincing the public that it is such than a strict observance of the golden rule. Kind words, persuasion and argument will do more than all other things. We must do what we set out to do; we must educate. The reading of a union paper for one year will probably convince most farmers that we are pursuing the right methods to improve his condition as well as our own. If the matter is placed before them in the right light there are few men who will not be convinced that the objects and methods of the union are along right lines.

There is no use of violence. If the farmers shall rise to a plane of patriotism and loyalty equal to the occasion, and be true to each other, there will be nothing within the bounds of reason that they may not accomplish. And the question is up. The farmers must choose. They must either trust themselves and one another or trust the powers that have been fleecing them for years. They may make a mistake occasionally, and will, but it is not better to do that than to be robbed regularly, although robbery is done with a smug hand? It is in the nature of an impossibility to always be able to choose an honest and able official. It has always been so since the world began, but the treachery of Judas did not destroy the Christian church. We must stand by our officials as long as they are true to us and the organization, and cast them out as soon as they prove otherwise. But in all transactions we must be honest and conscientious and do unto others as we would have others do unto us. If we follow this rule we shall all set a noble example for, and command the admiration of, all other trades and professions, and our demands will be listened to with respect, and granted without reluctance and long delay.

Keeping Skim Milk at Home.

The order of the Vermont state board of health that all milk returned to farmers must be scalded in order to kill the germs of tuberculosis is causing the creameries much trouble and making a ready sale for cream separators. Scalding the milk might kill the germs, but there also seems no doubt but that it kills the calves and young pigs it is fed to. For this reason the farmers are buying separators and are keeping the skim milk at home, where they can feed it as best suits them. Many calves and pigs have been lost from feeding this scalded milk.

BUILD OUR OWN ELEVATORS

For Various Reasons the Farmer Should Control Means for Protection of Grains.

The greatest and most important single object of the F. E. & C. U. of A. is to insure to farmers stable and profitable prices for their products, says the Union Farmer.

When this object is accomplished it will result in immense and lasting good to the world at large. But, of course, the real reason why we are pursuing this object is because it will be good for the farmers themselves.

The medium through which we expect to secure these stable and profitable prices is controlled marketing. And in order to practice controlled marketing, we must control the means of holding crops for the prices desired.

Chief among the crops to which the principle of controlled marketing is to be applied are the grains—wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley, etc.—all of which may be held indefinitely, if properly cared for.

In order that farmers may properly care for these grains and protect them in a pure and wholesome condition, the farmers themselves must, either directly or indirectly control the means for protecting the grains.

And it certainly is our privilege and also our duty to keep, in our own possession, a sufficient supply of grain for food for our families and our animals and for seed for next year's crop and also to hold, if necessary, our entire crop for a fair price.

The system of individual home granaries is far from satisfactory for at least two reasons: First this plan does not properly protect grain against moisture and insect pests. Second, much of the grain is grown by tenant farmers, whose landlords will not furnish even the small old-time granary. Consequently, under the present individual system, a large per cent. of the grain crop must be rushed on to the market in poor condition, and sold at unreasonably low price. This naturally creates an unsettled condition of the markets from which the farmer is the chief sufferer.

The present system of capitalistic elevators has grown out of the necessity for protecting grain in large quantities. And it is very natural that those who own and control these elevators should be well paid for the protection thus applied to the grain crop.

Not only is it fair and right that those who protect the crop should be paid for their trouble and expense, but the fact is plainly apparent that they really are paid. They are paid not only well, but very handsomely. And we are thus led to the conclusion that the farmers themselves have, indirectly, furnished the money to build the elevators now in operation.

Now, since we are already in the habit of building elevators for the habit of fellows, why not turn over a new leaf and build elevators for ourselves. This is necessary, not only for the purpose of securing our share of the profits to be secured by protecting our crops, but also, and mainly, to enable us to practice controlled marketing.

It is not the object of the Farmers' union to revolutionize present business methods by neglecting the farmers' usual business in order to put other classes of men out of business, nor to go into the elevator business simply to advertise our ability to do so. But there are some places where new elevators are needed, and ought to be built, owned and controlled by the farmers themselves. While there are other places where existing elevator companies practice unreasonable extortion and should be spanked until they become fair in their dealings.

The fact that prices of grain and grain products have soared to such a height since last year's crop passed from the control of the farmers to that of elevator men and speculators ought to cause consumers to join with producers in a wholesale plan for that overthrow which must be by an effective system of controlled marketing on the part of farmers, themselves, brought about by ownership of a sufficient number of elevators to enable us to exercise a controlling influence on the elevator system.

Exterminating Bucket Shops.

The war on the bucket shop is conducted quite vigorously in the states which in the past have suffered most from this evil. In Pennsylvania only a few now remain, and the end of them is fast approaching. In Ohio the authorities are weeding out one after another, and there will probably be none left by the end of this year. Now the war has started in Virginia, where the bucket shop men are arrested as fast as the grand juries can vote indictments against them. The end of the bucket shop evil in every part of the country is only a question of a few months. With both the federal and state authorities moving against these fakers they will not be able to survive much longer, and their ultimate extermination will be a blessing to the country.

Co-operation in Live Stock.

The co-operative plan of keeping bulls and stallions in a community is found successful by many. This consists of a number of owners of live stock clubbing together and purchasing a highly bred animal, to be used by the community. In these instances, a quasi-stock company is usually formed, and a service fee is charged, the profits of the year being divided among the owners in proportion to the amount each subscribed in purchasing the animal.

QUARTERLY REVIEW

Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 10, 1909
Specially Arranged for This Paper

LESSON TEXT.—Acts 13:1-11
GOLDEN TEXT.—"No mighty grew the word of God and prevailed."—Acts 13:8

Subject: Travels with St. Paul by Sea and Land.

There never was so much interest in missions among the people of this country as there is today.

About two years ago (from the date of this lesson) one of our largest steamships filled with persons interested in Sunday schools sailed for Rome to hold a convention there. Three years before (in 1906) another steamship was filled with delegates to a World's Sunday School convention in Jerusalem. Both these great companies stopped at mission stations, learned about the needs of the missions, and took up large contributions for them from the passengers whose interest was greatly awakened, amounting to over $10,000.

A friend of mine is sending his son and wife on a two years' tour among the Protestant missions of the world to make a thorough study of them.

All the great missionary societies are sending visiting delegates to their mission stations.

He had made one journey before we join him.

We propose to stop at each city, and recall the events, the persons, the stories and the special teachings which belong to it.

The Second Missionary Journey.—From Antioch to Asia Minor, Europe, returning through Jerusalem to Antioch again. Extending from A. D. 50 to 52.—Acts 13:16-18:22

Antioch of Syria.—The first foreign missionary church. Paul, Barnabas, Silas, leading members. For the city of Antioch, see lesson IV of the second quarter. Why Paul took Silas instead of Barnabas.

Land journey. Paul alone going north through "the Cilician gates," a pass in the great mountain range. Then he turned westward.

Lystra in Lycania.—Here Paul had healed a man; and was stoned (first journey). Here Paul was joined by Silas (v. 4) "instead of he" in vs. 13. Timothy became Paul's assistant.

Iconium.—An attempted assault on Paul, church here. Established in the faith.

Antioch in Pisidia.—Paul's sermon. A church founded. Paul expelled. (First journey.)

Still by land. They passed through Galatia to which the above cities probably belonged, and through Phrygia, to the northwest.

Troas, a Port on the Aegean Sea.—Paul's first visit here; the vision and Macedonian call. Here Paul, Silas and Timothy were joined by Luke (v. 10) "we" instead of "they." Paul and Eutychus—six years later (Lesson X). Troas and ancient Troy.

By sea to Neapolis, the port of Philippi. By land to Philippi.

Philippi. Secular history. Lydia, the sabbine girl. Imprisonment of Paul and Silas. Paul delivered. The jailer converted. Paul released by the magistrates. The church at Philippi. A letter of Paul's to the Philippians. By land toward the south.

Thessalonians. Ancient history. Modern missionary station; a church founded. Rked by their enemies. Paul sent forward. Letter to the Thessalonians.

Berea. Bible study by the Bereans. Paul again assaulted.

From Turkish empire into Greece. Athens. The city. The philosophers, altar to the unknown God. Paul on Mars' hill. Few converts.

Corinth. The city. Paul here a year and six months; a large church. Two letters to them. Aquila, Priscilla, Silas, Timothy, Apollonia, Gallio. Close of work in second journey.

The Third Missionary Journey. From Antioch, through Asia Minor and Europe, to Jerusalem. Extending from A. D. 52 to 56 or 57.—Acts 18:23-21:17.

Asia Minor.—Travel by land. Paul revisited the churches here. Derbe, Lystra, Iconium and Antioch of Pisidia, as on the previous journey. Till he came to Ephesus.

Ephesus.—The city. The company of disciples of John; the exorcists; burning of the books of magic; slaying of Diana; the mob; a fourishing church; the seven churches of Asia in this region; letter to the Ephesians; Paul, Timothy, Krastus, Gaius, Aristarchus, Demetrias, Secus. By sea to Macedonia. Philippi.

Thessalonians. Berea.

By land to Greece. Athens. Corinth. Three months.

The return. By land to Philippi. By sea to Troas. Milnes, down the coast, turning eastward to Tyre, Ptolemais, Caesarea, Jerusalem. Events by the way. At Milnes. At Tyre. At Caesarea.

What impressions does this general view make upon you as to the progress of the gospel? How long since the day of Pentecost? What impression does it make as to the character of Paul?

How does it compare with modern missions?

How does giving to missions and interest in missions broaden your character? Does giving to missions and interest in them lessen your interest in God's work right around you?

Do you give? Do you own what you give?

HOWS REQUIRE MUCH CARE

Season of Net and Lace Sleeves Must Be Carefully Removed.

Shoes which have been scarified by season of net and lace sleeves will require careful handling before they appear with grace in the ball room of winter. One authority advises rubbing the joint every night with a stiff brush and soap and water beforehand. A careful dry brush with a soft old cloth is an important point, but it is while the flesh is still warm and the pores open that the most effective operation is helped by a soaked pad which should be laid on at night.

A stiff brush may also be employed with advantage on the small eruptions which sometimes appear on the upper and upon the back between the fingers. As lack of circulation is usually the cause of these, the friction will cause their entire disappearance in time and keep the skin in a healthy condition. The flesh must be likewise necessary for removal of the dead skin from the body, for these dry particles are left to clog the pores of the skin can never be a healthy or clean look. Use a brush with a five-minute's dry rub, then after the bath which it causes for a good five minutes more.

PRETTY TAFFETA WAIST.

The taffeta waist is of chiffon, with a band of gold, of which the buttons are also made.

Suits for the Autumn.

There has been much conjecture about the tailored suit of the future. The panner become popular. But at least an inkling has been given of what we may expect. One of the suits for earliest autumn is of tulle, with a very long coat of green underneath, trimmed with the lips with a short tunic of cloth itself. This, while it is the taffeta, is cut on panner lines, and it is only evident when the coat is removed.

CARRY ALL THE IMPEDIMENTA

Useful Dressing Pouches Have Attained the Popularity That They Deserve.

Automobile dressing pouches are rapidly superseding all kindred receptacles, as they not only hold an amazing amount of luggage, but may be crowded into a surprisingly small space. They are made of tan or stone gray waterproof moire, leather lined and strap handled, of khaki rubber-proof material, English pigskin, patent leather, russet or black, alligator and genuine walrus skin.

Grain leathers of various kinds of finish are employed for combination bags, which have a lower portion adapted for holding skirts and an upper section supplied with cold cream, barbotin and soap receptacles, as well as compartments for brushes and manicure tools.

While club, kit, Oxford and Gladstone bags in real walrus skin are deemed exceedingly smart, they are rather difficult to handle, whereas the oblong shaped leather lined wicker dressing bags are wonderfully light of weight, capacious and the very latest device for holding motoring luggage.

FIXES THE DANCING SLIPPER

Small Piece of Waxed Tape All That Is Necessary for Comfort and Safety.

Many girls find the low-cut shoes and pumps difficult to keep on at the heel, but since this style of shoe is fashionable they persist in wearing them on all occasions. A piece of waxed tape, the narrowest width procurable, run through the binding at the top of the shoe and tied beneath the bow or rosette in front, will help considerably to keep the foot from "pumping" up and down at the heel. The same scheme may be tried with satin evening slippers.

For suede pumps, black or white, boxes made of the same leather are now more fashionable than either felt ribbon pump bows or fancy buckles.

In purchasing suede pumps it is better to buy those with wooden heels, as the leather heel runs off so quickly and thus ruins the whole effect of the shoe. In white shoes especially it is advisable not to have the leather covered heels, which become stained so quickly with grass or mud, and which stains it is often impossible to eradicate.

Fashions in Trimmings.

In trimmings Dame Fashion has stamped her approval on pipings, laces, buttons of the large and small sizes, embroidery and braids on the late summer gowns. Princess, baby Irish, duchess lace are all used. The nets, which have answered the purpose of collar and vest for so long, are relegated to second position.

Slips for Frocks.

The shops now offer at small prices slips of muslin, white or colored, to go under transparent frocks. These have a lace-edged ruffle, are cut low in the neck, and have straps on the shoulders edged with lace.

Silk or Crepe de Chine.

When cleaning small pieces of silk or crepe de chine or any fancy piece, first wash in castile soap and hot water, then dip in benzine, which leads color and brilliancy to it.

RED-ROUSE FOR MONTHS.

"I was Abandoned After Physicians' Consultation."

"Mrs. Enoch Sherrer, Tew and Washington Sts., Centralia, Wash., says: 'For years I was weak and run down, could not sleep, my limbs swelled and the secretions were troublesome; pains were intense. I was fast in bed for four months. Three doctors said there was no cure for me, and I was given up to die. Being urged, I used Doan's Kidney Pills. Soon I was better and in a few weeks was about the house, well and strong again.'"

HAD AWFUL WEEPING ECZEMA

Face and Neck Were Raw—Terrible Itching, Inflammation and Soreness—All Treatments Failed.

Cuticura Proved a Great Success.

"Eczema began over the top of my ear. It cracked and then began to spread. I had three different doctors and tried several things, but they did me no good. At last one side of my face and my neck were raw. The water ran out of it so that I had to wear medicated cotton, and it was so inflamed and sore that I had to put a piece of cloth over my pillow to keep the water from it, and it would stain the cloth a sort of yellow. The eczema reached so that it seemed as though I could tear my face all to pieces. Then I began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and it was not more than three months before it was all healed up. Miss Ann Pearson, Northfield, Vt., Dec. 19, 1907."

Decidedly Rattled.

Of an Irishman, named Doherty, a speaker of rare eloquence, the following amusing story is told: After one of his speeches he asked Canning what he thought of it. "The only fault I could find in it," Canning answered, "was that you called the speaker 'Sir' too often." "My dear friend," said Doherty, "if you knew the state I was in while speaking, you would not wonder if I had called him 'Ma'am'!"

He was a balm-headed Johnny, with little cash. She was both pretty and pert. He said: "Do you know, Dolly, I am something of a mimic? I can take almost anybody off."

She said: "Then take yourself off, old boy. I'm expecting some one to take me to supper."

PAINT DURABILITY.

The first thought in painting should, of course, be durability—and durability means simply pure paint properly applied. Pure paint is pure white lead and linseed oil (with or without tinting material).

Some years ago the paint-buyer was likely to get adulterated or counterfeit white lead if he was not familiar with brands. Today he may buy with perfect safety if he only makes sure that the Dutch Boy Painter trademark is on the packages of white lead that he buys. This trademark was adopted by National Lead Company to distinguish the pure white lead made by them from the worthless adulterated and fake goods. It is a guarantee as valuable to the house-owner as the education of a paint expert could be.

A Noble Love.

"Is the contract of dowry properly drawn up, signed and witnessed?" asked the count of Castle-on-the-Bum.

"Yes," sighed Gladys Golden.

"There are no loopholes through which your wise lawyers of Philadelphia might creep?"

"Not a loophole," said the fair Gladys.

"And your father's holdings in Amalgamated Whalebone, American Cheese and Macaroni and Tin Soup-Plate 66 have not been affected by the recent depression?"

"No, dearest," answered Miss Golden, firmly.

"Then I love you," said the noble count; and two fond hearts beat as one.—Puck.

The Ever Changing Waist Line.

Consider the mental agility it takes to keep up with one's waist line. One goes to bed at night in the sweet assurance that it will be under the arms for the next two or three months at any rate, and awakes to learn from the headlines in the morning papers that the waist line is positively at the knees. There is absolutely no use in prognosticating anything about it any longer. That the waist line occurred at the waist was an axiom accepted as unquestionable as that the earth revolves on its axis, but in these days of higher criticism is likely to be anywhere. It bloweth where it listeth.—Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, in American Magazine.

Gender.

The other evening Miss Y., a maiden lady of uncertain years, suspecting the cook was entertaining her beau downstairs, called Martha and inquired whether she did not hear some one talking with her.

"Oh, no, ma'am," cried the quick-witted Martha; "it was only me singing a psalm."

"Very good," returned Miss Y. significantly; "you may amuse yourself with psalms, but let's have no hints."

A FEW REMARKS FROM PAPA

Quiet, But Emphatic, and Young Thing Immediately Took a New View of Life.

An Atchison Young Thing had a head that ached, her honey boy having taken his affections elsewhere, and her father recently shut himself up with her to reason with her. "That Honey Boy averaged spending 50 cents a week on you," he said. "Here's a dollar a week to take its place. Every time he called he cleaned out the refrigerator; your mother will see to it that your brothers do this in future. He kept you up late nights. Your baby sister is cross, and hereafter you will let the baby do this for you. He took possession of the most comfortable rocker on the porch, when you look at that rocker in future it will not be empty, bringing the pang to your heart that your silly novels tell about. It will be occupied by the man who paid for it, and that's me. Your mother and I stayed by you through colic and teething, and are going to get you through this if we have to take turns spanking you. Now, take your eyes off the moon and look at the dust around you."—Atchison Globe.

No Infallible Method.

A leading mathematician of France gives another warning that there is no infallible method of doubling one's stakes after a loss. "All one can do," says he, "is to combine one's play so as to have a great chance of winning a little and a little chance of losing much, and many chances of losing little."

THE SEA LION.

This Quaker Brand is the Owner of Four Huge Livens.

The head of the sea lion at close quarters is a blunt, rough, savage growl. It is well armed for battle, the mouth being an eight inch half circle studded with two rows of great sharp teeth. The body is heavily coated with seal brown hair, can be washed to light yellow on the back and sides. The immensely long hind flippers have big strong claws imbedded in the flat upper surface several inches from the ends of the flipper. The fore flippers have the openings for these claws of view, but in the particular female I dissected they were lacking.

The transparent very feebly about the jaw are most noteworthy. About two dozen of these sensitive guards project from the upper lip. The ears are very small, not as large as a common cat's and much depressed. The eyes are a deep, soft brown, but they are sparkling like flame in anger. When the dissecting knife laid the skin back we encountered a heavy layer of fat—rich, oily and fish smelling. The heart was very large, fully as big as a cow's, and the least also owned four huge lungs a foot and a half long. The lungs are very red and, although eaten by the coast tribes, are too coarse and redolent of fish oil for any save a starving white. In fact, the whole beast has a most repulsive odor when in the sun. Freshly drawn from the water this is not noticeable. —Wide World Magazine.

The Kettledrum in Music.

In a lecture delivered at the Royal Society of Arts by Gabriel Chatter on the "Musical Aspect of Drums" it was contended that the kettledrum was one of the few perfect instruments in the orchestra, owing to the exactness of its tone. The kettledrum, he contended, was perfectly competent to produce atmosphere as well as rhythm. Even to tune the instrument, these things were required: a perfect sense of rhythm, a sense of ten to twelve beats. After playing over a kettledrum much, Chatter said that he had never heard a better one than the one he had just heard. He then played a kettledrum, from Memphis, "Robert's Dish." Mr. Chatter then stated, "I venture to say that, outside the kettledrum, no other instrument in the orchestra has more power than the kettledrum." —Daily Advertiser.

Story or Sermon?

"I was telling Baby Hilda a fairy story one night," said the sky pilot "Baby Hilda," my little girl. The story was all about another little girl who was chased by bears and who ran to the edge of a steep mountain and jumped off. No, she didn't die. The minute she jumped off she turned into a bird with wings and flew. That was the story.

"Baby Hilda thought awhile about it, then she looked up and said, 'Papa, is that story true or was it just preaching?'" —New York Press.

"AN EXCELLENT MEDICINE."

This is what all say who have used St. Joseph's Liver Regulator, whether in liquid or powder form. Its action is easy, but it relieves the system of billious accumulations, thus avoiding constipation and all kindred evils. As a family medicine it has few, if any equals—superior. Druggists and general dealers sell it, liquid at 50 cents a bottle; powder, in tin boxes, at 25 cents a box, five boxes for a dollar. Don't accept anything else, but be sure to get St. Joseph's Liver Regulator.

A Constipation Remedy Free

There is no action of your daily life of greater importance than to see that your bowels move. They should move at least once a day naturally, and by that is meant without any help. If they do not move at least once a day you can consider yourself constipated and it is time you did something about it.

You will be glad to know there is a way out of the difficulty. Let me tell you the story of a man who was constipated for no worse than their, one of whom had it since '61. It only remains for you to realize that salts are of but temporary good, and what you want is a permanent cure: that purgative tablet, cathartic pills and such violent things make a great show of doing something, but do nothing that is lasting. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientific preparation, a laxative- tonic, a mild syrupy liquid that contains ingredients that do not harm the system, but tone the intestinal muscles so that they learn again to work without help. A bottle can be bought of any druggist for the small price of 50 cents, and there is a dollar size for families who have already found this wonderful remedy for constipation, indigestion, flatulence, headache, and all bowel troubles, in old or young.

Send your name and address to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent you so that you can test it before buying. If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

WIDOWS AND ORPHANS' HOME

To the Editor: Please give timely notice to your subscribers that Sunday, Sept. 26th, 1909, is to be observed as Orphans' Home day.

We sincerely ask that every member of the Sunday school, and every friend to our noble cause, be present on that day with a liberal offering for the benefit of our Orphans' Home. Our married ladies can have big sewings, our young ladies and girls can give entertainments, suppers, or adopt any plan best suited to them. Profits from business men can give one day's earnings, and our boys and girls can give the wages of one day. Let every one of us put in to give the earnings of one day, and report it to your society on the day named above as Orphans' Home day.

We are doing a splendid work—an unspeakable good in rescuing hundreds of destitute children. This orphanage was founded 16 years ago. We give attention to their education, to their moral and religious training in the home and in the sanctuary. Help us make Sunday, Sept. 26th, 1909, a great day for this cause, a cause so full of merit and so worthy your support. Be sure to make your report to me at once. I will acknowledge receipt of your offering both by mail and in the columns of the Alabama Baptist. I thank you deeply for the help already given us. God bless you all abundantly.

Yours truly, S. O. Y. Ray.
Send all money to Baptist Orphanage, Evergreen, Ala.

Care will kill a cat; but if you don't care, a booby-jack or a gun is just as efficient.

THE COMPROMISE.

He Thought He Was Firm and Now He Was Considerate.

The young man had entered that mysterious realm called matrimony, and as it was his first offense his father was handing him some paternal advice as to how he should treat the young wife.

"When you have any little differences of opinion, my son," he said to the boy, "if you can't persuade Margaret that you are right—and you probably can't, for they are all about alike—you must compromise. Be firm, yet be considerate and compromise."

"Yes, father," replied the son. "I will remember a little experience," and a reminiscent expression came over the old man's face. "On the very threshold of the married life of your mother and myself, and it was the basis of all future disputes. It was this way: I wanted to spend the summer, our first vacation together, in Maine, and your mother wanted to go to Saratoga. That was thirty years ago. But I shall never forget how firm and yet how considerate I was with your mother and how we compromised, avoiding all dispute. We stayed from Saturday noon to Tuesday morning at Bar Harbor, and then we spent the rest of the summer at Saratoga. Yes, indeed," the old man added, with a sigh, "that's the only way to deal with a woman. You must be firm, but be willing to compromise a little once in awhile, as I have done with your mother." —New York Tribune.

TIGERS IN INDIA.

Strange Hindoo Beliefs Concerning the Man Eaters.

In India the traditions of folklore are numerous and strange. Among those pertaining to the tiger the following are the most peculiar: The uneducated Hindoo and he is in the great majority believes that the ghost of a man killed by a tiger rides on the head of the beast that slew him to warn him of danger and to guide him to new victims. It is declared that God provides for the tiger's daily wants to the amount of 1 rupee a day—that is to say, if the tiger kills a calf worth 6 rupees he will not be allowed another victim for five days.

Eating the flesh of a tiger is supposed to give one great courage and alertness, but the whisks must first be singed off the beast or his spirit will haunt the man who fed off him, and he is likely to be turned into a tiger in the next world.

The following incident really occurred in a small Indian village in the interior: One of the villagers was unfortunately killed by a tiger. The police investigated the accidental death and rendered this verdict: "Pandu died of a tiger eating him. There was no other cause of death. Nothing was left of him save his bones and some fingers, which probably belonged to either the right or left hand." —Washington Star.

The World Went Round.

When Boggins senior on the occasion of his annual party was obliging his guests with "Tis Love That Makes the World Go Round." Master William Boggins seized the opportunity to retire for a few minutes behind the Japanese screen with his sire's half smoked cigar.

The applause subsiding, Master Boggins was observed by one of the company to be looking far from well. His face had taken on the hue of putty, and his eyes stood out like small bat pegs.

"Good gracious, Willie! What's the matter?" cried Mrs. Boggins in alarm. "I believe you're been smoking."

Willie shook his head.

"Tain't that," he declared truthfully. "If it's true what father's been singing about, I-I reckon I'm in love!" —London Express.

Astronomical.

Some curious and interesting astronomical phenomena are recorded in the old Chinese annals which go back to a great antiquity. In 687 B. C. a night is mentioned without clouds and without stars. This may perhaps refer to a total eclipse of the sun, but if so the eclipse is not mentioned in the Chinese list of eclipses. In the year 141 B. C. it is stated that the sun and moon appeared of a deep red color during five days, a phenomenon which caused great terror among the people. In 74 B. C. it is related that a star as large as the moon appeared and was followed in its motion by several stars of ordinary size. This probably refers to an unusually large bolide, or fire ball. In 38 B. C. a fall of meteoric stones is recorded.

A POWERFUL PRAYER.

It Brought the Judge's Kind of Light to the Forum.

"The late Judge Underhill," said F. D. Browne of the engineering department of the Southern Pacific, "was perhaps one of the greatest characters that ever entered the service of a railroad. It was his facile disposition that led to his being appointed right of way agent by the Southern Pacific."

"Underhill was all things to all men. The railroad called him one of the elect, and the good character declared that the pulpit would have had one of its brightest ornaments if he had only heard the call."

"He was the most successful right of way getter that the company ever had."

"Underhill was sent up against a tough proposition. There was a farmer whose land lay right in the path of the road, and he was cog about selling. Underhill was sent to see him. They were out driving when the farmer turned to Underhill and said: 'I want to do the right thing, Judge. I have prayed all night for guidance in this matter, and I have not been given light.'"

"We will pray for light right now," said Underhill, and getting on his knees, he made a fervent prayer for the farmer to sell his land to the Southern Pacific."

"Awestruck, the farmer listened on his knees to the powerful invocation of the judge, and when Underhill resumed his seat in the buggy he said: 'I have been given light, Judge. I'll sell the land at the figure you name.'" —San Francisco Call.

The Chastest Horse.

There is an ancient tale of a band of Arabs being pursued by their enemies which sums up their theory about a horse's color. Among the fleeing band was a man with unusually keen eyesight, and from time to time he would describe to his leader the horses ridden by the enemy.

"What manner of horses do they ride?"

"Black horses."

"Then there is no need of haste."

"At the noon halt the leader again asked, 'What manner of horses do they ride now?'"

"Bay horses."

"Then we must ride harder."

A few hours later the leader asked, 'Are they horsed again?'"

"They ride chestnuts."

"Then we ride for our lives."

Italy's Rest Days.

Under a law which went into effect Feb. 8, 1908, all industrial and commercial concerns throughout Italy must grant their employees a weekly rest of not less than twenty-four consecutive hours. It does not apply to public utilities, transportation lines or places of amusement. The general sense of the law is that Sunday shall be the rest day, but it is provided that freedom from work may be given on a day other than Sunday in the case of restaurants, photograph galleries, pharmacists, etc.

Heart Troubles

The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. It often happens that a person is born with a weak heart. Then again disease, fevers, over-exertion, anxiety, nervousness, rheumatism, etc. weaken the heart. The result is shortness of breath, palpitation, pain in the heart, or in some of the nerves of the chest or abdomen. The heart should be strengthened with a tonic, and for this nothing equals Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"I had LeGrippe last fall as I thought in a mild form. I was weak, tired feeling, and short of breath; could hardly go about, and a good deal of the time sort of an asthmatic breathing, and extremely nervous. I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure better in every way. I am so thankful that I began taking this medicine, and shall not hesitate to tell others how much good it has done me."

REVIVAL IN CLANTON.

greatest revival ever held in Alabama has just closed. Rev. Ray and his singer, W. H. came on Sunday, the 12th, Monday were joined by J. Parker of Ozark, and together they held the vast crowds until Sunday, the 19th. A meeting was held in the court in which place half the seats Baptist church had been and yet there was not room for the people. Ray knows "meeting" tactics to a dot; was very clear, convincing and doctrinal, leaving in the mind of the believer hope for the unbeliever out-Christ. He is the right man in the right place. Pastors will mistake in getting Ray. Ray has choir sense and ability, his manner wins voice charms and I feel sure has no superior and doubt was equal in the State. J. Parker is well known in the State as a very fine man and has been with Mr. Ray quite awhile. Hitherto Ray was a Methodist, but now he will blow a Baptist for the writer buried him, in other happy converts, in the grave on the 19th. The revival and gave him a commission and he, like Ray, went his way rejoicing. The result of the meeting was by letter, with a cumulative yet to come. $1,017 for a pastor's salary over $200 for expenses, and the pastor's salary $150. Increase of time and gave the severest pounding he has ever given, consisting of provisions, dry goods and cash. Nell Mullins presided at the meeting. Miss J. Lawrence and Miss Palmer played first and second. Mr. Parker the choir was comprised of Mr. Carson as being the best yet sung with. Messrs. Jeff Ruffin acted as ushermen's taste. The church pastor's heart glad by the after meetings and the converts into the fold the Father, Christ the Holy Spirit, three in one, praise now and evermore, F. M. CORRESPONDENCE.

Mountain Creek, Sept. 18, '09
Editor Banner—Please allow me a few words in regard to the proposed amendment to the Constitution. I am opposed to this measure on the following grounds: (1) It seems to me unwise to write in the organic law of the State something that its validity is questioned and that has never stood the test. It seems to me that the thing to do is to enforce the prohibition laws that have been already written on the statute books. (2) What is to hinder the Legislature from repealing the prohibition laws and making the amendment of no effect? (3) The matter of raising revenue for the expense of the government is a question that should be considered by every taxpayer. The raises in taxes has caused a stir among the taxpayers in the past year or two. The fact that liquor will be sold and drunk is one that will not down; then why not put a license on it? This subject was considered by Gov. W. D. Jelks in his last message to the Legislature, he recommended a higher rate of license for selling whiskey and a local option law. In this same connection he stated that the money derived from this source, together with the earnings of the convicts, should go to the schools in order to teach the boys the evil effects of liquor and keep them from going where possibly their fathers went.

Please pardon this digression. The main question is shall sanity or insanity rule? The prohibitionists say good morals and good homes is on their side and whiskey is on the other. This is not so. But shall sanity rule or not?

Editor Banner—Will you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words?
I received today a post card mailed on train somewhere in Alabama, with no name signed to it, asking me if I expected to return to Alabama for court in Clanton, Chilton county, in November. As the party did not give any name or address, I will have to ask permission to answer through your paper. In reply to the gentleman's card, will say that as I cannot foresee the future, I cannot say what I will do, but I expect to be in Clanton, Nov. 15, 1909. So don't get uneasy boys, for I will be with you when the leaves begin to fall. If not, you will find me at 169 Alice Ave., Woonsocket, Rhode Island.

Jimison.

The hospitable home of Capt. Jack Crysell was thrown open to an informal reception to the citizens in honor of Prof. R. A. Rasco and family. They will leave for their future home at Deland, Fla., where Professor goes to teach law in the John B. Stetson University. After a few songs, refreshments were served; consisting of cream and cake, after which several talks were made, regretting the loss of this noble family. The following resolutions were adopted:
We, the citizens of Jimison, assembled in mass meeting, hereby express our appreciation of Prof. R. A. Rasco, not only as principal of our high school, but as a man, citizen and Christian gentleman in every sense of the word, and a moral force before all our people. Therefore be it resolved, that we recommend Prof. Rasco and family whithersoever they may cast their lot as a man, wife and children worthy the highest confidence that can be placed in them.
Resolved, that we deeply regret to part with them, but as the disposition of a kind Providence has placed them in new fields of labor, we only rejoice the more with them, and ever pray that their paths may all be paths of peace, and when life's paths are ended may it be said of him and them, enter into the reward where the wicked cease to trouble and the weary are at rest.

TRIFLES TO TEMPT

SOME SPECIAL AND VERY GOOD SUMMER DESSERTS.

Few After-Dinner Dainties Better Than Baked Alaska—Clear Wine Jelly Also Good—To Make Shrimp Salad

As this summer dessert is baked Alaska, make it park a round cake of sponge cake, three layers, with a filling of cream. Cover the outside of the mold with a layer of meringue, and bake in a hot oven for two hours. At the end of the time, turn out on a platter, and serve with a light and airy sauce. Beat the whites of three eggs until light, add a pinch of salt, and a few drops of lemon juice. Cover with a layer of meringue, and bake in a hot oven for two hours. At the end of the time, turn out on a platter, and serve with a light and airy sauce.

Shrimp salad is delicious and is made by cutting a cup of shrimp into dice and mixing with half a cup of celery, chopped a half cup of chopped lettuce, and a half cup of broken lettuce. Season with salt and pepper and a dash of paprika. Add a few crisp lettuce leaves with a dressing of mayonnaise.

An Excellent Trifle. An excellent trifle can be made by cutting stale sponge cake into slices and spreading them with raspberry jam. Arrange them in a pretty glass dish. Sprinkle over them some crushed macaroons. It must be well soaked with wine. Sherry, with a few spoonfuls of brandy, is the nicest mixture with which to soak it. Then heap roughly all over in some whipped and flavored cream. Decorate the top with glace cherries cut in halves and pieces of chocolate almonds. Instead of the cream you might put some good custard and heap on it stiffly whipped whites of eggs which have been sweetened and flavored.

Hanging Pictures. Remember it is the picture that counts, not the frame. Have as few frames as possible. Arrange the pictures according to their kind. A number of water colors, prints, and oil paintings with gilt all over white and wood frames on the same section of the wall can hardly be arranged artistically.

Frame. Paintings in gilt and water colors in narrow wood. Oil paintings in dark wood. Frames of light and dark wood. Frames of light and dark wood. Frames of light and dark wood.

Recipe for Railway Cake. Ingredients. Three ounces of flour, two ounces of sugar, two ounces of butter, a pinch of salt, milk, two tea-spoonfuls of baking powder, one egg, and salt. Beat the egg, add the butter, then add the flour, sugar, salt, and baking powder. Put in a greased tin and bake in a moderate oven for about twenty minutes. This has been tried with unfailing success by the sender.

LAND OF THE SARDINE

By HUGH M. SMITH
Deputy Commissioner
U. S. Bureau of Fisheries

PORTING the large peninsula of the northwestern corner of France, washed by the English Channel and the Bay of Biscay, is a rugged country, and its inhabitants, who are less than any other people of the peninsula, have no political existence, not even represented on the map, because it is termed a "terra nullius" in the close of the eighteenth century. The Bretons, differing in ancestry from the Gauls, held their own and main characters in a way that is not paralleled in European history. They have held their own against the invasions of modern civilization, and made their enduring impression on the land.

ASSORTING AND ARRANGING SARDINES FOR DRYING IN A CANNERY

people and country, but so that the ancient customs and land has survived that Brittany is well marked, geographical and political entity and bids fair to remain so for many generations. The isolation of Brittany from the rest of France, while at the same time the province is comparatively easy to reach and traverse, has for many years made it a popular holiday and vacation resort for Parisians. Londoners and has attracted the attention of regular travelers and tourists who have "done" the Alps, the Rhine, the Norwegian fjords, the Riviera and the European capitals, are seeking new worlds to conquer. Artists of all lands have likewise found this a most agreeable field for work and recreation. The history of the region is attested by a number of modern books of travel, written and illustrated by clever artists, depicting the quaint charm of country and always giving the reader a keen desire to go and see for himself.

Some years ago I was privileged to visit Brittany in the interest of the bureau of fisheries and the personal observations I then made incidental to the special inquiries in the field form the basis for these necessarily descriptive remarks.

The original name of Brittany was Armorica, which was changed in consequence of extensive immigration of the Great Britain in the fifth and sixth centuries. The Armorican tribes formed a part of that race of which the Highland Scotch and Manx constitute one division and the Welsh, Irish and Bretons the other. The language there spoken at the present time is divided into three or rather distinct dialects and is understood, if not actually used by a very small percentage of the native population. Many of the older Bretons can speak French and in 1902 it was estimated that the French language was spoken or understood by 700,000 of the population. The government now requires the learning of French by the young, and may expect the gradual disappearance of this ancient tongue.

Looking a brief glance at the history of Brittany, we may note that at a very early period this country became settled by a dark-skinned race, that, starting a westward migration from some part of Asia, left remnants along their route through central and northern Europe and ceased their wanderings when they reached the sea in Scandinavia, Ireland, Great Britain, France, Portugal, Spain. In prehistoric times the Gauls invaded this early race, and then came the Romans and the Roman occupation until the fourth century, up to which the peculiar religious practices of the Gauls appear to have flourished undisturbed by either Gauls or Romans.

It is read that in 383 Maximilian, son-in-law of the emperor of England, and his nephew, Constantine, went over to Armorica and endeavored to displace the Romans. This venture cost the lives of some 15,000 soldiers. Maximilian took over a huge army and easily overcame the Romans. Conan became king of the country, which he called "Britannia," or Bretagne, and making his capital at Nantes, he invited his countrymen, who were very hard pressed by the Saxons and Franks, to come over and join him. Many thousands responded to this invitation and by the time of Constantine's death, in 421, Christianity, that had been introduced with the Briton immigrants, had been established and paganism almost entirely driven out of the country.

The middle ages the dukes of Brittany held semi-royal prerogatives and the dukes of Brittany and when, in 1493, Anne of Brittany here wedded Louis XII, it passed to the crown of France. During the revolution

A FLEET OF SARDINE BOATS IN PORT

It was the scene of the most atrocious massacre and in 1793 fully 20,000 men, women and children were here butchered. Every observant traveler soon realizes that the dominant note in the Breton character is the universal and ineradicable belief in a higher power, which is not only worshipped but is regarded as influencing or determining every incident in their daily lives. Most peculiar religious superstitions are current, witchcraft, charms and amulets are believed in, and fairies and other creatures of a childlike imagination are held to have a very real existence to both young and old. All of the people are now nominally Christians but Druidism flourished in some remote sections as late been vividly portrayed in Balzac's stirring novel, "The Chouans." The Bretons, at first friends and kindred of the Bretons, eventually became their hereditary enemies. For centuries the British privateers and naval vessels ravaged the coast, blockaded the harbors, bombarded the towns, landed fighting parties and the long-continued and deep-seated animosity thus engendered still abides in this land, where changes in habits and customs and sentiment occur very slowly.

The present population of Brittany is about 3,260,000. The principal cities are Brest, the great naval port of France, beautifully located on one of the best harbors in all Europe; Rennes, in the interior, brought prominently to the world's notice some years ago as the scene of Dreyfus' first trial; and Nantes, on the Loire, the largest and one of the most interesting places in all Brittany. Its chief attraction is its hoary age and romantic history. It is mentioned by Caesar, Pliny and other writers of their time and was a city of note long before Caesar divided all Gaul into three parts. In the middle ages it was one of the most valuable possessions of the semi-royal dukes of Brittany and when, in 1493, Anne of Brittany here wedded Louis XII, it passed to the crown of France. During the revolution than the entire state of Maryland. The abundance of stone everywhere and the scarcity of timber in many places have determined the building material for most of the houses, churches and other structures in Brittany. When for any reason building stone is scarce or otherwise lacking the people have often had recourse to the prehistoric monuments for their houses and churches. The churches afford most fascinating material for the study of the art and the antiquarian. The

CLAYTON PLASANT

SHRINE AND SPRING

ning with the eleventh century, they present a most interesting record of the evolution and progress of ecclesiastical architecture. Large castles are rare and in practically every community it is the church that is the most imposing structure.

The houses of peasants and fishermen are for the most part small, one-storyed, with steep thatched roofs. In a few places I noticed the walls formed entirely of upright granite blocks seven or eight feet high. Windows (often without glass) are small, few in number and not infrequently altogether lacking in the poorest houses. The floors are of dirt, which is often converted into mud and remains so, and the interiors are usually chilly and cheerless. In many families there is a common bedroom in each house, with a bed in each corner, and it is no unusual thing to find the same room shared by a litter of pigs and perhaps several goats.

But the leading product of the waters of Brittany is the sardine. This country has its own peculiar attractions for the artist, the archaeologist, the linguist and other specialists, and even ordinary tourists are often impelled to extend their travels thither, but the greatest number of Americans are attracted by the sardine, which appeals most strongly to their esthetic, artistic or scientific tastes, but their gastronomic, through the medium of the canned sardine. Other countries and other parts of France produce sardines, but the sardine par excellence comes from Brittany.

Brittany is the center of the sardine fishery and has all of the numerous establishments for the canning of the fish. In an average season the Brittany sardine fishermen number 25,000 to 30,000 and catch 100,000,000 to 150,000,000 pounds of sardines, for which they receive $1,500,000 to $3,000,000, while the shore industries dependent on the fishery give employment to 20,000 other persons, mostly women and girls. So important is the sardine that in many communities in Brittany every person is directly or indirectly supported by it, and the failure of the fish to come means ruin, starvation and death to many people in the more isolated places.

Sardines are found on the coasts of Brittany throughout the year, but occur in great abundance in summer and autumn. The small fish, in demand for canning purposes, have been hatched from eggs laid in the previous summer at a considerable distance from the land and go in schools at or near the surface. As many as 100,000 have been taken at one time in one net from one school, but the usual size of the schools is not remarkably large.

Like other free-swimming oceanic fish, of which the mackerel, bluefish and herring are conspicuous examples, the sardine varies in abundance from year to year and at times has been exceedingly scarce on the French coasts. Thus, from 1887 to 1890, there was an alarming scarcity, but after this four-year period the fish returned in as great numbers as ever.

Again, from 1902 to 1906, the sardine disappeared almost completely, only to be followed by a period of great abundance. All sorts of theories have been advanced to account for these periods of scarcity, which appear to be coming more frequently than formerly.

Vainly Seek Health in Southwest. According to a statement of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis fully 7,100 persons, hopelessly diseased with tuberculosis, annually come to die in the states of California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas and Colorado, most of them by order of their physicians. The statement, which is based upon the testimony of well-known experts, and all available statistics, shows that at least 50 per cent of those who go to the southwest every year for their health are so far advanced in their disease that they cannot hope for a cure in any climate, under any circumstances. More than this, at least 60 per cent of these advanced cases are so poor that they have not sufficient means to provide for the proper necessities of life, which means that 4,215 consumptives are either starved to death or forced to accept charitable relief every year.

Adjustable. Aunt Anne, an old family dandy, was sitting with knees crossed in the kitchen, when the young daughter of the house entered and, impressed with the hugeness of the old woman's feet, asked what size shoe she wore. "Well, honey," replied Aunt Anne, "I kin wear eight's. I generally wear nine's, but deke yer lee got on am twelve's, an de good Lord knows dey but a me!" Everybody's Magazine.

SENSE ABOUT FOOD

Facts About Food Worth Knowing. It is a serious question sometimes to know just what to eat when a person's stomach is out of order and most foods cause trouble.

Grape-Nuts food can be taken at any time with the certainty that it will digest. Actual experience of people is valuable to anyone interested in foods. A Terre Haute woman writes: "I had suffered with indigestion for about four years ever since an attack of typhoid fever, and at times could eat nothing but the very lightest food, and then suffer again with my stomach. I would wish I never had to eat anything." "I was urged to try Grape-Nuts and since using it I do not have to starve myself any more, but I can eat it at any time and feel nourished and satisfied, dyspepsia is a thing of the past, and I am now strong and well." "My husband also had an experience with Grape-Nuts. He was very weak and sickly in the spring. Could not attend to his work. He was under the doctor's care but medicine did not seem to do him any good until he began to leave off ordinary food and use Grape-Nuts. It was positively surprising to see the change in him. He grew better right off, and naturally he had hope but words of praise for Grape-Nuts.

"Our boy thinks he cannot eat a meal without Grape-Nuts, and he learns so fast at school that his teacher and other scholars comment on it. I am satisfied that it is because of the great nourishing elements in Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason." It contains the phosphate of potash from wheat and barley which combine with albumen to make the gray matter to daily feed the brain and nerve centers.

It is a pity that people do not know what to feed their children. There are many mothers who give their youngsters almost any kind of food and when they become sick begin to pour the medicine down their throats. The real way is to stick to proper food and be healthy and get along without medicine and expense.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Two meetings at Montgomery last week of the opponents to constitutional prohibition was a magnificent demonstration of the rights of the people—the right to liberty and pursuit of happiness in the way each sees to be correct, always within the confines of law.

Laws are made, or are supposed to be, in a reasonable and rational manner, and all well-disposed citizens take pride in conforming to them and assisting in their enforcement.

But when a legislature arrogates to itself, without any authority from the electorate, the right to dictate what he should do, and desires to incorporate such drastic measures into the constitution of the State, then it is high time for the voters to enter their protest, and a more enthusiastic protest was never witnessed than that of Wednesday a week ago.

We may be accused of speaking in the interests of the liquor traffic, but we know our efforts are in the interests of the people, the voters who have a right to prescribe for themselves what they shall eat and what they shall drink; a free man does not need any legislature or any constitutional provision to tell him what he should eat or drink or what he should wear.

Under local option Chilton county has been for many years a stronghold of prohibition, and apparently it has worked well. But we do not believe the free men of Chilton, always alive and alert to everything which affects their interests, will vote in favor of the proposed amendment which subjects their homes to the invasion of officials at any time they may imagine a half-pint of whiskey therein.

That there are sincere prohibitionists who believe they can legislate prohibition in their fellow creatures we do not doubt, but there are also other so-called prohibitionists whose motto is "Don't do as I do, but do as I say."

Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota died at Rochester Tuesday. He had been at the point of death for several days.

Cotton may go to twenty cents, says James A. Patten who cornered the wheat market in Chicago. "I think that cotton is going to rise to 17 cents on the bulge. To tell the truth, I would not be surprised if it were to go as high as 20 cents."

The pool in which Mr. Patten is interested is said to consist of a million bales.

Mountain Crook

Well, after this fuss over the North Pole, let Cook and Peary bring it to this land of sunshine and then see how soon it will melt away, as Alabama's finances have under Comer's rule. Yes, Governor Comer can borrow money on the good credit of the commonwealth, but the man who sows the seed, cultivates the soil and keeps machinery running, will surely have it to pay back. Gov. Comer and his amendment to the constitution will look like a Kansas grain field after being visited by a 100-mile an hour cyclone. With the State treasury gutted and a big indebtedness hanging over us, and a crop failure thrown in, how does the average farmer feel about more mortgaging in order to defray the amendment election expenses?

Why not get a flag staff made of a piece of the North Pole, erect it in Alabama, hang Comer's constitutional amendment on that, until the "cold, chilly winds of November" next gently wafts it to and fro. The one trouble is that both pole and amendment will not survive the bright sunlight of publicity on all the day.

Statian.

Saturday, the 18th, was the day set for our Sabbath School Convention. Well, we had the day alright and had the dinner all O. K., but where were those enthusiastic people of sixth district who pledged themselves to help work this district up to its part of the gold star county? Not a single speaker on the program was present, or a single delegate from any Sabbath school in the district, or a single superintendent, save old Mt. Carmel church, where the convention was held, who did their part well and nobly. Now brethren, who is responsible for this failure? We had a good crowd of people anxiously waiting, but the convention was a failure on your part. I am not responsible, neither is the community around the church, for they did their part and did it well.

If we are going to try to hold any more conventions, let us try to do a little better than this. The program is always published in the county paper at least twenty days before the convention. Besides, I have visited almost all the schools in the district and made the announcement. If there is anything lacking on my part please say so and let me step down and out and get the right man in, and I will go and help him every time, so help me, Johnnie.

We are sorry to announce the fact that Master Gordon Perry, while climbing after grapes, fell a distance of fifty feet, breaking his leg above the knee, and is suffering great pain, but we hope he will soon recover. Miss May Cox is very sick at present with typhoid fever. We have three other cases now convalescing from the same fever. N. L. BROADHEAD.

A Practical Demonstration. "The best way to study nature is to go right to it."

"Oh, I know it. I was once disposed to doubt the industry of the ant, of which so much is said."

"I did. I had a controversy with a naturalist over the question, and I thought I had him beaten until he gave me a demonstration."

"Took you out and showed you the ants at work, did he?"

"Well, not exactly that, but he took me along on one of his scientific expeditions and then maliciously pitched my tent over an ant hill. By the time I discovered what was happening the conviction was forced upon me that ants are really and truly industrious. They are small, but they made me move, and some of them went right along with us to the next camping place."—New York Times.

Kodol
For Dyspepsia and Indigestion

If you Suffer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gas on
the Stomach, Belching, Sour Stomach, Heart-burn,
etc., a little Kodol will Relieve you almost Instantly

Kodol supplies the same digestive
juices that are found in a healthy
stomach. Being a liquid, it starts
digestion at once.
Kodol not only digests your food,
but helps you enjoy every mouthful
you eat.
You need a sufficient amount of
good, wholesome food to maintain
strength and health.
But this food must be digested
thoroughly, otherwise the pains of indigestion and dyspepsia are the
result.
When your stomach cannot do its
work properly, take something to help your stomach. Kodol is the only thing that will give the stomach complete rest.
Why? Because Kodol does the same work as a strong stomach, and
does it in a natural way.

Railroad Magnate's Son Lugs Chain in Western Surveying Camp—In Training to Succeed His Father.

Chicago—Averell Harriman, son of Edward H. Harriman, has started to learn the railroad business from the ground up. Young Harriman, who is 18 years of age, is making his start in the direction of a railway magnate's commanding position by carrying the chain in a surveying camp on the Oregon Short Line in Idaho.

During the summer months, when most rich men's sons spend their time in idleness or in seeking pleasure, Averell Harriman has been doing his share of manual labor in a rough surveying camp in the mountains, and doing it without a murmur.

When the father went to Europe in search of health, Averell had his choice of how he should spend the summer and his choice included the opportunity to go to Europe. He declared that he wanted to learn something about how railroads are located, as that was the foundation of the science of railroading. Asked if he wanted to start at the bottom, as any other boy would have to, he replied that he did.

His father agreed to give him the opportunity, but was apprehensive that he would not stick to such rough work in the mountains of the west. George Dixon, son of Dr. George A. Dixon of New York, one of Harriman's family physicians, is a school chum of Averell Harriman and he decided to join the "rain gang." Both boys were put in positions at $65 a month and were placed on the pay roll of the Oregon Short Line with instructions to the general manager to see that they were treated just as other employees are treated.

During the entire summer both boys have filed the bill perfectly, as shown by the reports which were made from time to time.

This week the boys "knocked" off work, drew their pay and started for Seattle to visit the Alaska Yukon-Pacific exposition, after which they will return to school. It is understood that Mr. Harriman hopes to make Averell his successor in the railway field. Averell always has shown a deep interest in railway construction and railway management.

T. H. Kruttschnitt, son of Julius Kruttschnitt, director of maintenance and operation for the Harriman system, is another rich man's son who is learning the construction and operation ends of railroading from the beginning.

He is assistant roadmaster of the Shasta division of the Southern Pacific at Weed, Cal. Weed is a lumber camp and there are practically no houses except those in which the employees of the Weed Lumber Company live. Such a small matter of inconvenience as the lack of a house, did not bother Mr. Kruttschnitt. He requested that a second-hand Southern Pacific day coach be brought to Weed, had it partitioned off into rooms and set upon a small hill near the depot. Then he moved his wife and children into it, built a protecting shed over his home, to break the intense heat of the sun, and there he is living.

Boston, Mass.—Stephen Calabro, 25 years old, of Quincy, was discharged from the Massachusetts General hospital the other day, literally with a new face and scalp, following a series of operations among the most remarkable in surgical history extending over a period of three years and done as a work of scientific interest by Dr. Charles A. Porter of the Harvard Medical School.

Calabro, who was horribly burned and thought to be disfigured for life in a fireworks explosion in Weymouth, in 1905, submitted himself for treatment at the Massachusetts General hospital in March, 1906. His face, neck, scalp and arms were a mass of turtle-like skin that is known to the

HAYSTACK FOR RAIL CHIEF

President Louis W. Hill of the Great Northern Compelled to Spend Night in Hay.

Great Falls, Mont.—President Louis W. Hill of the Great Northern railway was compelled to spend a night in a haystack. He started from Helena to Great Falls in his automobile. Near Fort Shaw the machine stuck in a mud hole.

He applied to a settler for a bed and supper, but was told that he could find a bed in a nearby haystack and that he could help himself to refreshment at the pump.

When the railroad president did not appear here on time a searching party started toward Helena. They found the automobile in the mud hole, and a short inspection of the nearby neighborhood revealed Mr. Hill and his chauffeur sound asleep in the haystack.

REASON AS A WITNESS

By REV. A. C. SEXTON, D. D., Pastor of the Chicago Ave. Methodist Church, Chicago.

"Come now, and let us reason together," saith the Lord. Is 1:18.

Reason is a witness. It is often its master. The Pharisees had made up their minds that he was only a man, and when they heard him say "Thy sins be forgiven them," they began to reason saying: "Who is this that speaketh blasphemies?" Their prejudice kept them from drawing the right conclusion. Their reason, uninfluenced by prejudice, would have said that he who could work such miracles was God and therefore had the right to forgive sins. Under the control of prejudice these Pharisees were careful to strain out little gnats of difficulty while they swallowed camels of absurdity.

Self-interest is another influence very powerful with our witness. It is hard for a man to see a good reason for what he knows to be against his interest. A mere excuse in the scale with self is heavier than the strongest reason. Read the parable of the husbandmen in Luke 20 and you will see how forcibly Jesus shows this weakness of reason when under the control of self-interest.

When the husbandmen saw him they reasoned with one another, saying, "This is the heir; let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours." If they had been unselfish and loyal to their master their reason would have said: "This is the heir; let us pay our rent or give up the vineyard to him if he wishes it. He is here now to look after his own, and it is reasonable that we should let him do it." Their reason did the bidding of selfishness and led them to murder. And reason is still the slave of self-interest.

Reason is controlled largely by the affections. The Pharisees "reasoned" in their hearts. "Love is proverbially blind, and to nothing is it blinder than argument." It leaps to conclusions. No argument prevails with us against those we love. A good deacon in a church of which I was pastor was called in by a suffering wife to protect her against a brutal husband. Reason was altogether on the wife's side, and the deacon took advantage of it to shame the brute into better manners, but he had not proceeded far before the wife took sides with the husband and insinuated to the deacon that his room was more desirable than his company.

That reason is influenced by so many things is not altogether to its discredit. If you could find a man who is influenced only by reason, whose affections, imagination, desire, friendship and gratitude did not move him to anything, but who decided everything in the cold light of reason, you would have the devil incarnate. There is something in God higher than reason, else we had never been redeemed. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son." Rationalism would turn men into demons of cold calculation. God would use their reason under the control of truth and love. "Come now, let us reason together," saith the Lord. He can furnish the knowledge necessary to right conclusions. Such is the object of revelation, and all who are following reason without a revelation are misled. Agnosticism is the world's latest admission that men cannot by searching find out God. God must therefore reveal himself. In the Bible he has done so, and for you to think that without the help of such a revelation you can be guided by fickle and fallible reason is a mistake which every reasonable man ought to have sense enough not to make.

Reason deals with the fitness of things. "It is not reason," said the apostles, "that we should leave the word of the Lord and serve tables." The rich man of the parable was a fool, in that he did not see the fitness of things. He laid up in barns food for his soul and said: "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease; eat, drink and be merry." He was like a man who would lay up for his family a winter's supply of earth, stones and stubble, things that they could not eat. God demands of us nothing unreasonable. It is fitting that we should love with our whole hearts one who loves us so deeply. It is fitting that we should give all we have and are to him who gave himself for us. When we think of Calvary, with its love and suffering, all for us, no sacrifice we can make ought to be considered great. The heroism of the martyrs which led them through fire and flood was no fanaticism, but the most reasonable return to God for what he had done for them.

When Jesus asks "What shall I profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" He appeals to men as rational beings to choose the truly valuable rather than the worthless.

WINS WIFE IN 30 MINUTES

Prominent Tennessee Politician Was Ready to Propose Soon as He Saw Her Eyes.

Chicago—Gen. Thomas S. Hutchinson, who has been prominently mentioned for the governorship of Tennessee, and Miss Louise Cheatham of Clarksville, Tex., were quietly married recently, and are spending their honeymoon in Chicago. The general says it ought not to take a man more than 30 minutes to win a wife.

At their apartments Gen. Hutchinson told of his courtship and marriage while his bride nodded her approval.

"It was this way," said the general. "I attended the confederate reunion in Memphis in June. I was on Gov. Patterson's staff and my wife was maid of honor from Texas.

The governor introduced me to Miss Louise Cheatham a few minutes after her arrival in Memphis. I looked into her eyes and saw that I loved her. I pushed her out of the crowd, told her that I loved her and asked her to be my wife. I did not wait for her answer, I took it for granted it was 'yes.' The whole transaction did not take over 30 minutes. When we rejoined Miss Cheatham's friends I acted as if I owned her.

"Every man could win a wife if he followed my example. The man who hesitates in warfare or business is lost. Why should he take months in winning a wife? Thirty minutes is long enough."

Hog Has Five Legs. Garber, Okla.—A freak in the swine family is rather an uncommon thing, but R. S. Goode, a farmer living near this city, has a hog with five legs, all developed perfectly. The fifth leg grows out behind the left foreleg and is the same size as the others. The hog is a very healthy animal and weighs nearly 300 pounds.

Medical profession as chelyoid tissue. He left the hospital with a new forehead, new eyelids, new cheeks, a new nose, a new chin, a new neck and, finally, a new head of hair, the result of three years' treatment and unselfish devotion of Dr. Porter in the cause of science.

Calabro was given either no less than 30 times. The operations consisted of skin transplantation and grafting. Much of the skin was taken from other parts of Calabro's own body, but his brother Thomas and other members of his family sacrificed portions of skin to aid their brother.

One of the greatest difficulties met with in the treatment of Calabro was the making of a new head of hair. Nearly the entire scalp had to be replaced, but this was finally accomplished, and now the young man has a prolific crop of hair "as good as new," which comes well down over his forehead.

Calabro has returned to his brother's home in Quincy, where he has a little farm. He intends, he says, to raise fancy poultry for the market.

Read the parable of the husbandmen in Luke 20 and you will see how forcibly Jesus shows this weakness of reason when under the control of self-interest.

When the husbandmen saw him they reasoned with one another, saying, "This is the heir; let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours." If they had been unselfish and loyal to their master their reason would have said: "This is the heir; let us pay our rent or give up the vineyard to him if he wishes it. He is here now to look after his own, and it is reasonable that we should let him do it." Their reason did the bidding of selfishness and led them to murder. And reason is still the slave of self-interest.

Reason is controlled largely by the affections. The Pharisees "reasoned" in their hearts. "Love is proverbially blind, and to nothing is it blinder than argument." It leaps to conclusions. No argument prevails with us against those we love. A good deacon in a church of which I was pastor was called in by a suffering wife to protect her against a brutal husband. Reason was altogether on the wife's side, and the deacon took advantage of it to shame the brute into better manners, but he had not proceeded far before the wife took sides with the husband and insinuated to the deacon that his room was more desirable than his company.

That reason is influenced by so many things is not altogether to its discredit. If you could find a man who is influenced only by reason, whose affections, imagination, desire, friendship and gratitude did not move him to anything, but who decided everything in the cold light of reason, you would have the devil incarnate. There is something in God higher than reason, else we had never been redeemed. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son." Rationalism would turn men into demons of cold calculation. God would use their reason under the control of truth and love. "Come now, let us reason together," saith the Lord. He can furnish the knowledge necessary to right conclusions. Such is the object of revelation, and all who are following reason without a revelation are misled. Agnosticism is the world's latest admission that men cannot by searching find out God. God must therefore reveal himself. In the Bible he has done so, and for you to think that without the help of such a revelation you can be guided by fickle and fallible reason is a mistake which every reasonable man ought to have sense enough not to make.

Reason deals with the fitness of things. "It is not reason," said the apostles, "that we should leave the word of the Lord and serve tables." The rich man of the parable was a fool, in that he did not see the fitness of things. He laid up in barns food for his soul and said: "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease; eat, drink and be merry." He was like a man who would lay up for his family a winter's supply of earth, stones and stubble, things that they could not eat. God demands of us nothing unreasonable. It is fitting that we should love with our whole hearts one who loves us so deeply. It is fitting that we should give all we have and are to him who gave himself for us. When we think of Calvary, with its love and suffering, all for us, no sacrifice we can make ought to be considered great. The heroism of the martyrs which led them through fire and flood was no fanaticism, but the most reasonable return to God for what he had done for them.

When Jesus asks "What shall I profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" He appeals to men as rational beings to choose the truly valuable rather than the worthless.

Cures Dyspepsia; Trial Is Free

It is a popular mistake that only wealthy people who eat rich and highly spiced foods suffer from dyspepsia, or, as it is also known, indigestion. The laborer in the street, the worker in the field also finds himself a victim of this disorder. Among the very greatest sufferers from it are women.

Dyspepsia is indicated by a constant feeling of nausea, by loss of appetite and troubled sleep, by sour stomach and distress after eating, by bad complexion and listlessness.

There is no surer and speedier cure for this trouble than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which dyspepsia have been using successfully for twenty years. This great herb and native compound cures Dr. Clark, of Buffalo, N. Y., of dyspepsia and sour stomach that he had had for forty years or until the lucky day that he heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It cured Joel Adams, of Montgomery, Ala., after suffering continuously for sixteen months. These are only a few of the many. But it is not expensive to be cured with this grand remedy, as it can be bought at any drug store in a 50-cent or $1 bottle.

Your very neighbors are probably lifelong users of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, but if you want to know without expense what it will do for you personally, send your name to Dr. Caldwell and he will be glad to send you a free trial bottle. He is actually anxious to have you make a test of his remedy.

Thousands of families everywhere keep it in the house against such an emergency as constipation, sour stomach, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, heartburn, torpid liver, etc., which may come on a member of the family any day. It is pleasant to the taste, acts gently and does not gripe. It is the great children's laxative tonic.

If there is anything about you which you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

That's what Edna Edwards, Binet, of East Edward, N. Y., called Paul M. Stanton, the home of a neighbor, tortured by Asthma, bent on curing him with Dr. King's New Discovery, that had cured himself of asthma. This wonderful medicine soon relieved him and quickly cured his neighbor. Later it cured his wife of a severe lung trouble. Stanton believes in the greatest of all cures, the cure on Earth. The cure on Earth are surely cures on it. Best for Hay Fever, Cough, and Whooping Cough. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by Upchurch Drug Co.

A FEW WORDS ON PROHIBITION

Jemison, Sept. 21, 1909. Editor Banner—Please allow me a small space in the dear old Banner to say a few words about prohibition. Well, to start with, I can say the prohibition wave has reached this neck of woods and the good it has already done cannot be estimated. Some people will say that they can't see any difference, but they are just like the fellow that wouldn't see the rats, they have got their eyes shut and they don't want to see the difference.

Now, Mr. Editor, I see in last week's Banner your say in your opinion that the amendment will never carry. Now, I may be the one that is fooled, but I believe when election comes you will see in Stumps Hill it will carry with about two-thirds majority. Now come on boys, and let us talk up on this, and it may be the more we talk the more we will learn. It seems to me that everybody is afraid to speak.

Now, I suggest that each community organize a temperance club. We have one at Mineral Springs, and I think the chairman of this club ought to call a meeting and elect new officers. With best wishes to the Banner, and all of its readers, I will stop for this time.

GREEN KETTERFORD.

Maplesville, Sept. 20, 1909.

Editor Banner—I want to write a few words in favor of the much talked of amendment to the constitution. If we can do anything to help prohibition, let's do it and do it well. Now comes the time to show whose dog we are. You sometimes see two men walking along together and a dog with them; you can't tell whose dog it is, but if you will watch them until they separate then you can tell who owns the dog. Now we have been saying prohibition, but now we will see and are already seeing whose dog we are. I am surprised to see some men's names on the list who are protesting against the amendment, but when I think about some of their business interests, I then see that there are yet some Dimetrises or silver crafts that are mentioned in our Sunday school lesson. Their business is likely to suffer. Yes, let us put it in the constitution of our State, and then by States into the United States constitution. Some say we need whiskey as a medicine. If we can't live without it let's die for we will die some day anyhow. So let's die sober. Yes, the test is coming to show whose dog we are. Let it come, and if you love our country and our Lord and His cause, vote for the constitutional amendment. Hoping to hear from others on this subject, I close with best wishes to the dear old Banner.

This is an exact representation of the bottle containing a bottle of St. Joseph's Liquid Liver Regulator, but it is much larger than the illustration, and printed in black ink on a yellow carton. Druggists and general merchants will sell it at 50 cents a bottle, or you can get it direct from us at the same price. This is a delightful liver medicine—prompt, effective, and exceedingly pleasant to the taste. Try just one bottle to satisfy yourself—and you'll buy more.

FARMERS' UNION

Pursuant to time set by State Officers, the Calhoun County Farmers' Union will meet with Cedar Grove Local No. 442, at Cross Roads school house, one mile south of Taborby, on Wednesday and Thursday, October 6-7, 1909. Anyone coming by rail to Taborby and wishing to be met by conveyance, should notify Bro. R. W. Scott, Taborby, Route 1.

The first day will be public and everybody who feels interested in the advancement of agriculture in Calhoun county is invited.

All locals are requested to send their best men as delegates as officers will be elected for ensuing year.

Yours for business,

J. M. SMITH, Secretary.

"AN EXCELLENT MEDICINE"

This is what all say who have used St. Joseph's Liver Regulator, whether in liquid or powder form. Its action is easy, but it relieves the system of bilious accumulations, thus avoiding constipation and all kindred evils. As a family medicine it has few, if any equals—no superior. Druggists and general dealers sell it, liquid at 50 cents a bottle; powders, in tin boxes, at 25 cents a box, five boxes for a dollar. Don't accept something else "just as good," but be sure to get St. Joseph's Liver Regulator.

Rheumatism

Do you want to get rid of it? If so, take Dr. Miles' Nerve modified as directed in pamphlet around bottle. In addition to the direct curative properties it has a soothing effect upon the nervous system by which the rheumatic pains are controlled, and rest and sleep assured. It has made many cures of this painful disease, some of them after years of suffering. If it will cure others why not you. If your case is complicated, write us for advice, it costs you nothing and may save you prolonged suffering.

"I was so crippled that I could scarcely walk. After having my shoes on for an hour or two I could manage to walk by suffering the pain. Then I began to have pain all through my system. My doctor told me I had an acute attack of inflammatory rheumatism. I read about Dr. Miles' Nerve, bought a bottle and I commenced to get better from the start and for the past six months have scarcely any pain, and am able to walk as well as ever."

JAS. H. SANDERS, P. O. Box 3, Rockaway, N. J. Your druggist sells Dr. Miles' Nerve, and we authorize him to return price of first bottle (only) if it fails to benefit you.

THE BANNER

LET THE PEOPLE RULE

CLANTON, ALA. THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1909

No. 52

MAN ON THE CORNER
of the Rights He has, and Some He
New Met.

Clanton is becoming quite a literature—the hub of the State as before. With one paper, THE Banner, printed and published here, and two others printed at Birmingham and published at Clanton, it holds an unique position in the State. If there is another town in Alabama where a similar thing is occurring we don't know of it.

and he dreamed a dream, and the way he told it: In a room where I was sleeping, I was suddenly aroused by my companion who drew my attention to a bed at some little distance, which was occupied by Gov. Comer.
His head, just as it is described in the papers, was on the pillow, his arms and body beneath the covers were of enormous proportions and were entangled in the clothes, from which he was making frantic efforts to escape.
My companion was urging me to go down, but not a string could be pulled anywhere, and with one glance we began calling: "Help!"
and bringing cords and let us tie down before he does any further mischief.

sition of the reasons for voting on the proposed amendment to the constitution will be presented.

on a reasonable proposition.

PROHIBITION RALLY.

Editor B. B. Comer and Judge
D. D. Denon will speak at Clanton, Ala., October 9, at 10 o'clock
p.m. at Thorby, 7 o'clock p.m.
and every man, woman and child come to these meetings that and hear these distinguished talk on prohibition. There has been up to now a more important election held than the one held in November. We know whiskey off every battle-line where we have met it for the years, and now we have the last battle and let us meet the fight. If we are successful in this battle it means the end of whiskey in Alabama, and whiskey means safety for our lives. Let us have the largest meeting ever gathered at Clanton
on Thursday to hear these distinguished men. Dinner will be served on the ground. All persons are invited. Conveniently do so, are to bring their baskets.
Dinner will be served on the ground. All of the ladies are requested to contribute to the occasion by bringing well filled baskets of reasonable eatables. The presence of the ladies and children is highly expected and urged.

Comer and his goody

thing in the Alabama State politi-

are close the eyes of the in-

for them to crack.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Maplesville, Sept. 25, 1909

Editor Banner—As I am perhaps one of the dogs referred to by Bro.
Atchison in his communication of the 20th, will you allow me to say that there has come a sudden change over his vision since I conversed with him only a few days ago, as he then deplored the trouble it was causing and expressed himself as being indifferent as to how it went. I don't wish to do him an injustice, but I have been informed that the allurement of the pie counter have been held out,
and I am convinced that Atchison is too good a man to be drawn into writing such a letter without some outside influence; neither do I believe that he wrote it without dictation. As to the dogs that oppose the amendment, I don't think you need watch the parting of any two in Maplesville to find out who they are, and leaving self out, I think they will compare favorably with those who advocate its adoption,
yet we are met with the cry, "No Christian whiskey men hired by the brewers," and every other "curious epithet" simply because some of us cannot be whipped into supporting a measure that is contrary to the very spirit of republican institutions. I have ever advocated the policy of granting others the privilege of free thought,
and have no slurs to cast at any man for differing with me, but that day seems to have passed and man is judged as a Christian, a gentleman or patriot by the way he votes.
I would recommend some of our opponents to read the 23d chapter of the Gospel of St. Matthew.

In conclusion, let me say to our friends who are opposing this amendment to copy the example of the Master, though He was reviled, reviled not again. But use every effort to let the people understand this question and we have no ground to fear but that we will be able to save our homes from the desecration sought to be brought about by this amendment.

Respectfully,
J. J. L. STEWART.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Sparks, Nev., Sept. 18, 1909

Dear Sir: I am very desirous of locating my aunt and her family, who left Pike county, Ga., about twenty-two years ago. I believe they moved to, or near to Clanton, Ala. I believe they were engaged in farming. My aunt and uncle had several children, who, when I last remember seeing them, their oldest daughter looked to be about ten or twelve years old, (I can't remember her name.) The husband of my aunt (my aunt was my mother's sister) was nicknamed
"Bud," and his last name sounded like Vinsant or Vinzant. My mother and brother died when I was a small boy (they died in Macon, Ga.) and I have never known of any of mother's family, only the ones mentioned above. I would like very much to locate some of them. My mother's name was Mrs. Emma Waller. If you can assist me in this matter, I will be very grateful to you. Thanking you very much.

Very respectfully,
HENRY J. WALLER.

Vancouver Barracks, Wash., Sep. 24
Editor Banner—Please allow me
space in your paper to say a few words to the people of dear old Clanton. Well, times are very good in Washington this year, there is a good crop of wheat and fruit.
Prunes is the leading fruit crop of this country and they have a good supply, and labor is a good price here, a laboring man gets from $2.00

else is the same way, groceries, dry goods and all; so you can about even up, but the soldier is behind.
I would like to hear from some of the boys of Clanton. Well, I will Goodwater.

Editor Banner—I would like to put a few personals in your valuable paper.

Health of this part of the country
is fine, everybody is doing well.
Business is picking up here with cotton, it seems that everybody is settling.

Nearly all the boys and girls have gone off to school. Goodwater has helped the citizens along with about twenty five young people.

Messrs. H. P. Matson, Lyons and Eubanks, with the Southern Bell Telephone Co., spent the day at this place recently.

Mr. Arthur Killingsworth, whose home is in Montevallo, and who has been working in Birmingham with the Bell Telephone Co., has been promoted and sent to Goodwater to take charge of this exchange. Miss Haley of this place is his stenographer. We are glad to have Mr.
Killingsworth with us; he has made many friends already.

Mr. Tom McElath, one of Coosa county's leading cotton buyers, spent the day here recently.

Not Coughing Today?

Yet you may cough tomorrow! Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. Your doctor's approval of its use will certainly set all doubt at rest. Do as he says. He knows.
No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

STATE AND NATIONAL SCOPE

Glut of the World's News Gleaned
From All Sources and Boiled
Down for Busy
Readers.

Chicago is said to be facing a Negro race problem.

President Taft will appoint Geo.
Colton governor of Porto Rico.

The attorney general of Ohio has filed suit to oust the National Cash Register company from the state.

Col. M. J. O'Brien, president of the Southern Express, died in New York.

The battleship Mississippi won the target practice record with 12-inch guns.

The New York schools are so crowded that 60,000 children will have only part time.

Steps are being taken by the Marine Hospital service to prevent the spread of bubonic plague in San Francisco.

In the last 120 years the value of export of manufactures from the United States has amounted to twelve billions of dollars.

Alice Webb Duke, wife of the millionaire of Duke's Mixture fame, has been committed to the insane asylum at Kankakee, Ill.

Seven children, inmates of St.
Malachy's home at Rockaway Park,
L. I., were suffocated in a fire that destroyed part of the building.

The full return of prosperity to the railroads of the United States is evidenced in reports just published of the gross earnings of 25 leading lines.

To allay threats of lynching, a special term of court was ordered at Cartersville, Ga., to try three white men and a negro accused of criminal assault.

The owners of the Indianapolis motor speedway were held responsible by the coroner for the several deaths caused in accidents during the recent races.

Engineer Walter D. White, for 50 years in the employ of the Northwestern Pacific railroad, was killed in a wreck near Detroit, Minn., and 10 other persons injured.

President Taft and Postmaster General Hitchcock recently held a conference relative to curtailing expenses of the department in order to reduce the postal deficit.

The naval bureau of supplies and accounts is in the market for 40,000 jackknives of the new type recently adopted. This is a knife with two blades, a large and a small one.

A member of the British parliament has made the claim that the north pole belongs to Canada, and announced that he would bring the matter up in the house of commons.

The rival claims of Peary and Cook to having discovered the north pole will be pressed by their respective disciples, with no prospects of an immediate determination officially of the point at issue.

John Mohlenhap of Newark, Ohio, and J. S. Price, tourists, are reported lost in the ice caves at Lake Mary, 10 miles south of Flagstaff, Ariz. The ice caves have been visited for years, but never thoroughly explored. Ice is continually forming, melting and slipping out of the place, and little is known of the interior, making it dangerous for inexperienced persons to go far into the black depths.

William G. Price, a prominent citizen, was killed in an automobile accident at Knoxville, Tenn.

General Henry C. Corbin died at the Roosevelt hospital in New York, after an operation.

Dr. F. A. Cook, the American Arctic explorer, has received fabulous offers for his books and lectures. The latest offer alone means a full half million dollars for a copyright.

Walter S. Bond of New York has climbed Mount Blanc from Cas-sumovix in nine hours. He thus breaks the record of nine hours and

There was an increase in the value of both the imports and exports of the United States during the month of July over that month last year, according to the monthly statement of the country's foreign commerce issued by the bureau of statistics.

Seth McCallen, the noted Socialist writer, who is better known in the literary world as Dick Maples, and editor of the National Rip-Saw

Hampton, is soon to be abandoned
as a stock farm.

Statisticians who are eminently qualified to form estimates believe that the United States census to be taken next year will show a population of between 90,000,000 and 95,000,000. They would not be surprised if the figures run as high as 100,000,000.

Miss Alice White, the 16-year-old sister of Sheriff White, prevented a jail delivery at Lawrenceburg, Ind., by arming herself with a revolver and holding three desperate men at bay until help reached her.
The escaping prisoners were safely locked in separate cells.

After eluding the officers for eight years, Alva Carter, who is wanted at Amite City, La., upon a charge of murdering a man named Wall, was placed under arrest near Coalinga, Cal., by Sheriff Chittenden. It is alleged that Carter broke jail while awaiting trial.

The dismembered body of a young woman found in a creek near Detroit, Mich., was identified as that of Miss Maybelle Millman of Ann Arbor, who is believed to have been strangled to death before being cut up. A physician has been arrested charged with the crime.

A conscience-stricken thief wrapped $1,200 in bills in a newspaper with a note saying that he dared not face his priest and left the package on a mail box at the Manhattan entrance to the Brooklyn bridge, where many thousands of persons passed it unnoticed. It was addressed to the Aiken Lumber company and was received in good order.

The two negroes charged with the murder of Deputy Sheriff W. L.
Wainwright, at Jackson, Ala., were captured near Bladon Springs. Violence is threatened.

The bureau of the census announced that approximately 3,000 temporary clerks will be appointed in connection with the work of taking the thirteenth decennial census.
Clarksdale, Miss., was practically wiped out by fire.

Two men walking a railroad track near Cincinnati were killed by a train and a third was fatally injured.

The scientists of the Smithsonian Institution are now satisfying their curiosity as to what is in the first consignment of boxes containing trophies of Colonel Roosevelt's African hunt. Upon opening the casks containing the skins they were found to be in good condition.

Through the state department,
Acting Secretary of the Navy Winthrop has received $14,000 from the government of Panama, paid by it as money reparation in the case involving the maltreatment of American naval officers and seamen
at the hands of the police of that republic.

Fifty thousand union men participated in the Labor day parade in San Francisco and Oakland, according to an estimate made by Grand Marshal P. H. McCarthy. A joint celebration was held at Shell Mound park. The orator of the day was Clarence S. Darrow, the Chicago attorney.

The National Association of Retail Milliners, assembled in the Fine Arts building in Chicago, launched the aeroplane as the new style of headgear, put a ban on the peach basket hat and decreed the three-cornered hat of the Louis XVI.
days as the stunning bonnet for the coming winter months.

The Cunard liner Lusitania, by landing her passengers in New York at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night, accomplished the first four days' western passage of a transatlantic liner. Her time from Daunt's Rock to the Ambrose Chan-

made possible conditions which resulted in the killing of one man and a state of lawlessness which extended from the mild mannered poker game to the noisy whirl of the polished roulette wheel.

Serum and vaccine for the treatment of cholera has been discovered by the Italian doctor, Salamibini, working under the direction of Prof. Metchnikoff and Dr. Pierre Roux of the Pasteur institute. The serum has been tried in Russia in desperate cases and reduced the death rate, which was 50 per cent,
lower than 23 per cent.

Asserting that her husband had

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Matters of Special Moment to
the Progressive Agriculturist

Do a thing in time and you'll never be behind.
Some educated people are ignorant,
and some polished people are not refined.

Remember allowing wagons and carriages to stand in the open is almost as injurious to them as use.
If you have the habit of forgetting things which ought to be remembered make a daily memorandum of them and refer to it often.

The French have an expression which means so much that we should adopt it. They sometimes say that a man has "the manners of the heart."
Have a time each day for reading.
Keep up with your business by keeping in touch with the best thought and experience obtainable in that business.

The agricultural professors surely have a place and an honored place in agriculture, but now many of them would take the net profits of a college farm for their salary.

"Kind words are more than coronets," sang Tennyson; and kind words are the fruits of kind thoughts.
Kind thoughts come to the minds of kind people who have kind hearts.

There are people who begin a conversation by words which seem unkind, and need explanation. The words and the explanation are both bad. Let words needing explanation be unspoken, and in their place speak better words.

DIVERSITY FARMER IS WISE

Yes in This Age Specialization Along
Some Line Is an Essential to Highest Success.

We frequently hear the old proverb about the danger of carrying all your eggs in one basket advanced as a reason for following diversified rather than specialized farming; but recently a noted agricultural authority has sounded a warning against the danger of carrying too many baskets, says American Agriculturist. To those who are true economists the last mentioned warning appears to have the ring. There is undoubtedly an element of safety in a diversity of interests, but the man who divides his energies between several different lines of business is likely to find all of them suffering as a consequence.
Each is limited by all the others, and the benefits to be derived from a volume of business are enjoyed by none of these lines. The same thing is true to no small degree in farming. The man who specializes in nothing hardly finds it profitable to provide special equipment for any of the lines of production followed, and in the end is more than likely to sacrifice actual profit from his business to secure the additional element of safety which he fancies to be derived from a diversified production. So while we are ready to concede that a degree of diversity is wise, yet in this age specialization along some line is an essential to the highest success, and the man who in this sense carries the larger proportion of his eggs in one basket is more likely to succeed than the man who carries the weight of a multitude of baskets which are nearly empty.

In practically every farm neighborhood it will be observed that the most successful farmers are specialists along some line. They are dairymen, fruit growers, stock breeders or feeders, or make a specialty of some one cash crop, and employ the other or diversified branches of production in a secondary way as they best fit in with their special line. In this there is an object lesson which might be made a profitable subject of observation and study by their neighbors.
But such observations should not be hastily made, nor conclusions therefrom hastily drawn. Many farmers make this mistake, and not finding the specialty upon which they decide as immediately profitable to them as it is to their neighbors who have had years of experience in that line and who have established in it a reputation for themselves and their product, they turn to something else with the same result. Thus our business is one for constant study and observation, and our plan cannot be successfully made offhand each year just before the fall seeding is done or the spring crops planted. Farming is a complicated business, which demands constant application if the many problems which it presents to each of us are to be successfully and profitably solved.
Nearly every farmer will find it profitable to specialize along some line, which should be selected with care
and with a view to his personal tastes and inclinations, as well as to the conditions under which he must work.

Encourage the Farm Hand.

When the hired man is a good one,
let him know his services are appreciated. Pay him as much wages as you can. Then, when he can find it no longer profitable to work for anyone else, help him to get a farm in your neighborhood. The good hired man makes a good neighbor and will be a wealth-creating force for the community.

SOLVE RURAL LIFE PROBLEM

Differs with Point of View and the Varying Interests of Those Who Look at Question.

In the course of an eloquent address on "A Campaign for Rural Progress," Dr. Liberty H. Bailey, dean of the New York State College of Agriculture, and who was president of the Country Life commission, has given us all wholesome food for serious thought on a subject about which there are diverse opinions, says Farm and Fireside. He said:

"We have heard a great deal during the last few years about the country life problem. Now, the country life problem differs with respect to the point of view and the varying interests of those who look at the problem.
To one man it is merely a question of better agriculture, better prices for crops, to another man it may have to do chiefly with the organization of schools and colleges which will put men in touch with rural affairs.

"We must, in the first place, of course make farming profitable. If we can possibly do it. There was a time
a few years ago when persons expected professors from colleges of agriculture to tell them how to make farming profitable. That time is past, because persons have found out that we cannot do it. In other words, we can merely express recent results of science, we can give some general advice, but it remains for the men on the farm to make land profitable. If they cannot do it, certainly no one else
at long range can.

"It is first necessary, as I conceive it, if we are to develop a more effective rural civilization, to remove the handicaps under which the farmer labors. Because farmers are not organized, because they do not work together, it is natural, of course, that the individual farmer should be at a disadvantage as against persons in commercial occupations, or as against manufacturing interests, or as against organized interests of all kinds. It is time that the farmer should be freed from the disadvantages to which he has been subjected by the corporate combinations and syndicated interests of the country; yet there is no power within himself so long as he is not organized to accomplish this.

"This is not a criticism of any organized, or syndicated business, but merely a statement of fact.

"Perhaps I might illustrate this as well as in any other way by speaking of the whole subject of the farmer's relation to the marketing of his products. The farmer is, as you should know, by nature individualized, because he owns land, because he is separated from his neighbors, and thus he tends to be self-dependent—independent. This individuality, this independence, he loses, if at all, when he goes to market his produce. He finds that he is practically powerless; he finds that the regulations as to trade are made by other persons than himself. In many cases they are the working out of natural laws which no man can work out otherwise. But he is powerless so far as having any voice, in the marketing of his goods.

"The whole question of the middleman in the development of a rural civilization is one that has been discussed a great many years, as you know. There are certain persons who think and say that the case is so hopeless, that the farmer is so much at a disadvantage, that the only way in which he can protect himself is by some kind of means to do away with the middleman, to do away with all intermediary tradespeople through the organizations which have that purpose
as a part of their general movement.
All of you know that is impossible.

"Certain men, of course, become skilled in transportation; they become skilled as salesmen; they become skilled as distributors. It is unreasonable to think that a man, however skilled he may be in raising wheat, or in raising cantaloupes, or in raising fruit, it is unreasonable to expect that he can develop the skill that will allow him to place his products on the market where they will return him the best prices.

"But the middleman has been unrestrained, he has developed almost to the point of license in many cases. I have come to feel that the whole middleman question in the country must be studied fundamentally. It must be regulated, if necessary, it must be controlled by some kind of public service commission or some kind of public service agent. This not for the purpose, or would not be for the purpose, of curtailing the liberty of any honest middleman. By eliminating dishonored practices it ought to benefit the middleman system."

Run Down Horses.

For the horse that has been worked down weak and poor, there is nothing that will do it so much good as a complete period of rest on good pasture.
Some red clover in the pasture will help. If any of the horses seem to be going down hill in flesh and spirit give them a couple of weeks' vacation in the pasture, with plenty of good water to drink, and see how they will look and act at the end of the time.

GREEN CORN ON THE

New-Fangled Aids in Its Should Be Discouraged by the Epicure.

The taste for green corn, the
for the symphonies of cooking Beethoven, is not universal. The among the races of men. The man, though he eats corn, does not regards corn as a food. He food, and the German, who rye bread and sauerkraut, has time to master the difficulties of ing it.

Certain misguided persons, in effort to spread the cult of green corn, have recently devised a series books and prongs for the purpose face, says the Baltimore Sun. The idea of these inventors is to make that the prejudice against green matters is due entirely to the fingers attending the orthodox of eating it. The new series of books make the operation of that a novice can master the art son. When they are first read, the fingers do not touch the corn, but stead, it is safely introduced into beetle on a pin and so forth, and the clothing, etc. and so forth, and public is removed.

Despite the apparent success of this device, we are unable to sym-patize with it. To get the true flavor of corn one must eat it in the husk, followed for centuries by the curran eastern shoremen who are acknowledged Hephais of the art. The fingers do not touch the corn, but one gets the full measure of its electric warmth. With a steel prong piercing its vitals, how can it be to the imagination? With all danger of its sudden flight removed, what is its old romance? Away with all such mechanical impediments to the "eating" of corn. As well kiss a pretty girl through a sieve!

HOW TO MAKE DARNING EASY

Baste Square of Net Over the Hole and Proceed in the Usual Way.

The next time you have a hole in stocking that you dread to tackle, baste a square of net over the hole.
Then darn in the usual way. Draw the threads back and forth through the meshes of the net, skipping every

very soft, is apt to cut the cotton.
For darning sheerer fabrics such blonde can be basted on the under side of the hole and filled in the same way. This method must not be used where the hole is in a prominent place.

Cocoanut and Rice Mold.

Four ounces of ground rice in ounces of desiccated cocoanut oil quart of milk, two ounces of butter, sugar to taste, cochineal. Mix the ground rice and cocoanut, and add sufficient of the milk to make a smooth paste. Put the rest of the milk on to boil with the butter, and it into the cocoanut and rice, and on to boil, stirring it well till quite smooth, and it tastes cooked. Put half into a wet mold, then color the rest with cochineal, and add it fully to the white part. When out turn out and scatter cocoanut over shape.

Carrots with Green Sauce.

Boil a cupful of green peas till tender. Wash, scrape, and chop carrots enough to make a pint. Boil in salted water till tender. Boil for 40 minutes. Drain, season with oil in the center of a hot dish. Put the peas through a sieve, add plenty of butter and salt, and pour the sauce around the carrots.

BLEB GREEN CORN ON THE COB
The taste for green corn, like the taste for the symphonies of Ludwig Beethoven is not universal. The man, though he eats out with good regard to corn as a feed rather than as food, and the German, busy with his bread and sauerbraten, has no time to master the difficult art of eating it.

Certain misguided persons, in an effort to spread the cult of corn-on-the-cob, have recently devised ingenious hooks and prongs for holding it to the face. The Baltimore Sun has the idea of these inventions seems to be that the prejudice against corn among most races is due entirely to the risks attending the orthodox method of eating it. The new-fangled corn hooks make the operation so simple that a novice can master it in one lesson. When they are employed the fork is not touched the ear at all, instead it is safely impaled like a needle on a pin and so all danger to the tongue, eye and surrounding parts is removed.

Despite the apparent refinement of this device, we are unable to approve it. To get the true flavor of green corn one must eat it in the manner followed for centuries by those who are not ashamed of their corn. If the fingers do not touch it, how can one get the full measure of its deliciousness? With a steel prong, sticking its vitals, how can it appeal to the imagination? With all danger of its sudden flight removed, where is its old romance? Away with all such mechanical impediments to enjoyment! As well kiss a pretty girl through a sieve!

HOW TO MAKE DARNING EASY
Baste Square of Net Over the Hole and Proceed in the Usual Way.

The next time you have a hole in a stocking that you dread to tackle, baste a square of net over the hole. Then darn in the usual way. Draw the threads back and forth through the meshes of the net, skipping every other one, so that in darning in the opposite direction there is a mesh to draw through.

Keep on hand for this purpose remnants of black, white and ecru net. They can be put in a small bag, in the darning basket to be in readiness whenever needed. A cotton net with considerable body is the best to use for an underweave. Canvas, unless very soft, is apt to cut the cotton.

For darning sheerer fabrics wash stockings and be careful on the under side of the hole and fill in the same way. This method must not be used where the hole is in a prominent place.

Cocoanut and Rice Mold.
Four ounces of ground rice two ounces of desiccated cocoanut, one quart of milk, two ounces of butter, sugar to taste, cochineal. Mix the ground rice and cocoanut, and take sufficient of the milk to make a smooth paste. Put the rest of the milk on to boil with the butter, stir it into the cocoanut and rice, and stir on to food-stuffing it well till quite smooth and it tastes cooked. Pour into a wet mold, then color the food with cochineal, and add it carefully by the white part. When cold, turn out and scatter cocoanut over the shape.

Carrots with Green Sauce.
Boil a cupful of green peas till tender. Wash, scrape, and chop carrots coarsely enough to make a pint, boil in salted water till tender, from 20 to 40 minutes. Drain, season well and pile in the center of a hot dish. Put the peas through a sieve, add plenty of butter and salt, and pour the thick sauce over the carrots.

THE BLACK HAND

SCOURGE

GERALD A. RODERICK

LIEUT. JOSEPH PETROSINO

bottle of cheap red wine. They puff at shortstemmed pipes or draw through straws on stogie-like Italian cigars that retail for half a cent. They are out of work and have been for the two hundred, perhaps the bulk of the tail or's savings, is speedily divided and the blackmailers are ready for other weeks of idleness. Again the Black Hand!

There is a possibility of big rewards in the game of plunder that has attracted criminals of skill, daring and brains. Many of them are ex-convicts from Italy, who plundered there in the name of the Mafia or the Camorra. Others are equally desperate criminals who got away from Italy before being caught and given the convict brand, which makes entry into America difficult and remaining here uncertain with Petrosino's band continually "fanning" the Italian quarters.

One of these skilled laborers of crime, perhaps a pair of them, will stay about him four or five dull, unimaginative, "lazy fellows"—preferably "black sheep" of the town or section in Sicily from which the leader came, and there you have as near an organization as the Black Hand has yet perfected. This leader is known to his followers as a bad man. He has a record for speedy carving with a dagger, perhaps, or a much-to-be-envied knack of using his revolver quickly. He rules the gang by fear of bloody violence and does not even bother to extract oaths from them.

Italian bankers, contractors, wholesale dealers in spaghetti or olive oil or wine, owners of equities in mortgaged tenement houses—these are the victims of the big Black Hand. One thousand dollars is the least they strike for. Failure to pay means that a bomb of crude but deadly construction will be dropped in front of the marked man's bank, store or tenement house. Generally the bomb is so thoroughly overloaded with dynamite that it wrecks much surrounding property, but for that these land pirates care not. Often the innocent are slaughtered, but that brings not even a shrug from these hyenas of the tenements.

Every so-called Black Hand outrage helps on the game of plunder and adds to the fear of the mythical society. A lull in Black Hand outrages by no means indicates the inactivity of the plunderers. Generally it spells their continued success.

"You must always keep in mind," said Petrosino, the Palermo sacrifice to this sort of Italian crime, "that the commission of crimes of violence is not the main issue with this scum of the earth. If a man meets their demands, pays over their price, they are well satisfied to let him alone."

"Have you ever noticed," he continued, "that there is more bomb throwing, more kidnapping, more mysterious murders in the winter months than in the spring, summer or early fall? The winter is the hard time of the year with all Italians and naturally the collections come harder. Men who have given up a few dollars now and then for months suddenly decide that, come what may, they will pay no more. According to the laws of the trade this means punishment and there you have your outrages."

The intense love which a respectable Italian bears for his children has made kidnapping highly lucrative. The Italian kidnapers about New York have been almost uniformly successful since they began signing their letters "La Mano Nera." In every case the child has been eventually returned to his home or left where the police would be sure to find him. Equally in every case there have been indications that the father, in spite of the most strict instructions to the contrary from the police, quietly paid over the amount demanded by the Black Handers or at least a satisfying portion of it.

Knowledge of kidnapping cases nearly always gets to the police and without delay. An Italian mother whose son fails to return from an errand to the bake shop around the corner or whose daughter disappears between the public school and her home, does not fear even the Black Hand. Her husband may cringe and tremble when she suggests the police, but if he delays, the mother, with many wails of anguish, rushes to the nearest police station and blurts out the whole story. As a rule the police have little or nothing on which to work. They have the Black Hand letter demanding the ransom, but of what good is that when the leader of the gang may be that dapper, swarthy brother-in-law who is even then in the parlor mingling his temperamental tears with those of the family?

BOY, KIDNAPED FOR RANSOM BY BLACK-HANDERS AND HIS PARENTS

BARBER-SHOP WRECKED BY BLACK HAND BOMB

BLACK HAND WARNING

hit. The murder story was again good for columns of space. The inventive reporter's rivals went him several better in succeeding editions. They found meeting places of the Black Hand. They traced other unsolved crimes of the Italian district to the same mythical source. The police said nothing. They had been unable to solve the crime, but if it was the work of a powerful secret organization there was some excuse for them.

To the Italian blackmailers who then, as now, lived off the tribute they could wring from their brothers who worked or who had prospered in business, the appellation was a new and unexpected weapon, a stock in trade beyond value. It was not copyrighted and each and every one of them was free to use it. All "Little Italy" was talking of the Black Hand. Its translation into Italian—La Mano Nera—had an even more sinister sound. The next lot of blackmailing letters sent out bore the usual dagger, the skull and cross-bones, the bloody finger print, perhaps the long, black coffin, and every one was signed "La Mano Nera." The Black Hand was launched and the crimes since committed in its name number tens of thousands, the spoils collected have sent many a criminal back to Italy with a fortune according to the Sicilian rating, and not even the police will venture to estimate its cost in human life.

The Black Hand crimes all follow the same general lines, but that is no argument that there is an organized society. The yegmen who terrorize country postmasters all work after an identical fashion, but no one has ever intimated that they were organized. Safe-crackers the country over use the same tools and methods, but who has suspected them of holding conventions? The East side gangs—the "Humpty" Jacksons, the Paul Kellys and the like—plunder similarly with more or less success, but the only connection between gang and gang is an occasional feud, the resulting "shooting up" of which gives the police opportunity to send a gangster or two to Sing Sing.

No Italian is too lonely or too poor to embark as a Black Hand. A sheet of paper, pen and ink, and enough knowledge of Italian to scrawl a few lines of demand and the accompanying threat are all that is necessary. Possible victims are on every hand. The barber in the dingy basement half-way down the block; the fat and timid grocery keeper on the corner; Antonio, of the tenement just below, who goes out early each morning all dressed in white to boss his gang of street sweepers—all these are possible victims of the single-handed Black Hand, and all sooner or later pay their tribute. Of course he signs himself "La Mano Nera," and then sits back to wait the working of the spell of temperamental dread.

About a table in a dingy, low-ceilinged basement wine shop off Mulberry Bend or over on Bleeker street four or five greasy, low-browed men gather of an afternoon over a DEEP SEA TALK.

The Porpoise—I hear that the sporty old lobster went all to pieces in his last days.

The Tortoise—Well, I should say he did go to pieces, and small pieces. He ended up in a lobster salad.

True Thrill.

When visiting a certain town in the Midlands, says a medical man, I was told of an extraordinary incident wherein the main figure, an economical housewife, exhibited, under trying circumstances, a trait quite characteristic of her. It seems that she had by mistake taken a quantity of poison—nervous poison, the antidote for which, as all should know, comprises the whites of eggs. When this antidote was being administered, the order for which the unfortunate lady had overheard, she managed to murmur, although almost unconscious, "Mary, Mary! Save the yolk for the puddings!"—Tit Bits

Not Ashamed of Economy.

Discussing England and the English from an American point of view, a recent American writer in England observes: "Nobody, from the king of England down, is either ashamed or afraid to be economical. Here a man or a woman is thought to be a fool or a vulgarian who is not careful of expenditure, while in America our walters have been clever enough to make it appear that economy is mean, and as a nation we suffer accordingly. We are fools to be fooled in this manner."

A Useful Baby.

Speaking of tricks to win the sympathy of juries in criminal cases, Judge Willard M. McEwen, in a recent address before the Illinois State Attorneys' association, said: "I know of four cases where a baby played a prominent part in getting the acquittal of the defendant, and I later learned that the same baby had been used in each of the cases, although the supposed mothers in each case were different women."—Law Notes

Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in North Carolina says: "My mother since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker and had been troubled with her heart for a number of years, and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach."

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavor of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum."

"I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal. The whole family liked it so well, that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely."

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us."

"I know Postum has benefited my self and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing."

CALL FOR Mass Meeting

A mass-meeting of the citizens of Chilton County is hereby called to assemble at the Court House in Clanton, at 10 o'clock, a. m., on Saturday, the 2d day of October, 1909

for the purpose of organizing the campaign in Chilton County, against the proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama.

All who are opposed to the writing of dangerous and useless regulations into the Constitution of Alabama;

All who are opposed to the surrender of their personal rights, as were secured for us by our fathers, and which have been enjoyed by us since the formation of our government;

All who love the sanctity of home, and who are opposed to any measure which would make it possible for any and every home to be invaded and the members of the family therein subjected to the humiliation of searches and seizures;

All who are opposed to the reckless and useless expenditure of the people's money in holding unnecessary and expensive elections, to the end that the political desires of office-seekers may be gratified, are urged to be present.

Hon. Jesse Stallings, Hon. Sydney J. Bowie and other prominent speakers of State-wide reputation for ability, will be on hand to address the meeting upon the issues involved.

This is a meeting in which every citizen of Chilton County is interested, without regard to present or past political affiliations, and I trust every precinct in the County will be well represented.

A. C. SMITH,

Chairman Campaign Committee of Chilton County.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have tried with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it.

Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (sore throat), diarrhoea, headaches, dizziness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia tablets," physica, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peptic is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say, that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains six times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

Best Stomach Remedy Free

It is an old saying that if the stomach is sound the whole body is safe, because so much depends upon the proper working of the stomach. Many persons find themselves with a disorder of the stomach which produces dyspepsia or a peculiar state of biliousness.

If you suffer from both stomach trouble and constipation you are on the way to a very serious disease. From just such conditions come appendicitis, rheumatism, skin diseases and similar disorders, because the waste matter that should have been expelled from the system through the bowels has found its way into the blood and vitiated it. What is needed at this point is not simply a violent cathartic tablet or salt, which usually does more harm than good, but a gentle laxative.

Only the Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which people have been using for these ailments for nearly a quarter of a century. It cured J. C. Lanham, of Washington, Mo., of stomach trouble of long standing, also William Voll, of 503 Ellison St., Louisville, Ky., who had the trouble for fifteen years.

However, if you have stomach trouble you want to know from personal experience what Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will do for you. If so, send your name to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent you. You are urged to send for the free bottle, as the results from it will be the best recommendation of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Then you will do as over two million people did last year—go to your druggist and buy a regular bottle at 50 cents or 75 cents, according to the size you prefer. We could mention hundreds of families who are never without it. You can never tell when some member of the family will need a laxative, and then no time should be lost taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you need any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 503 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Right At The Mountain.
On a lonely night Edward Benton of Fort Edward, N. Y., climbed Mt. Mansfield to the home of a neighbor, tortured by Asthma, bent on curing him with Dr. King's New Discovery, that had cured himself of asthma. This wonderful medicine soon relieved and quickly cured his neighbor. Later it cured his wife of a severe lung trouble. Millions believe it is the greatest medicine ever known on Earth.

Everet's

Editor Banner—Please allow me a small space in your highly esteemed paper to say a few words on whiskey drinking and cigarette smoking. These are two of the worst evils for boys. Boys that drink and smoke are in a pitiful state. It will give them dropsy of the heart, which often kills; it ruins their nerves so they cannot think as they could if they did not smoke. In school, boys that smoke are behind in their studies, which is clear evidence that it ruins their nerves. It is a shame for a boy to go to God's house and stand around and smoke cigarettes or drink whiskey. I heard a speaker say that a cigarette was a little piece of hell wrapped up in a piece of paper, and I am sure that there are very few boys who want hell with them or even want to be anywhere about it, and if you don't, leave your cigarettes at home when you go anywhere, especially to church. Hoping this may influence some one to quit smoking and drinking. I am your reader.

HILDA MAX JOHNSON.
P. S. I want to add that I'm very sorry to know that the Editor of the Banner takes the stand he does on the prohibition question, and especially towards our ministers, this being a question of morals and not politics. We boast of our liberty, yet you would take the liberty of speech from our preachers. "Oh! consistency, thou art a jewel!" — H. M. J.

The Simple Life

For the best PERFECT HEALTH. The clean brain, the healthy stomach, the bodily organs functioning in harmony, are the first essentials of a Simple Life—
A LIFE OF PEACE AND SATISFACTION.

No one can know the pure delight of simple living whose nervous system is kept in a state of tension by Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Biliousness and other diseases due to inaction of the liver.

The Simple Way to seek the Simple Life is to seek the remedy for these conditions. This remedy has been found in our great product—

ST. JOSEPH'S Liver Regulator

(In Both Liquid and Powder Form.)

It has made life brighter and happiness and peace possible when all was dark and distressed. It reaches the centers of life and purifies them. It encourages the liver, stomach and bowels to a freer and more natural activity.

It is the Simple Way to a Simple Life of Health, Peace, Contentment.

Many persons attest this fact who have realized its truth by actual experience.

St. Joseph's Liquid Liver Regulator is prompt in action, exceedingly palatable and pleasant to the taste. It is sold by drug stores and dealers at 50 cents a bottle.

St. Joseph's Liver Regulator in powder form is put up in light tin boxes and retails at 25 cents a box, five boxes for a dollar. It may be taken dry or made into a tea or bitter. Full directions accompany every bottle and box.

"AN EXCELLENT MEDICINE"

This is what all say who have used St. Joseph's Liver Regulator, whether in liquid or powder form. Its action is easy, but it relieves the system of bilious accumulations thus avoiding constipation and all kindred evils. As a family medicine it has few, if any equals—no superior. Druggists and general dealers sell it, liquid at 50 cents a bottle; powders, in tin boxes, at 25 cents a box, five boxes for a dollar. Don't accept anything else—just as good, but be sure to get St. Joseph's Liver Regulator.

Maplesville, Oct. 4, 1909

Editor Banner—On my entry in the church yesterday I was handed a copy of the Record, the new exponent of the pro amendment forces of Chilton county. As is our custom, we read it carefully, particularly the Editor's bow to the public. We wish to call attention to a few paragraphs of his own article. First, in his second paragraph, let us substitute individual for nation and ask if we should not have a decent respect for those who may differ with us in opinion.

He says the people of Alabama have been the servants of the whiskey king, which is simply putting the epithet to the various officials that Alabama has honored in the past, in a different form from that of the Rev. Brooks Lawrence, the guiding spirit of this fight on their side.

But we started out to call attention to the main reason given for launching the Record, which is that the Banner and Union had tried to keep the people in ignorance of the law. I have seen no evidence of any effort on the part of either to suppress anything, and if there has been anything left out it must have been an oversight and not intentional, and I think that I will be borne out in the declaration that the anti-amendment papers have shown more of a disposition to publish both sides than the pro-amendment papers.

They are making a terrible effort to get the politics out of it. Candid reader, take a retrospective view of events for the past two years, and every pulpit in the land was preaching prohibition. They had laid aside all other sins till this could be disposed of. Next step to get the legislature and governor in line; next, to have lawyers to draw up the bills and have Carmichael introduce one, Fuller one, Ballard one, and would have had one introduced by Sol Bivins from the corners if they hadn't got out of breath. And not satisfied with this, they want you to surrender all the rights you have in your home in order that they can pass some other law which, like the present ones, cannot be understood by its framers. No politics, when the shingles of nine-tenths of the churches have rattled with denunciations of men who dared to lift a voice of protest, while in some instances church members have been asked to either fall in line or get out. Some of our best men have been maligned on account of it, and I think in two instances the prejudices of old issues have been invoked, the reference of Jones having office that should have been Kolb's and the forcing of secession on the people of North Alabama by the people of South Alabama. Is not this politics? One of the reasons claimed is that it was brought about in a non-political year. Too thin, my brother, too thin, when the less informed boast that there are so many against it who have not registered, and we would recommend that if this is strictly a religious question, liquor or no liquor, read the ninth Commandment. If not political, why are Comer and Weakley the central figures? The only speech that I have heard was made by

Comer, in which he had more to say about Comer than he did about prohibition, and at the close he was lauded by some as the greatest governor Alabama had ever had, by others as the only governor.

There is one phase of this contest that can only be deplored by all good men, no matter whether they favor or oppose the amendment, there has been a studied effort to keep women away from the meetings of those who oppose the amendment and we have been classed as arrayed only with criminals. I yield to man in respect to female character, and throughout a life of seventy years I challenge any one to say that I ever offered any discourtesy to one. Then pardon me for saying that the polls at an election is no place for you, and as has been shadowed forth, the purpose for which you are to be used is to distribute lunches, bun-buns and smile your sweetest on the voter. Stay away, this is no liquor fight, but an effort to save you from indignities in your own home.

To the anti's, let me say that it is your province to show yourselves men. Don't get offended at the offer to buy you with a chicken wing and a biscuit. While you may scorn the offer, let her who offers it know that though she has sought to barter with you for the dearest privilege known to the American citizen, yet you are a gentleman and will treat her with respect.

Respectfully,

J. J. L. STEWART.

The Cost of the First Drink

Young men and boys, let me impress upon your minds the cost of the first drink. As we hold in our hand a glass of intoxicating liquor which is to be our first drink, let us first count the cost of drinking it; let us count the cost of introducing into our system this slow poison of death. We are about to take a step that will fasten upon us perhaps a habit that has been the ruin of ten thousand of the world's bright and promising men. Well do we pause before drinking to count the cost. We are counting the cost of a burning brain; counting the cost of a palsied hand; counting the cost of a staggering step; counting the cost of broken hearts and of fear stained pillows; counting the cost of a blighted home; counting the cost of the respect which oozes out at the finger tips as they clasp the sparkling carafe; counting the cost of the degradation and disgrace of a ruined body and a lost soul. What should every young man do in this critical situation? He should count the cost. Now, young men and boys, I, as one who loves you, beg and ask you to beware of the first drink; the man who does this will never be a drunkard.
OLYSSSES DELOACH.

We acknowledge the courtesy of an exchange with the Record, printed at Birmingham and mailed from Clanton. It is a four page paper, and from a prohibitionist's standpoint is fairly well edited, which is more than can be said of some other papers printed at Birmingham.

Amongst other statements it says the proposed amendment to the constitution has not been published in our columns. Quite correct, we were simply waiting for the Governor's proclamation—wanted to have it correct. It will be found in another place in this paper, and we believe the free voters of Alabama will vote it down by the biggest majority ever recorded.

"Had this been done the Record would perhaps not have appeared" is a flimsy excuse; we are under the impression that if it were not for the Governor's proclamation the Record would not have made its appearance; that will pay its expenses for a few issues anyway.

In another place the reverend editor gets somewhat personal, as amateur editors are prone to do. He asks: "What do you know about preachers, anyway?" We know that a conscientious preacher who devotes himself to the service of his Master and the spiritual needs of his congregation has all that he can do, without adding politics to his other professions. That is what his congregation pays him for, and not for political advice.

Again he asks: "Have you built any churches lately?" We have not built any churches lately, but we have contributed to the erection of several places of worship right here in Chilton county, as the good brother may ascertain if he will spare time from his political work and his clerical duties.

Now, having answered these questions, let us ask two in return. "How many churches have you built lately?" and how many have you contributed to? "Just asking, you know—have you, honest?"

Take it all round, however, the Record is a fairly creditable paper, and we wish it such success as it may deserve.

"The people on the other side," declared the Governor, "are saying a great deal about not being allowed to make wine in their own homes. I don't believe many want to make it."

The Governor's first idea is that the law will not be objected to, there being few who are affected by it; and logically, he reasons that it should be objected to if there were many affected by it. Inherently, therefore, according to the Governor's view of it, it is a bad law.

"How many are here who make persimmon beer or blackberry wine?" asked the Governor in expectation of receiving no answer. The chairman, Mr. Knox, and several other persons present, answered that they did so.

"Very well," exclaimed Mr. Comer, "if any of you are convicted under these laws because of making persimmon beer, or blackberry wine, come to your governor, and I'll pardon you!"—Montgomery Advertiser report of Governor Comer's Elmore speech.

Go ahead and break the law, says Governor Comer, and if you are convicted I will pardon you.

From the Advertiser's report of Gov. Comer's speech in Elmore county.

We call attention to the meeting next Saturday—free barbecue and all—if that don't bring a big crowd what will?

Financial and weather conditions combined have produced the most favorable report from the Department of Agriculture on the condition of the cotton crop than has been made at this season for many years.

PRELIMINARY TRIAL OF JOE WILSON

The preliminary trial of Joe Wilson, charged with the murder of Dan Leming at Maple Springs, on Sept. 25th, is attracting much attention, the court house being fairly well filled with an expectant audience.

The trial was started before Judge Reynolds on Tuesday morning, and continued on until Wednesday evening, not being concluded as we go to press. About twelve or thirteen witnesses have been examined so far.

W. M. Adame and J. O. Middleton are the prosecuting attorneys, with Tipton Mullins appearing on behalf of the defendant. The trial will probably be concluded on Thursday.

Congressman W. B. Craig is in receipt of advice that the Bureau of Soils, U. S. Department of Agriculture, under the direction of Mr. Milton Whitney, has just issued bulletin No. 62, "Fertilizers for cotton soils." The purpose of the bulletin is to show what fertilizers are best adapted to the cotton soils, and the effect of certain fertilizers on the crop yields of cotton.

Another bulletin just issued by the Department of Agriculture, and which will be of great benefit to the farmers of this section, is one on the raising of Alfalfa.

These two bulletins will be of inestimable value to the Farmers of Alabama, and Congressman Craig has therefore made arrangements with the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture to furnish the bulletins to any farmer requesting them.

THE AMENDMENT

Section 1. The manufacture, sale and keeping for sale of alcoholic and malt liquors and other intoxicating beverages shall be forever prohibited in this State; but alcohol may be sold for medical, scientific and mechanical purposes, and wine for sacramental purposes, under such regulations as the Legislature may have prescribed or may hereafter prescribe.

Sec. 2. Nothing in the Constitution of Alabama shall be construed to prevent the Legislature under the police power from designating places where such liquors may not be stored or kept.

Mr. F. G. Fritz, Oneonta, N. Y., writes: "My little girl was greatly benefited by taking Foley's Orino Laxative, and I think it is the best remedy for constipation and liver trouble." Foley's Orino Laxative is mild, pleasant and effective, and cures habitual constipation. Upchurch Drug Co.

The church that takes hold of this political question that now confronts the people is going to get "stung." Now this may be doubted by some, but just watch and see if it does not cause coldness among the brethren and a dropping off in attendance. The Press would gladly see them take hold of it if we did not think such a course injurious to religion, and retard the growth of the cause that the church is supposed to build up—Centerville Press.

More Than Enough is Too Much
 To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. For sale by all druggists.

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Matters of Special Moment to the Progressive Agriculturist

The man who relies on luck for the main part of his crop will have an easy time harvesting.

The farmer who thinks he knows all there is to learn about farming has struck 12 and stopped.

The pig's digestive apparatus must be developed to its full capacity before the fattening period begins.

There is such a thing as riding a free horse too hard. He is apt to balk and land the rider in the ditch.

The wise farmer does not tell all he knows at the grocery store, because he is too busy putting his wisdom into every-day practice.

The merchant whose advertisement appears most in the paper gets the biggest trade and the farmer who appears oftenest in his field gets the biggest crop.

A farmer doesn't have to be an artist to paint his house or barn and he doesn't even have to be a professional painter to do it. The cool days of fall provide a good time for doing the work.

Before we get a satisfactory regulation of corporations some plan will have to be evolved by which the evil consequences of their acts will be visited on their beneficiaries—the men higher up.

PEOPLE OR THE RAILROADS

Hearing on Proposed Reduction of Freight Rates Cost People of Texas Over Million Dollars.

By a vote of two to one the Texas railroad commission postponed until February, 1919, the hearing on the proposed reduction in freight rates on cotton. The action of Chairman Mayfield and Commissioner Colquitt, in thus deferring the hearing, in effect, cost the people of Texas over $1,000,000 on the shipment of this year's cotton crop, says Field and Ranch.

A hearing would have shown them entitled to a reduction of this amount. The same action gave the railroad companies the money which was lost to the people. It is said to his credit, Commissioner Williams, the new member, dissented from the opinion of his colleagues.

In offering excuses for delaying the really important matter which came up before the commission, Chairman Mayfield was reported by the daily papers to have said:

In the matter of the proposed reduction in rates on cotton, the railroad commissioners have recently had a conference among themselves and among other things, they have reached the conclusion and this is a unanimous conclusion, that there ought to be a reduction in the rates on cotton as soon as the revenues of the railroads will warrant it. We thought when this case was set down that this condition existed. Some of us have recently been over considerable portions of the state. Individually, I have traveled over the central and northwestern portions in the last ten days, and I don't think I ever saw such a sorry prospect for crops in Texas in my life and I have lived here all my life. The railroad commission has recently, from time to time, during the present year, calendar year, ordered several of the railroads directly interested in the transportation of cotton to make certain extensive improvements in the way of betterment of their physical condition and their equipment. If we cut down their revenues at this time, with the sorry prospect ahead of them, they must forego these improvements. It is not still further curtail their expenditures, which seems to be needed. We expect to reduce the rates on cotton, at least that is our present intention, but at this juncture we believe it best to postpone this matter until the regular term in February next, and the case will be postponed accordingly.

The ruling was greeted by the railroad representatives with cheers.

In another part of the paper, Mr. Summers describes this scene graphically—Read it:

The excuse of the commission is flimsy and easily punctured.

First, crops are short. Who can best bear financial calamity or depletion of income, the unjustly overburdened producers of Texas whose chief source of revenue comes from the short cotton crop, or the wealthy companies whose railroad lines extend throughout the whole nation and who at all times have sections where short crops are not felt?

Should the farmer who has but little to ship this year, pay more for its shipment than such service is worth in order that the railroads' revenues may not be depleted in these times of general distress?

Second, the companies had been ordered to make extensive improvements. What has that to do with a cotton rate hearing when a delay is to nurse an injustice, already many years old?

Third, the commission admits that the rates ought to be reduced. Why, then, should the people have to bear the extra tax, by the continuance of this excessive rate?

One of the Best Means of Promoting Commonwealth's Welfare at This Particular Stage.

Judge E. R. Kone, state commissioner of agriculture, believes in publicity as one of the best means of promoting the state's welfare at this particular stage of its growth, when the eyes of investors from all over the country are directed toward it, says Houston Post. He believes that with the true facts made known about the state there will be a largely increased influx of capital to take advantage of the opportunities for profitable investment to be found within its borders, and that the result will be speedily apparent in the rapid development of the state's agricultural and horticultural interests, to subserve which his department was created and given enlarged powers. He realizes that the state has all to gain and nothing to fear from such publicity—that it is in the lack of a full knowledge of true conditions as they exist that the knockers find their opportunity to do the state temporary harm.

In this connection it may be stated that in all departments of human activity there is in the present age more or less "wildcatting." Men are willing to risk their money in experiments in which the element of risk enters very largely. The result is many instances of disappointment, and in others disaster. Still the experience of "wildcatting" is not wholly lacking in benefits for the public.

Recently an employee of the United States department of agriculture visited the coast country of Texas and in his cursory investigation of the possibilities of the orange industry in the section indicated, made a report to his department which was in a measure unfavorable to this comparatively new industry. This report has aroused a demand on the part of pioneers in the industry who have achieved phenomenal success in the growing and marketing of such fruit, as well as on the part of others competent to judge of actual conditions, for a more thorough investigation by one of acknowledged competency for the work, that all the facts may be made known. In such thorough investigation citrus growers of South Texas and all others interested in the development of the coast country are fearless of results.

In response to this demand and to his own conception of duty in the premises Commissioner Kone has determined to set at rest any issue of doubt that may have been aroused in the minds of the public by the report of the government employee, and to this end announces that he has perfected all arrangements with Prof. H. Harold Hume of Florida, the best known authority on citrus culture in the United States, to make such investigation. Prof. Hume will begin his work of investigation in September and will make an exhaustive study of every phase of the question.

In taking the course above indicated, Commissioner Kone is pursuing a policy of practical publicity which he believes will prove of incalculable benefit to the young and expanding industry in this state, for whatever the character of the report, it will carry with it such weight that future investments in the industry will be made in the light of ascertained facts given the widest possible publicity.

TO MANAGE BEES ON FARM

Italian Varieties Are Preferable Because of Their Quiet and Gentle Disposition.

The Italian bees are preferable because of their gentle and quiet disposition. Keep them in the simplest modern hives, says a writer in Baltimore American. Keep the queens clipped and the tree-climbing nuisance after swarms is eliminated. We usually do not care for more than about a dozen colonies on the farm, therefore discouraging swarming by giving plenty of room for brood raising and for storing surplus. This greatly reduces the swarming impulse, but we will have some swarms every season. But when we do have swarms they will be big ones, and there will be something doing when they start housekeeping.

Strong colonies need little attention, only plenty of room to keep them busy and plenty of stores for winter. You may do a deal of fussing with the bees. It is not necessary for their welfare, but may be for yours. The last thing in the fall is to see to it that they have food enough for winter and in the spring if the food run short give them some. Always unite weak colonies in the fall. Clip the queen early in the spring. Make room for surplus as needed. Use pound sections filled with comb foundation for surplus. Shade the hives in the heat of the summer. Always use a smoker and veil when working with the bees and you can work rapidly and not be annoyed by excited bees and stings. I often meet children eight or ten years old on the farm who never tasted honey. This is a shame. Children are great lovers of sweets, and you compel them to go without or you buy the abominable candy exposed to the dust and germs in the shops and streets while the pure delicious nectar of the garden and field is going to waste. Bees are less trouble and less of a nuisance about the buildings than poultry, and should be kept on practically every farm.

Feed Goings Greets.

Goings enjoy greens, such as lettuce, spinach and clover from the very first day in their coops. When three weeks old they will make their own selection of given rations.

NAVAL AIDE TO THE PRESIDENT

Lieutenant Commander Leigh H. Palmer, U. S. N., who has succeeded Lieut. Willard S. Simms, as naval aide to President Taft.

TARS ARE LACKING

Navy Short 1,500 of Sailors Now Authorized by Statutes.

Force Will Not Be Large Enough to Man New Warships Unless Old Ones Are Laid Up—Injure Young Officers.

Washington.—The navy department is confronted with a probable reduction of the enlisted force through failure to re-enlist on the part of seamen and engineers now in the service, as well as the pronounced decrease in the number of new enlistments. This condition the authorities attribute to the increasing demand for moderate as well as high-priced labor occasioned by the rising tide of business activity throughout the country.

The present authorized strength of the navy's enlisted force is 44,500. The naval authorities had contemplated urging to congress an increase of 5,000 in the next report of the department. It is questioned whether a request for even half that number can receive executive approval.

At the present rate of falling off in enlistments and re-enlistments it is practically certain that there will be less than 40,000 sailormen wearing Uncle Sam's livery on January 1, 1919. Already the navy is 1,500 shy of the authorized strength and the reduction continues day by day.

According to the naval officers, there will not be a sufficient number of men to man the new ships now approaching completion without reducing the crews of the minor cruisers or putting several of the older ships out of commission altogether. They do not approve of laying up the new ships. As fast as completed they will go into commission and into active service.

It is said that even the newest ship when placed "in ordinary" deteriorates much more rapidly than when at sea. This is particularly true of their engines. The only course open to the navy is to send the veteran ships back to the navy yard to be partially dismantled and laid up until the state of the national treasury justifies further increase in the cost of maintaining the navy and the projected increase in the enlisted personnel.

Those most hurt by the enforced retirement of a part of the fighting force are the younger officers of the grade of captain and commander. There will be fewer chances for them to exercise the command rank that has been the ultimate aim of all the hard work up through the grades from midshipman to lieutenant commander.

The vessels most likely to be removed temporarily from the active list are the veterans Oregon, Indiana, Massachusetts, and Iowa. This will relieve the pressure by reducing the necessities of the line of battle fleet in the matter of seamen by over 2,600.

The placing of four or five of the smaller cruisers out of commission would give opportunity for further economizing to the extent of about 1,800 men.

RISKS HIS LIFE FOR GOATS

Man Jumps in Front of Train to Save the Children's Pet Which Had Wandered on Tracks.

Chester, Pa.—At the risk of his own life Charles Dougherty, a young man of Leipsville, jumped in front of an approaching train on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad to save the life of a goat belonging to his neighbor, which had wandered on the tracks. Seeing the animal's danger, Dougherty grabbed the goat from the track as the train was within a few yards of him.

The goat is a general pet among the children of the neighborhood, and knowing that the little ones would be grieved if "Billy" was killed, Dougherty performed the daring act.

Whisky Cask Explodes.

Reno, Nev.—A nearly empty whisky barrel on the sidewalk in Carson City, endangered the lives of four young men. George Robsen, Richard Pope, Will McQuarrie and Russell Lamerton were standing talking when one of them lighted a cigarette and threw the match into the bung hole of the barrel. It exploded, one end going through the balcony over the sidewalk and other parts striking the men. Robsen had two fingernails torn off, Lamerton was hit on the head by a flying stove, Pope was thrown against a large window, breaking it, and McQuarrie was thrown to the ground.

ROBE FOR AMERICAN

Shah's Missing Pearl Garment to Go to Miss Anita Stewart.

Europe Has Mystery in Announcement That American Girl Is to Receive Missing Treasure When She Marries Miguel.

London.—Europe has a mystery in the announcement that Mrs. James Henry Smith has purchased the missing pearl robe of the former shah for her daughter Anita. This is a marvelous garment composed of thousands of pearls, and no trace of it can be discovered in Persia since the shah ceased to rule. The story goes that Mrs. James Henry Smith heard the erstwhile monarch was anxious to dispose of much of his personal property in jewels rather than that they should go to his successor, and that she promptly sent an agent to interview him on the subject, as she desired Anita to have some wedding present the like of which no bride of this century was ever able to display.

The story also says that the gem, the "World of Light," is also in the possession of the mother of the future princess. This she proposed to have set in the center of the amazing tiara which is to be one of the scores of gifts this adoring mother will give to her daughter.

At Tulloch castle, where the bride-elect and Mrs. Smith are now entertaining Dom Miguel, the fiancé, there is a host of French artists in frocks and millinery designing the trousseau. They have brought with them from Paris exquisite silks, satins and brocades, lace and embroideries, hats and cloaks. Mrs. James Henry Smith and her daughter decided that they would not break up their house parties by rushing to and from Paris for the trousseau, so they arranged to bring Paris to Scotland instead.

One whole wing of Tulloch castle has been set aside as a sewing room. Mother, daughter and fiancé run through every morning to inspect the fresh "creations" which have arrived, or to give an order. Several hours each day have to be given up to fitting by the prospective bride. She says she is weary of it and will be thankful when the wedding is over, if only to escape from the tyranny of the dressmakers, whom she considers veritable martinetes.

Mrs. Smith is now more reconciled to the marriage than she was at first and she is throwing herself heart and soul into the preparations. According to present arrangements, the wedding is to take place in London. Although the reigning house of Portugal has been at daggers drawn for years with the family of Dom Miguel of Braganza, young King Manuel and the future bridegroom are the best of friends, and it is expected that the ruler will be present.

The bridal dress is being made after the style of those worn by royal brides with a semi-low cut neck and short sleeves. Lace which belonged to Marie Antoinette and was purchased by the late James Henry Smith for his wife when they were on their honeymoon will compose it.

Pest Spread by Squirrels

Experts Discover They Are More Dangerous in Spread of Bubonic Plague Than Rats.

Washington.—Marine hospital service experts who discovered that ground squirrels are an agent in the spread of bubonic plague on the Pacific coast assert that they are even more insidious and difficult to deal with than the rats that for a time threatened San Francisco and the other large cities.

They seem to have become particularly infected in Contra Costa county, and if given the chance, it is feared, will spread the infection throughout the west.

The ground squirrels have been long a nuisance on the Pacific coast and at various times have caused great damage to crops. The squirrels have been regarded as good eating up till recently. In the regions where they most abound people have salted them down in large quantities for winter, and have regarded their meat as a staple article of diet.

It was discovered during the earlier part of the crusade against plague-infected rats in San Francisco, that the ground squirrel could be infected by the same flea which caused the spread of the bubonic plague among the rats. As early as 1903 the case of one man was noted, in Contra Costa county, who died of the plague without having been in any of the larger towns, but who was known to have been hunting ground squirrels.

Sergt. Rupert Blue of the marine hospital service noted this case, and as other cases developed, suspicion was more and more directed toward the squirrels. First a boy and several other men, who had been hunting them, were attacked by the plague and finally an examination was made showing conclusively that the squirrels were the hosts of the plague-producing flea.

From this time on a war was waged against the ground squirrel and now regular shipments of them are made to the laboratory of the marine health service, in San Francisco, where they are examined as carefully as the rats when there is a suspicious outbreak of the plague.

One hundred and seventy-eight infected squirrels have been discovered, and this alone shows the danger the hunters run in collecting the specimens.

Aged Couple Wed in Boat.

Massillon, O.—Mrs. Anna Devore, aged 62, thrice a widow and for 24 years the occupant of a canal boat, has married Jacob Eckert, aged 78, who for the past eight years has been an inmate of the Soldiers' and Sailors' home in Marion, Ind. The couple knew each other many years ago, but then she would not entertain any proposals of marriage. A second attempt on the part of Eckert to win the woman's love was successful. The couple will reside in the bride's canal boat. She gets $20 a month rent and he draws $20 a month pension from the government. This the bride says will keep them comfortably.

"I don't suppose I ought to be so sensitive," said Mr. Goslington, "but it seems to be the way I'm built. I can stand being snubbed by a man, but it hurts my feelings to be ignored by a woman."

"This morning coming in at a door through which from within I was about to go out was a woman. When I saw her coming I of course opened the door for her as politely as I could and stood back to let her pass."

"Did she as she passed through thank me or graciously incline her head to me or by any token acknowledge my deference to her? By not so much as the bat of an eye or the quiver of an eyelash, she simply ignored me; she passed me by as if I had been the knob on the door instead of the man holding the door open for her."

"Do you know that jarred on me. Hurt my feelings sorter. I don't suppose I ought to be so sensitive, but I seem to be built that way."

A New One About Napoleon.

A "new" story about Napoleon is necessarily doubtful, the probability is that it is simply so old that it has been forgotten. However, here is one that Arthur M. Chuquet gives in L'Opinion as never before published.

It relates to Napoleon and Blucher. The emperor received the general in the castle of Pinkenstein, while he was preparing for the siege of Danzig.

Blucher drew him to a window in an upper story and paid him compliments on his military gifts, and Blucher said: "I am very delighted, described the view from his aide-camp."

"What chance you missed?" exclaimed the latter.

"You might have changed the whole course of history."

"How?"

"Why, you might have thrown me out of the window."

"Confound it!" replied Blucher. "I might! If only I had thought of it!"

Carnations Go to Sleep.

Florida often suffers losses from a habit carnations have of coming "going to sleep" and never opening again. A series of experiments made in the Hull botanical laboratory at Cambridge described in the Botanical Gazette makes it seem probable that the "sleep" is caused by the effect of a luminous gas, to which, even in small quantities, these flowers are surprisingly sensitive.

Standard Oil Walls.

The Standard Oil Company's estate holdings in Haywood, N. C., where its largest oil refining plant is the east is situated, have been fixed upon them in 1908 for taxation to $13,000,000. The company is appealing against the increase fixed upon the realty by the Hudson board of equalization.

For fever patients or those on liquid diet find Grape-Nuts and men water very nourishing and refreshing."

"This recipe is my own and is made as follows: Boak a teaspoon of Grape-Nuts in a glass of water for an hour, strain and serve with a beaten white of an egg and a spoonful of fruit juice for flavoring. This affords a great deal of nourishment even the weakest stomach can assimilate without any distress."

The Christ That Is To Come

By REV. A. C. DIXON, D. D., Pastor of the Chicago Ave. Church, Chicago.

With the Lord, who is to come.

In the chapter of Revelation we read of John's vision of the Christ who was and is to come, the "same yesterday, today, and forever," but revealing himself more fully as the ages go by. John says "a door was opened to me, and I was invited to enter. There he heard and saw things which shall be hereafter."

First of all, he saw a throne and a being whose glorious appearance was like a jasper and a sardine stone. The jasper, as we know it in gold, is of an opaque green color, but we are told in another chapter that what is meant by the jasper is a "clear as crystal" stone. The two together give us a symbol of holiness and righteousness. Holiness means what he is and righteousness means what he does. His character is as clear as crystal and his dealings with all beings in heaven and hell, his righteousness, the red sardine stone which is in his fiery purity against all sin.

Round about the throne is a rainbow of emerald green. The rainbow is a symbol of promise. After the military gifts, and Blucher said: "I am very delighted, described the view from his aide-camp."

"What chance you missed?" exclaimed the latter.

"You might have changed the whole course of history."

"How?"

"Why, you might have thrown me out of the window."

MAN ON THE CORNER

of the Signs He Saw, and Some He

New Met.

Monday was quite a busy day

Clanton when a large crowd of people gathered to hear a discussion

the proposed constitutional amendment, and incidentally to the barbecue provided entertainment.

Children, dressed in white, addressed by Gov. Comer,

then marched to the court house, bearing banners, making a show.

Gov. Comer was here and Mr.

N. D. Benson, to give their views on the advisability of the amendment, but as the Governor declined to take part in a joint discussion, two meetings were held—

one in the court house, with Judge

Comer as chairman, and a large number of ladies and children present, the other on the public square, outside of Cannon's store, at which A. C. Smith presided, and

P. G. Bowman, of Birmingham, was one of his sledge-hammer speeches.

For two hours and a half Judge

Comer, who is well thought of in this county, held forth in an informing way on the benefit to be derived from the amendment, and at three o'clock the meeting closed under the trees on the public square.

THE DANGER OF THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT.

Lawley, Ala., Oct. 11, 1909

Editor Banner—Please allow me

space in your valuable paper to say that no law can be just that prohibits men or women from making domestic wine when that wine is for home consumption. The present law, the Fuller bill, prohibits

this and brands the one that makes this wine as criminals and a subject fit to dig coal or to be placed in the penitentiary. In this broad land of ours there are many good women and good Christians and who hold in abhorrence a law-breaker, that have all their lives been in the habit of making wine at home, and now this proposed constitutional amendment seeks to forever prohibit this and make of that good wife and mother a criminal. We would like for some of these hysterical fanatics to point out one instance where this home practice

ever did any one the least harm.

But now they are trying to place

the good women of this grand old

State on the same plane as common law breakers. This amendment also seeks to prevent any one from keeping whiskey in his house,

whether kept there for medicinal purposes or as a beverage. The reason that good people of this State are lined up against this amendment, men that are life-long temperance people and good probibitionists at that, is because of the drastic nature of the bill they seek to write in the constitution that restricts the liberty of one having whiskey in his home. The question of personal liberty is one that each and every man should have to settle himself, and not give that right to a set of hysterical office seekers and short sighted women. Right now is the time to put our eyes and go slow and be sure we know what we are doing.

There are lots of good men in this old country that are going to vote for the amendment and some day they will be sorry of it if you there is something bad in this thing and you will find it if you live long enough. I plead to everybody to put every vote against it they can. If they succeed in this, the next thing they will try to have a say about what we are to eat. Watch what report was made adverse to postal savings banks, and speeches deprecating

 the entrance of the government into the banking business were delivered.

Next to the Christian New Year, that of the Hebrews is the most generally observed in New York.
 It is one of the boasts of the city that it has more Jews than Palestine, and while a majority of them perhaps have drifted away from the orthodox faith of their fathers, practically all join in the New Year observance.

Writing to his wife's relatives in Missouri that she was dead, asking for $50 with which to bury her and using the money to marry another woman were the "frenzied finance"
 methods attributed to Ernest T.
 Palmer, aged 35 years, motorman
 for the Chicago Railway company.
 The man has been arraigned on a charge of bigamy.

An entire family of six persons was murdered and the bodies of all but one of the victims were burned with their home at Hurley, Buchanan county, Va. The motive evidently was robbery, as the owner of the house, an aged woman known as "Aunt Betty" Justis, was generally supposed to keep a large sum of money about the place.

Judge A. W. Fite of Trenton, Ga., directed H. A. Rucker, United States collector of internal revenue at Atlanta, to show cause why he should not be declared guilty of contempt. This is an outgrowth of the arrest of Charles E. Stegall, United States storekeeper and gauger, who refused to testify before the grand jury in reference to a distillery near Rising Fawn, Ga.

James O'Leary, after serving thirty years in prison for counterfeiting and passing bogus money, was sentenced at Philadelphia to ten years in the federal prison at Atlanta on a similar charge.

All of Edward H. Harriman's

Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America

Matters of Special Moment to
the Progressive Agriculturist

To admit error is to reveal strength.
Thatch the tame hay stacks with marsh hay.

A man without hope is an engine
without steam.

Pastures need cultivation the same as cultivated land.

The farm exists for the man, not
the man for the farm.

Unless you have done your best,
don't be a quitter and say you are satisfied.

Sympathy, happiness and cheerfulness are more than acts, they are part of the individual life.

Pigs that are limited in ration make on the whole more economical gain than pigs that are rushed.

Most American voters must be unconscious of the veto power they possess, they so seldom use it.

"Be contented with your lot" is all right if one has used every effort to make his lot as satisfactory as he can.

The free marketing of wheat early will depress its price without doubt,
and the profits of speculators will come later.

There is a great difference between cackling and crowing. For cackling follows work, while crowing happens
along before anything is done.

Do not quarrel about differences of opinion. Your neighbor may not think as you do about politics or religion and yet be a good neighbor and excellent man.

Sharps do not find farms as profitable fields for working their fraudulent schemes as they once did, judging by the rarity of complaints about such things now-a-days.

BENEFITS OF CO-OPERATION

In Nothing Has It Been of So Much Service as in Farming—Braces Farmer in Various Ways.

In nothing has co-operation been of so much service as in farming writes N. D. Nelson in Farm and Home. To brace the farmer up to raise a full crop of good quality of the kind that is most needed and therefore the best price, that will improve his land by manure and drainage and cultivation, that will improve his stock and bring his intelligence into play, these are the largest benefits that come from association in a farmers' business or organization. Next comes the assembling and manipulation of his crop to put the raw material into shape for the market, one step toward the consumer, one middle man skipped. By this association the benefit of leadership is secured. From the 50 or 100 of 500 constituting the association, five or ten directors are selected for their superior ability and their equal willingness to apply this ability for the equal good of the less able.

There are these two important differences between this co-operation and state socialism—it is voluntary,
each member benefits by his own effort and suffers by his own deficiency.
What men do voluntarily, they commonly do better than what they do by force. By a process of education in voluntary associations, men would become social and find enjoyment in doing not only their own share, but their best for the good of all. They would not do it as they now are and there is no ground for the assertion that they would be suddenly changed by a change in system. Law does not change man, it hardly changes affairs.
New laws intended to check men and corporations from getting rich and others from getting poor have been passed ever since I can remember, but there are bigger millionaires and more renters and hirelings now than ever.

There is the same opening for getting rich by trade and speculation and for staying poor by hiring out for ready money now as there was in the fifties, no more and no less. There is better opening now for starting farming or starting business than there was 50 years ago. I have just completed organizing a farm neighborhood in Louisiana into a co-operative dairy association. Most of these farmers have started there in the last five to fifteen years, with little or nothing and are doing well. Among them are several Norwegians from Minnesota and Wisconsin, every one of whom is prosperous. Only one brought any more means than any industrial worker in town or country can lay up in a few years.

Seed Trust Is Excited.

The seed trust in Texas is somewhat excited over the proposition of the Farmers' union to handle its own cotton seed, and much comment is being made in the newspapers. The oil mills should behave themselves, says
Co-operator. They have gone too far.
Now they must suffer the penalty for their folly and certainly are not deserving of any sympathy from the farmers. These men have over-reached themselves and are now face to face with a condition that they cannot control and are crying out like spoiled children. Let a sufficient amount of cotton pass beyond the borders of Texas and the oil mills will come to their senses.

DIRECT SHIPMENT OF GRAIN

Various Little Details That Must Be Attended to by Farmer to Avoid Unnecessary Loss.

In a speech delivered before the North Dakota Agricultural club recently Mr. Edwin Traynor made the following remarks on the direct shipment of grain by farmers:

There are several methods employed by farmers in disposing of grain. The first of these is selling direct to the country elevator. Most sellers know, to their misfortune, how the farmer is treated there. It is unnecessary to speak of the schemes, tricks and de-ceptions practiced upon thousands of farmers by these companies and their agents. The reader has no doubt noticed how loads have been weighed in correctly, figures manipulated and at every step in the proceedings from weighing the load to handing him his check, at one time or another, the attempt has been made to take an unfair advantage of him. His grain has been docked to an extortionate degree, in almost all cases at least one pound per bushel regardless of how clean it is. This is putting it mildly, but nevertheless it is in marked contrast to the records of the chief inspector of grain in Minnesota which show that for the year ending August 31, 1907, over one-fourth of the grain inspected "on arrival" had a dock-age of one pound per bushel or under.

The next consideration is the margin upon which the elevators buy;
that is the difference, over and above
freight rates, between the price paid by the elevator and at the terminal markets. The margin varies all the way from two to ten or even more cents per bushel, depending on the time of the year and the general quality of the grain that is in the community. In the spring for example, when there is little or no grain being moved and what there is of good quality, the margin is found to be narrow. But in the fall when there is lots of business, or when the grain is damaged, the margins are in most cases widened and then many an unsuspecting farmer sells his crop for ten, 15, or even 20 cents a bushel less than it is worth.

The blame for all this does not rest entirely with the elevator companies or their agents. On the contrary, it rests upon those farmers who year after year unquestioningly dispose of their grain in this fashion. They do not read the papers or study the markets and consequently do not know whether they are being beaten or not.

Strange as it may seem there are many who say that they believe in the advantage of shipping grain but they are not acquainted with the method of procedure in loading and shipping
a car and for this reason feel that it is wisest not to attempt it. The first consideration is to rip up the steps to be taken in shipping a car. In slack seasons one can often procure a car the same day it is ordered, but in times of scarcity of cars one must wait until those who have ordered become supplied, that is, a man must wait his turn. In the majority of cases, however, if one orders several days in advance he will suffer little or no inconvenience in waiting for a car.
The car received, he is allowed 48 hours in which to load it. If he does not load it in that time he is subject to a demurrage charge of two dollars a day.

The first thing to do with a car before loading is to inspect it thoroughly and find all cracks and holes.
These should be covered with cloth and closed tightly so as to prevent all possible leakage. This is important as the owner of grain must stand all loss through leaky cars. Minnesota records show at least one in every 25 cars entering the terminal markets to be in a leaky condition.

Some weigh grain before putting it in the car. That is the best way, but on account of the time and trouble involved the majority do not do it.
However, unless it is done, if anything happens to the car in transit
the shipper will have difficulty in recovering damages from the railroad company as he cannot make affidavit
as to the amount in the car.

Aside from the moral principle involved it is not policy to attempt to doctor or plug a car of grain. However, if one has just a carload of grain in a bin it is best to arrange so that he does not finish out the car with the last load taken out of the bin because that will contain the chaff and dust accumulated from the entire load and when put in the car last, remains at the door or is spread over the top of the car and gives the entire load an appearance of a poorer grade. Of course, the inspector probes the car and examines it elsewhere, but if an inspector opens a car and sees dirty and chaffy grain all over the top, he will have to do a lot more probing than most of them do before he will grade it up for what it is worth.

When the car is loaded it is necessary to go around the outside of it and tap the walls with a hammer to see if it leaks anywhere, and if it does, fix it before sending it on its journey.

Farmers' Union Buys Gin.

The Farmers' union of Titus county,
Tex., has purchased the old gin property in this city known as the Davis gin, and consolidated it with the Hutchings gin just west of town. The Farmers' union will have charge of the gin this season. It is understood that if the union makes a success of the gin from a business standpoint, they will install gin plants in every section in the county.

FIRST DAYS OF OIL

DISCOVERER WAS LAUGHED AT
AS CRAZY.

Had Hard Work to Make Progress in the Value of the New Discoveries
Only About Fifty Years Ago.

Fifty years ago Col. Edwin L. Drake discovered oil on the banks of the creek at Titusville, Pa. Today a host of people, many of them educated, refute the dreams of Columbus by saying, have gathered at Titusville and celebration of the event will be crowned by a banquet at which immense wealth will be represented by New York Mail says.

The story of the finding of oil, which marked a new era in the history of fairs and made possible the modern in automobile and aviation propulsion, reads like a tale of a thousand years. The first discovery of oil was made by a German, Baron von Drake, who had long known of the existence of oil substance, excepting from the rocks in many localities. The springs were sought by Indians as a cure for before the coming of the white man, and the trappers and lumbermen found it had wonderful healing qualities when bound on a wound. Drake scooped it up to lubricate his machinery, also.

Col. Drake was a poorly paid employee of the New Haven road at that quarters. A sample of oil reached him through Prof. Stillman of Yale, who suggested that Drake inspect the place whence the new substance came. He went to Oil creek, backed by seven men, and after walking about the hills studying the rocks and the oil well slowly percolated into shallow pits he conceived a plan to drill and deposit oil.

Drake could not hire well drillers.
He could not find machinery. He had to invent it, and thus devised the only method ever used successfully the millar rocker beam and pipe casing which the sucker rods work.

"Crazy Drake" was the laughing stock of the region. But persistence brought reward when oil was found and Drake knew it could be pumped in paying quantities.

It came too fast, in fact, for there were no tanks. Tight coopeage being necessary, Mrs. Drake traveled all over buying whisky barrels. Then as the tank was built, but there was no market for the oil. No one wanted it. Of this period Mrs. Drake, who is still living in Philadelphia, says:

"At last Col. Drake, persuaded the owner of a store in Titusville to place a row of lamps filled with the oil on his counter. The first night they were lighted the whole town came on the run, thinking the store was on fire. A bright light did they give. You know in those days the sperm of burned tallow and wax and tallow candles gave a very poor light. And this discovery of a new lighting material was as much a step forward as electricity was. We lighted our house with a few lamps and again the people thought the house was on fire. After some months a slight sale began. The household wanted at least one lamp.
Petroleum sold then for one dollar a gallon."

The news spread and the world knew the rest. In a short time mining experiments brought in a salable product, "coal oil" it was called, or kerosene.

White Beer.
In Germany white beer is served in huge glasses of the shape of a champagne glass, but about ten times the size. In fact, the rim of a German beer glass will eclipse any ordinary face. Berlin white beer, which is more frothy than beer, is one of the beverages grouped for esthetic purposes. It is remarkable for freshness. The beer, which has a creamwhite froth when poured out has a peculiar tartness, not exactly acid, like lemonade, but more the acid of the tomato.—New York Tribune

Mad Hard Work to Make People See the Value of the New Illuminant Only About Fifty Years Ago.

Fifty years ago Col. Edwin L. Drake discovered oil on the banks of Oil Creek at Titusville, Pa. Today a host of people many of them enriched beyond the dreams of Croesus by his find, have gathered at Titusville and a celebration of the event will be crowned by a banquet, at which marvelous wealth will be represented, the New York Mail says.

The story of the finding of coal oil, which marked a new era in human affairs and made possible recent marvels of automobile and aeroplane propulsion, reads like a tale of Aladdin. Lumbermen of northwestern Pennsylvania had long known of the heavy black oil oozing from the sandstone beneath the spruce. The spruce was cut by lumbermen as a cure against the rotting of the white pine and the lumberjacks had found a wonderful healing quality when it was used to lubricate their machinery.

Col. Drake was a poorly paid employee of the New Haven road at Titusville. A sample of oil reached him through Prof. Silliman of Yale, who suggested that Drake inspect the place where the new substance came. He went to Oil Creek, backed by several men and after walking about the hills studying the rocks and the oil which slowly percolated into shallow pits he conceived a plan to drill and find deposits of oil.

Drake could not hire well drillers. He could not find machinery. He had to invent it and thus devised the only method ever used successfully, the familiar sucker beam and pipe casing in which the sucker rods work.

Crazy Drake was the laughing stock of the region. But persistence brought reward when oil was found and Drake knew it could be pumped in paying quantities.

It came too fast, in fact, for there were no tanks. Tight coverages being necessary, Mrs. Drake traveled all over buying whisky barrels. Then an iron tank was built but there was no market for the oil. No one wanted it. Of this period Mrs. Drake, who is still living in Philadelphia, says:

At last Col. Drake persuaded the owner of a store in Titusville to place a row of lamps filled with the oil on his counter. The first night they were lighted the whole town came on the run thinking the store was on fire. So bright a light did this give, you know in those days the kerosene oil burned in lamps and wax and tallow candles gave a very poor light. And this discovery of a new lighting material was as much a step forward as electricity was. We lighted our house with a few lamps and again the people thought the house was on fire. After some months a slight sale began. After some months a slight sale began. After some months a slight sale began.

The news spread, and the world knows the rest. In a short time refining experiments brought in a salable product, coal oil it was called, or kerosene.

White Beer.
In Germany, white beer is served in huge glasses of the shape of a champagne glass, but about ten times the size. In fact, the rim of a Berliner glass will eclipse any ordinary glass. Berlin white beer, which is more frothy than beer, is one of the beverages grouped for customs purposes. It is remarkable for frothiness. The beer which has a snow-white froth when poured out, has a peculiar fatness, not exactly acid, like lemonade, but more the acid of the lemonade. New York Tribune.

DRIVING out the beautiful avenue of Santa Fe, that practically begins at the Plaza San Martin, and after a due western extension of some 500 yards, bends to the north-west and follows roughly the course of the La Plata for a distance of three miles (49 squares), the entrance to the Botanical garden of Buenos Aires is reached. Beyond this lies the Zoological garden, and still farther on the Park of Palermo. From both of these the Botanical garden is distinguished by a refined and artistic and a really marvelous blend of the beautiful and the useful.

In 1892 this land was granted to the director general of the city parks, M. Thays, for the establishment of the Botanical garden, and the garden was opened to the public in September, 1898. One must know something of the soil and the climate here to understand how, with a masterly hand at the helm, such marvels have been accomplished in so short a time.

Certain students of medicine and pharmacy from the National college, and other schools of the city, frequent the garden and spend hours in interesting study. Indeed, they have a rich field from which to glean, as here, in what is called the School of Botany, over 6,000 species, all perfectly classified according to the system of Candolle.

The garden contains about 20 acres of ground, half of which is level, the other half very uneven and ending on the northern side in steep banks set overlooking the street, Las Lleras. This street is named in honor of the hero, whose ashes were recently brought home from Chile, and received with such pomp and ceremony by his appreciative countrymen. The entire area is triangular in form and is divided into 14 different sections, each plainly marked and devoted to the flora of a distinct region.

The three pronounced styles of gardening, which in a comparatively small area might have produced an inharmonious effect, or at least a lack of unity, are so charmingly blended together, instead, the fine delight of variety. The garden, Louis XIV is, of course, the pretentious bit; the "finished coquette," as one calls it, with its statues and fountains and its well-trimmed borders of box. It is not to be inferred that the French garden is official (except as this is the usual character of gardens), for there is, both in this and the Roman garden, a whole history written for those who know how to read it. It is not to be inferred that the French garden is official (except as this is the usual character of gardens), for there is, both in this and the Roman garden, a whole history written for those who know how to read it.

Not only are the two Americas royally represented, but Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia as well. These sections are separated by beautiful walks with exquisite curves and corners, here a magnificent tree, there a flowering shrub, everything in accordance with artistic taste.

The South American section, particularly Argentine Republic, the collection is beautifully complete, and exceedingly varied and interesting, from the Anthurium of the Tropics to the Fagus Antarcticus of the south. A species of acacia, is chief of the ornamental trees, when properly cared for, it is a beautiful, shapely tree. The leaf is like that of the locust, and the blossom, though of the same form as the locust, is a brilliant yellow instead of white. The tree of this tree has gone abroad. One of Rio de Janeiro's most beautiful avenues is, in part, lined by tipas. France, too, now boasts of fine specimens. It grows in any soil. Its bark contains an insect poison that is invaluable to these enemies.

The quebracho (ax-breaker) is a leguminous tree, also, and is the most valuable and costly of Argentine woods. Its color is a dark, reddish-brown and it is so hard and heavy that it is like iron. It is much used for all kinds of purposes, also in tanning, and is highly prized by shipbuilders, as the water does not injure it.

Several varieties of the algarrobo grow here, the province—San Luis—not only are the seed pods on the long pods, but the poorer people find them a nourishing food. The yacaranda is another ornamental tree, admired for its fern-like foliage and beautiful purple-blue flowers.

The mahogany tree is a native of the province of Buenos Aires, and there are several specimens in the garden, with the characteristic bifurcated leaf. The blossoms appear in summer; they are white, and in form resembling like a small magnolia bloom.

The naranjilla, from one of the northern provinces, attains great size and is of unusual value to the people. The pith is edible and is cooked and served in many ways. The bark is made into casks and barrels. As the tree sometimes has a diameter of more than a meter, one length of bark serves for a cask. The paradise tree and the celiba are great favorites; the former, on account of its rich purple flowers, the latter on account of its brilliant red ones. This is said to have been the favorite tree of Rosas.

There is a beautiful large tree from Misiones, the celiba, whose delicate leaves are very like snailshells, just a shade darker and thicker. The really ugly tree of the garden is the palo borracho (drunken stick), with a shapeless, swelled trunk, covered with thorns, and having small, irregular branches. It is, however, very useful, as it furnishes a species of vegetable silk.

In the Tierra del Fuego section, or subsection, there is a most lovely araucaria, a fine dark green, except the tips of the branches, which are of a softer, lighter color. The leaves really seem a sort of developed thorn.

Of all the Argentine trees, the ombu is the most remarkable, with its thick, soft bark, its spongy wood, its dense foliage, and long clusters of white blossoms. It is of rapid growth and attains an enormous size. The soil here is too rich for it; so, in self-defense, its immense roots, after a few years, seek the surface. The older trees have numerous little tender branches that spring directly from this surface root and grow straight up through the thick branches, trying to reach the light. There is one in the garden, eight years old, with a height of 50 feet and a diameter of three. At about two feet above the ground the trunk divides into two smaller trunks, each sending off long, straight branches. Its roots are just beginning to appear. It is an ideal tree for a children's playground, with possibilities for climbing about and even for keeping house among its hospitable branches.

The section of acclimatization is very interesting. Here may be seen the result of assiduous efforts to cultivate various exotic as well as indigenous plants. One very notable success has been that of the cultivation of the yerba mate of Paraguay. After a number of fruitless efforts M. Thays succeeded by the following method: The seeds were placed in water almost boiling hot; every six hours the hot water was renewed. This was kept up for four days; then the seeds, three in number, were pressed out of their little sheath and planted in a special soil, covered to a certain depth and kept constantly moist. Six months' time, and even a year in some instances, was needed for the sprouting. When the plants grew to be 2 1/2 inches high they were placed in separate pots; when 12 inches, they were planted in the garden, where some of them have now reached a height of 12 feet. What is particularly promising is that the seed from these plants will grow without any special preparation. There has been some discussion as to whether many kinds, with an occasional royal cedar towering above. Where a bit of the great Sahara is pointed out it requires a stretch of the imagination to see more than the oases.

Australia is extensively represented. There are 60 different varieties of eucalyptus in this section and the saltbushes are no longer allowed in the main part of the garden, though the gardeners still seem proud of the ugly, straggly bushes. They grow prodigiously in this soil, and thrive in any. The Australian variety has a thicker, more succulent leaf than the others.

Besides the sections mentioned, there is one for industrial and medicinal plants, the section of fruit trees, and still another section devoted to the various methods of reproduction, whether by seed, grafting, or budding.

There are also two conservatories. One of them is beautiful and almost new. The older one was awarded a premium in the Paris exposition of 1889, both for its artistic construction and for the excellent arrangement for heating and ventilating its three divisions, which are kept at a temperature of 35 deg., 18 deg., and 12 deg., respectively. The substantial building is an inheritance from the department of agriculture, which formerly occupied this plot of ground. It contains the residence of the director, various offices, and a small museum.

Agricultural explorers who have visited the most famous botanical gardens of both the Old and the New Worlds have written of this one in words of highest praise and appreciation.

Buenos Aires has reason to be proud of its botanical garden, not only because it is one of the richest and most varied in the world, but because of the persistent effort made here to cultivate to the utmost the plants and trees indigenous to the country.

The Last Man Ashore.
It was now nearly half a minute past this big steamboat's sailing time and she hadn't started yet. Usually she got away on the stroke of the minute. The cause of the trouble was clear.

Up the gangplank which had been held that half minute for him came a man, a tolerably big and stalwart sort of man, who had not heard or had not heeded the warning given five minutes before in every part of the boat for all to go ashore that were going. But at last up the gangplank he came, a solitary figure in the plank's wide, long space, and with all the passengers lining that side of the boat looking down upon him with interest, while forward, with his hand on a bell pull at the side of the deck, stood the captain, ready to give the signal in the engine room the instant that man stepped off the gangplank and the plank was hauled ashore.

And so that last man to go ashore passed up the gangplank, not looking up, but not hurrying, walking calmly, while everybody on the boat looked down, and while at the same time there stood at either side of the plank and with their hands resting upon the top rails six stalwart and able-bodied longshoremen, ready to lift the plank and surge it shoreward about as soon as this gentleman stepped off it, which they did. They let him get about a foot clear of it and then they lifted it, and with the first surge they gave it brought up against his heels.

Whereupon the last man ashore turned with fire in his eye and with an evident desire to lick somebody, and he was an able-looking man. Undoubtedly he could have licked somebody, perhaps two, but the briefest reflection told him that he could not get away with the 12 longshoremen that he now saw smiling at him, whereupon again he turned, now smiling himself, and started on, while in the meantime the instant the gangplank was cleared the captain on the boat had yanked that bell pull and the last line had been cast off, and now the boat too, though fully 40 seconds late, was at last on her way.

Of orchids there are some lovely specimens. The representative flora of the Old World deserves extended space, Europe almost suggesting a World's fair, with here a bit of Spain or Italy, there of Norway, and still farther on a glimpse of Germany. Asia is not more interesting, but more unusual than Europe. There is, of course, the bamboo, with its suggestion of marvelous tales, and from the north a bush covered with lovely white flowers, a sort of spirea. Among the Japanese trees is the ginkgo, with its small and graceful fan-shaped leaves.

Another Operation Avoided.
Chicago, Ill.—I want women to know what that wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has done for me. Two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation, and I never thought of seeing a well day again. I had a small tumor and female troubles so that I suffered day and night. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it made me a well woman. Mrs. ALVENA STERLING, 11 Langdon St., Chicago, Ill.
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ill, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to many suffering women.

The constitution needs no amending, and should only be amended at the persistent call of the people, and not be tinkered to please a few politicians. To vote for the amendment is to shackle your freedom; to throw open your dwelling at the instance of everyone who imagines there may a little liquor therein. A vote against the amendment is to retain your freedom and self-respect. When the constitution requires any amendment the people will call for it—and until they do, let it alone.

The opponents of ratification take the position that the amendment should not be ratified for two main reasons. They say, in the first place, that at present there are all the prohibition laws that are necessary in that state; they say that with the enforcement of the drastic enactments already in effect there is nothing left to be desired by the most ardent prohibitionist. They also argue that section 2 of the proposed amendment, which gives the legislature power to designate places where liquor may not be stored, if ratified, places it in the power of the law-making body to say that a man shall not have the right to keep liquor in his private residence. They say that this would be an infringement upon the personal liberty of every Alabamian. They make other arguments along the same line.—Columbus Enquirer-Sun.

The wealth and industry of northern Alabama have been built up largely on its rich deposits of coal and iron ore, the output of coal mined during the year 1908 being over 11,000,000 tons.

The forest products of this district are chiefly used for mining purposes. The greater part of the forest area is covered with a mixed growth of hickories, oaks, loblolly and shortleaf pines. Longleaf pines occurs on rather restricted areas on the higher slopes and ridge tops. Pure stands of loblolly are frequent upon abandoned fields, but occupy only a small part of the forest.

In the lumbering operations of the past the one object has been to get the required amount of timber at the lowest possible expense. Contractors sent into the woods, under no supervision, cut only the choicest, straightest trees which would give them most profit. Very high stumps and long, unused tops characterized their work.

Waste in all forms of lumbering has been extensive and in few cases has any provision been made to conserve the young growth upon which depends a second crop. Few or no seed trees have been left, and the annual recurring fires either prevent entirely, or seriously injure reproduction. Most of the black jack oak thickets that a ring up after the pine is cut are a direct consequence of there being no pine seed trees, or of the destruction of the pine seedlings by fire.

Already the thoughtful men connected with the mining operations of the district are taking steps toward closer utilization and better management. Some mining companies are making plantations of catalpa and loblolly pine, adopting measures to prevent fires, cleaning up tops, and making improvement thinnings. While these efforts have in some cases failed, owing to a lack of technical forest knowledge, they indicate a growing sentiment in favor of better management of timberland.

The Tennessee Coal, Iron, and Railroad Company, the largest operator in this district, is among the first to adopt plans for forest preservation. In cooperation with the United States Forest Service it is about to erect a treating plant for creosoting a large part of its mine timbers and railroad ties. It has undertaken a plan for extensive forest conservation. Five members of the Forest Service recently spent several months on the property of this company and are now preparing a report which will give, besides a careful estimate of the amount of timber, a system of management for the forest and a plan for fire protection.

PUBLIC SPEAKING

There will be addresses against the proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama at the following times and places:

Oct. 16th, Maplesville at 11 o'clock a.m.
Oct. 18th, Fairview, at 7 p.m.
Oct. 23rd, Cooper, at 11 a.m.
Oct. 23rd, Fletcher, at 7 p.m.
A. C. SMITH,
Chairman Campaign Committee.

FLARE OF FIRE WORKS AT ALABAMA STATE FAIR.

The Alabama State Fair, October 11-20, has procured the most magnificent display of fireworks that has ever been invented. It represents the work and thought of mechanical geniuses, the outlay of thousands of dollars in experiments, and will startle the eye with its wonderful brilliance. Thousands will gasp in surprise under the light of another world.

Don't forget the Alabama State Fair October 11-20! The greatest show for the least money. Cheap rates on every railroad. Everything absolutely new. A thrill at every turn, and two turns at half price. Hurry, hurry! Get Ready to Go to Birmingham for a Big Time!

The preliminary trial of Joe Wilson for the killing of Dan Leming was brought to a close last Thursday, and he was committed to jail without bail.

Mr. Ira Whittier and wife of Jamison were visitors here Monday. Mr. Wren Freeman of Wetumpka is visiting his aunt, Mrs. Haynes.

Mr. Stokely Caudle of Anniston was here Saturday. The best line of post cards ever brought to Clanton at Upchurch Drug Co.

They vitalize every organ and build up brain and body. J. A. Harmon, Tazewell, W. Va., writes: "They are the best pills I ever used." 25c. at Upchurch Drug Co.

AN OLD OFFENDER CAPTURED.

Sherriff J. S. Catts, and Detective Lyon, reached Birmingham Friday night, having in custody Jim Hardin, a negro, charged with the murder of James Davenport, a white man, at Maplesville. They were enroute to Clanton.

The killing, which is said to have been particularly atrocious, occurred in October, 1903, since which time Detective Lyon has been on the trail of Hardin. The man-hunt has led through the West and into Mexico, thence into Louisiana, Florida, and Georgia, the negro many times eluding the officer when he was thought hemmed in, and sometimes for months all trace of him was lost. Recently he was located in a remote section of Alabama and after a still-hunt the climax came in his capture near Centre. The officers were much elated over the capture.

The prisoner was lodged in the Jefferson county jail Friday night and was taken to Clanton on an early train Saturday.

Mr. F. G. Fritz, Oseonto, N. Y., writes: "My little girl was greatly benefited by taking Foley's Orino Laxative, and I think it is the best remedy for constipation and liver trouble." Foley's Orino Laxative is mild, pleasant and effective, and cures habitual constipation. Upchurch Drug Co.

THE AMENDMENT.

Section 1. The manufacture, sale and keeping for sale of alcoholic and malt liquors and other intoxicating beverages shall be forever prohibited in this State; but alcohol may be sold for medical, scientific and mechanical purposes, and wine for sacramental purposes, under such regulations as the Legislature may have prescribed or may hereafter prescribe.

Sec. 2. Nothing in the Constitution of Alabama shall be construed to prevent the Legislature under the police power from designating places where such liquors may not be stored or kept.

Foley's Honey and Tar clears the air passages, stops the irritation in the throat, soothes the inflamed membranes, and the most obstinate cough disappears. Sore and inflamed lungs are healed and strengthened, and the cold is expelled from the system. Refuse any but the genuine in the yellow package. Upchurch Drug Co.

ALL-DAY SINGING

There will be an all-day singing at the court house, Clanton, on the third Sunday in October. Everybody invited. R. J. LANGSTON.

Your cough annoys you. Keep on hacking and tearing the delicate membranes of your throat if you want to be annoyed. But if you want relief; want to be cured, take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Sold by all druggists.

YOUNG MEN WANTED

GOVERNMENT PAYS FROM $800 TO $1000 A YEAR. NO LAY-OFFS. FREE SCHOLESHIPS ARE OFFERED.

Railway mail clerks, postoffice clerks, city carriers, rural mail carriers wanted.

Examinations in the vicinity of Clanton soon. Short hours, salary twice monthly, annual vacation and life position.

Thousands of appointments are to be made. Common education is all you need; city and country people have equal chance and political influence is unnecessary. Free scholarships during October and November. No time to lose, write to Central Schools, Dept. 963, Rochester, N. Y.

More Than Enough Is Too Much

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. For sale by all druggists.

saw not.

Monday night for a short time

wrong at the electric light and the town was in darkness.

Soon remedied, however,
the darkness was lightened.

Hilary A. Herbert, the cele-Alabama statesman, who Secretary of the Navy in the
of Grover Cleveland, Pres-
of the United States, declared

the second section of the Amendment contrary to the fundamental idea of the
of the Anglo-Saxon home,

the Legislature to au-
search without even making.

Senator Henry Reese, who
the amendment, admitted the
in the second section of the amendment by declaring in a speech

at Birmingham: "Had I framed constitutional amendment bill
I would have changed the section so as to have eliminated the home."

long ago, the Birmingham
the leading daily news-advocating the amendment, fully remarked: "There is the remotest danger of a repeal prohibition law."

These three quotations
from authoritative sources show that this is not an of "Saloon or no Saloon," as some are trying to force it,

a question of whether it is necessary at this time to prohibition in the constitution.

That the prohibition
will not be repealed, the vote of the efforts of Books

ting the organic law of this greatest objection lies in the iniquity of section two amendment. And voters remember that if they vote against the amendment they will vote for all of it. Section two is the horn and the amendment. Around the amendment is centering.

the legislature did, there is no
what extremes the lawmakers will go to enforce prohibition for a law which would destroy a picture of a whiskey bottle, would it be a stretch of imagination to say that the legislature might, if given the power, enact a law prohibiting the keeping the real artifact of the home, which a might take away from the home. The authority to destroy a house in search even of a bottle of whiskey would not be given the legislature. In their zeal legislatures have done worse things than search of the homes

It was agreed that Mr. Coleman should open the debate and he spoke for an hour and ten minutes, making the burden of his attack on the amendment, the contention that it was an attempt to interfere with the sanctity of the home, which, the speaker said, should be strongly fought against by every voter.

Senator Reese was given an hour and twenty minutes to make reply, and took up the greater portion of his time in arguing for temperance and prohibition. In the course of his remarks he declared that he would have eliminated the home
from the proposed amendment.

In his rejoinder Mr. Coleman thanked him for this statement, and said that there could not have been a better argument advanced for the defeat of the measure. This brought the audience to its feet and there was wild applause, lasting for fully ten minutes.

When quiet had been restored
Mr. Coleman thanked his audience for its careful attention, and was about to retire from the speaker's stand when there was another sensation.

One of the men in the audience recognized as a supporter of the amendment, asked Mr. Coleman if he would not take a vote on the question of the amendment before the audience dispersed. The request came from one of the amendment supporters, and and therefore
Mr. Coleman did not like to decline.

The audience had started from the grove, but the speaker called the people back, asking that they be seated for a few moments.

This they readily did. Mr. Coleman then asked all those who were in the audience who were opposed to the amendment, and who would vote against it, to stand up. Out of that audience of now nearly 400 people, there were only a few who remained seated.

On the way to the depot the Montgomery lawyer was given quite a reception, and as the train left the depot he was cheered.

Editor Banner—Please allow me
space for a few words on the most important subject, prohibition.

There are so many things said that are untrue, for nothing can be said in favor of whiskey. I am not surprised at any argument the devil or a grog-shop man could bring,
but I am surprised to hear of church people pleading for whiskey.

Well, a gentleman from near Law-ley says the good mothers could not make a little wine at their homes without being in danger of prosecution. Well, well, a mother that has lay awake as many nights on account of whiskey as his wife and mother have could not want to make much wine, and could not keep it for him if they were to make it. Oh, how could a mother want to make or keep wine in their house when it causes so much tears and trouble? These are the kind of men that want whiskey. All the advocates of whiskey that I have seen are wicked, bad men—most of them sons. Well, this class of men can not do without it, they think.
So let them work for it if they want

The Museo mines were first made known to the Spaniards through Capt. Juan Perez and the first scientific examination was made in 1764 by Jose Antonio de Vallegas y Avello who rediscovered the large vein that had appeared and arranged for its exploitation. Prior to this, however, Francisco Tobarado worked the mines and presented the king of Spain with a necklace containing 250 grams valued at that time at $10,000. Organization in the mines was carried on under contract with the Spanish government until 1793, when they were rented at public auction.

Gov. Comer in a speech recently at Clanton said to the voters of Chilton: "You must be skunks and cowards if you do not stand by me in this fight."

Having made the greatest blunder of his life in forcing this issue on the people of Alabama, he says you must be skunks and cowards if you don't stand by him.

The Governor will learn at the election next month that Chilton is full of "skunks and cowards."

The report of the meeting at Clanton on the 9th inst., published in the Record (printed at Birmingham) was, let us be charitable and say, highly polished. The court house meeting had a high polish on it, but the outside meeting had the gilding rubbed off. Those who were present and who may have seen the account will know what value to put upon it.

The Weogucka Baptist Association, composed of good, honest, sensible men, honored itself by declining to indorse a resolution of the political amendment to the constitution. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

The extent to which some men will allow their prejudices to mar their judgment and good manners was illustrated at a recent meeting at Jemison when a speaker declared that the "trash" of Clanton was the representatives of Chilton county at the Montgomery convention in opposition to the constitutional amendment.

The "trash" of Clanton includes such well known men as Tipton Mullins and W. H. Foshee, two as good men as Chilton ever produced, not to mention others, and we hope the speaker referred to will remember this in future and curb his propensity for saying things which he cannot possibly mean. For our part we can charitably pray "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do."

Congressman W. B. Craig, the excellent representative of this district, announces that after this term he will not seek re-election, giving as his reason the pressure of private business. Mr. Craig has made a good representative, and looked well after the interests of his constituency. We shall be sorry to lose him, and hope he may yet reconsider his decision.

"Selma, Ala., Oct. 16
"Mr. Curran S. Goodwin, Anniston, Alabama.

"My Dear Curran:—
"Replying to your favor of the 15th inst., inquiring whether or not I will be a candidate for re-election to Congress at the next election, and referring to our conversation in Washington last March, in which I told you that I would not run for re-election, I beg to say that I have not changed my mind upon the subject since that time, and that I shall again enter the practice of the law at the expiration of my present term in Congress.

The reason for my decision, as stated to you before, is that I do not feel able to give up my private business pursuits entirely; and I find that I must give them up if I am to remain in politics longer than my present term in Congress. I have practically a whole term yet to serve, and in that time I think I can accomplish considerably more than I have already accomplished.

"You know how deeply I have always been interested in the opening of the Coosa River to navigation, and the development of its water power. At the last session of Congress I succeeded in getting a navigation and water power survey ordered for both the Coosa and the Tallapoosa. I believe that when the next river and harbor bill passes, I will be able to obtain an appropriation upon which to begin the actual work of opening the river to navigation. And that something definite concerning water power on all navigable streams may be looked for in the near future, I have no doubt.

"With the Coosa river work fairly begun; large appropriations for maintenance on the Alabama river in my district secured, a substantial government building provided for in Tallapoosa; soil surveys secured for several of my counties; an Irrigation Experiment Station in progress in Dallas county, together with other agricultural work inaugurated and well under way, and a large number of rural free delivery routes established during my two terms in Congress, together with other work, either accomplished or under way, I shall be willing to retire.

"In my work in Congress I have uniformly received the hearty support of my constituents; and my friends, who by their votes made it possible for me to go to Congress, have never faltered in their loyalty to all of them I am now, and always shall be deeply grateful.

"Another source of gratification to me is the fact that I have remained in Congress without opposition, and that, so far as now appears, there is no opposition to my re-election for another term. Of such a disposition on the part of the people in my district I can never be too appreciative, and I trust that my work as their representative has been as satisfactory as this would seem to indicate. It has certainly been pleasant work for me,—made so by as intelligent and considerate a constituency as any representative ever had.

"Feeling sure that you will not object, I shall take the liberty of making this letter public, in order that my intentions may be known to the district, and that there may be ample time for the selection of my successor.

"Sincerely your friend,
"W. B. CRAIG."

THE AMENDMENT.

Section 1. The manufacture, sale and keeping for sale of alcoholic and malt liquors and other intoxicating beverages shall be forever prohibited in this State; but alcohol may be sold for medicinal, scientific and mechanical purposes, and wine for sacramental purposes, under such regulations as the Legislature may have prescribed or may hereafter prescribe.

Sec. 2. Nothing in the Constitution of Alabama shall be construed to prevent the Legislature under the police power from designating places where such liquors may not be stored or kept.

YOU'LL

be pleased to see the new colors and swell patterns which are shown this season in our HART SCHAFFNER & MARX clothes. It's going to be another lively season: with many smart fashions in weaves and model; new ideas in young men's styles; new snappy pockets, and finish-of-sleeves.

Many men who are older will want this younger stuff; some of it is a little extreme, but we have good styles for everybody.

We want you to see the new Tans, Grays, Olives, Browns; the Fine Blue Serges, and Dressier Fabrics; want to show you the new ideas in Fall Overcoats.

Ladies!

We have a beautiful line of light weight suitings for fall, don't fail to see them before they are all gone we have some excellent values at 12½ to 25¢ per yard.

Nice line of wool and silk goods on hand.

We also have a store chuck full of new every-day-staples that have just arrived, we are selling them on last year's prices when cotton was $8 and 9¢ per pound; better buy early this time everything you need for fall and winter in cotton goods, prices will be much higher when this present stock is gone.

Have you noticed our Collars, Belts, Gloves, Laces, Embroidery?

When you want a real swell pair of Shoes come to this store and save walking; Tans, Green, Oxblood, Vici, Patent Leather.

A glance at our SHOW WINDOWS will convince you that this line of Clothing is in a class by itself; if you do not see the particular shade or model you are looking for in the Show Windows, step inside and let us show you, as it is impossible for us to put all the different styles that we carry in the Show Windows; every Suit that's not right, or not satisfactory, we are authorized to refund your money. Is it possible to guarantee anything higher?

It is also about time you were fitting yourself up with your Fall Hat, Shirts, Collars, Ties, Fancy Vest, Underwear, etc.

Wagons, Buggies, Surries, Harness of all descriptions, International Harvester Co's line of Farm Machinery, including Gasoline Engines

If you have Cotton to sell, we are glad to buy or help you sell it; and if you have anything to buy, all we ask is a chance to show you.

Mild Laxative for Baby Free

The child of today is the parent of the future, and whether it grows up healthy and strong, or puny and weak, depends upon the intelligence of its parents, for most children are born into the world healthy, but thousands become future weaklings between birth and the age of ten, when the parents are still in greatest control.

The prime cause of trouble in the stomach, is a baby that is digesting its food without any aid, and always looks cheerful, the little child whose stomach is good, jumps and plays and never whines; the growing child learns well at school and is eager for fun if its head is clear and its stomach light, and that means it has no constipation.

The best and safest way to cure any irregularity of the stomach and bowels in children is by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a liquid laxative wonderful in its effect, as Mrs. John W. Dunham, Apple Creek, O., Mrs. H. L. Cullen, Plainville, Ind., and numerous others can testify who give it to their children with extraordinary results.

A bottle only costs 50 cents or $1 according to the size you want, and even one 50-cent bottle will do a wonderful amount of good in a family. It can be given to any member of the family in constipation, sour stomach, indigestion, torpid liver, dyspepsia, heartburn, sick headache and similar digestive troubles. It never grips or strangles like pills, tablets, salts and powders, which should not be given to children, women or old folks.

If you have a child or other member of the family who needs, but has never used this grand laxative tonic, send your name and address to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent to your home. In this way you can find out what it will do without personal expense.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 100 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Kodol

For Dyspepsia and Indigestion

If you Suffer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gas on the Stomach, Belching, Sour Stomach, Heart-burn, etc., a little Kodol will Relieve you almost Instantly

Kodol supplies the same digestive juices that are found in a healthy stomach. Being a liquid, it starts digestion at once. Kodol not only digests your food, but helps you enjoy every mouthful you eat. You need a sufficient amount of good, wholesome food to maintain strength and health. But, this food must be digested thoroughly, otherwise the pains of indigestion and dyspepsia are the result. When your stomach cannot do its work properly, take something to help your stomach. Kodol is the only thing that will give the stomach complete rest. Why? Because Kodol does the same work as a strong stomach, and does it in a natural way.

So, don't neglect your stomach. Don't become a chronic dyspeptic. Keep your stomach healthy and strong by taking a little Kodol. You don't have to take Kodol all the time. You only take it when you need it. Kodol is perfectly harmless.

Our Guarantee
Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains five times as much as the fifty-cent bottle. Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

Pain in Heart

"For two years I had pain in my heart, back and left side. Could not draw a deep breath or lie on left side, and any little exertion would cause palpitation. Under advice I took Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and Nervine. I took about thirteen bottles, am in better health than I ever was, and have gained 14 pounds."

MRS. LILLIE THOMAS,
Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

For many years Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy has been very successful in the treatment of heart troubles, because of its tonic effect upon the heart nerves and muscles. Even in severe cases of long standing it has frequently prolonged life for many years after doctors had given up all hope, as proven by thousands of letters we have received from grateful people.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold by all druggists. If the first bottle fails to benefit, your druggist will return your money.

LET THE PEOPLE RULE

VOL. XVIII

CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1909

No. 4

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

One of the Rights No Law, and Some No
New Mot.

A good principle may be pushed to an injurious extreme; true reform stops short of revolution.—
Martin in the Congressional Library at Washington.

The appointment for speaking at Clanton last Thursday, by the amendments was a signal failure. The speaker for the amendment, Rev.
G. T. Harris, of Birmingham, was accompanied from Verbena (where he got off the train) by Dr. Caffey to Clanton, where only one man met them.

On the same date, they had an appointment at Union and only seven met the speakers there, consequently there was no speaking at this place. It should be suggested to the amenders to let the anti-amendments make the appointments so as to get the voters out.

The speaking at Thorsby last Friday was a "score" against the amendment. D. Henry Riddle spoke against adopting the amendment, and Rev. G. T. Harris in favor of it. Mr. Riddle condemned the intermeddling by the church with state politics, and declared that all history proves that a union of church and state has been destructive to both. Rev. Harris understood to uphold the union of church and state by saying that such conditions existed in England, Germany, France and Spain, and that in some respects those are the greatest nations in the world.

Mr. Riddle's speech was enthusiastically received by the voters, there being about four against the amendment to one for it.

The speakers at Cooper last Saturday, Col. Alex Troy against the amendment, and J. O. Middleton in favor, received profound attention for about two hours from about fifty voters, the majority of those expressing themselves being against
the amendment.

FIRE AT CLANTON

Tuesday night, about seven o'- clock, the shrieking of whistles and ringing of bells alarmed the good people of Clanton, and a glow in the sky showed a fire in progress.
The warehouse belonging to Mr.
Q. Wade and occupied by M. F.
Johnson & Sons, a frame building, bordered with iron, bordering on the railroad and next to Wade's new warehouse, was in a blaze and was rapidly destroyed. By hard work and willing hands Wade's warehouse suffered little or no injury.

The contents of the building were completely destroyed and consisted of bags, farming implements and other goods. The loss on stock is about $1,500, and is partially covered by insurance to the amount of $1,000. The building was worth about $300, no insurance.

Colonel Bowman, speaking at Clanton, said:

This amendment proposition was hatched in a secret caucus in Montgomery at which were Gov.
B. Comer, the Rev. Brooks Lawrence, F. M. Jackson, state campaign manager of the amenders, and W. Sibley of Birmingham and others. At this meeting the question of submitting the amendment to the constitution was brought up.
The submission of the scheme this was opposed by Brooks Lawrence. They will beat us certain."
Brooks Lawrence said. But Fred Jackson spoke up, saying, "If we oppose the election until next year in spite of the enormous unnecessary expense which, in view of the scarcity of funds in the treasury, is a serious blow to the people of the state.

"And it is false when they state that the election was called for this in order that it might be disasso-ciated from candidates for office.
They who make such statements know they are false."

Thorsby

There was a joint discussion here
Friday, between the Rev. G. T. Harris of Birmingham for the amendment and D. Henry Riddle against it. The Rev. Harris made the speech of all the amendment
speakers, a temperance speech.
The feature of this debate was the reply to that part of Mr. Riddle's speech stating that a union of the church and state had ever been destructive to both church and state.
Mr. Harris undertook to defend the union of church and state, and referred to England, France Germany and Russia as having such conditions, and that those governments in some respects are the greatest in the world. He later on argued that the amendment should be adopted because this state is being rapidly filled up with foreigners, who would soon dominate the state and destroy our form of government.
Mr. Riddle's speech was enthusiastically received, as evidenced by frequent outbursts of applause.
There were four voters against the amendment to one for it in the audience.

Cooper

Editor Banner—Please allow me
space for a few words in your paper in regard to the amendment.
The speaking here last Saturday was well attended. The vote was 19 for, and 23 against the amendment.

Well, boys, it is said by some of the good women that have seen Comer that we men out in the country that are against the amendment are a set of moss-back fools and have got no sense. Comer says we that voted for him and do not support the amendment are skunks.
Well, let's turn out on November 29th and stench him clear out of the ring.

Friends, the sanctity of our home is at stake, it is not a question of whiskey, it is a political scheme. I am in favor of prohibition and have been all the time. I am in favor of the plan used in Illinois, when the preacher gets full of politics, put him out of business, for politics and religion do not go together. Find whiskey in the Bible and I will eat them all. Old Moss Back.

NOTICE

I, Sarah Jane Wilson, do hereby certify that the statement made against Rev. F. A. Ellison to the church at Cane Creek, Oct. 23, 1909, in regard to some hogs, was untrue, proven to be by investigation by the church.

SARAH JANE WILSON.

More Than Enough is Too Much

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, the malfunction and disorders of the kidneys.
If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Pills and you will soon be all right again. For sale by all druggists.

One Doctor—Only One

No sense in running from one doctor to another! Select the best one, then stand by him. No sense either in trying this thing, that thing, for your cough. Carefully, deliberately select the best cough medicine, then take it. Stick to it. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for throat and lung troubles. Sold for nearly seventy years.
No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Why try this thing, that thing, for your cough? Why not stick to the good old reliable family favorite—Ayer's Pills? Ask your doctor if he approves this advice.

It is amusing to note the awkward position of the Amenders in desperate defense they are making of their pet scheme. Ever since the Prohibition leaders took charge of the Legislature in 1907 they have struck mighty blows at whiskey. They have adopted as their slogan, "Touch not, Taste not, Smell not," and from time to time had statewide laws passed which aimed to put every obstacle in the way of a person getting his booze not only for sale but for his own consumption. Three months ago if one of these leaders had been asked the question: Would you encourage every move to keep the vile stuff out of the home? they would have readily answered you Yes. And if we did not have other evidence of this attitude, the fact would be sufficient that in every State of the Union, Alabama included, the same leaders have tried to elect Congressmen and Senators pledged to the passage of a Federal law that would prohibit the shipment into a dry state of liquors from a wet state. Since Alabama has for a good while had prohibition all over the state there is but one way for a man to get whiskey or beer for his own use in his own home and this is by ordering it from another state. How, then, can the present supporters of the Amendment go back on their colors and say that they do not intend to keep the vile stuff from the home, away from the sacred atmosphere of child life and child culture? But it is not all the evidence on the subject. The very title of the Carmichael act passed at the recent extra session of the Legislature contains the following: "To promote temperance and suppress the evils of Intemperance; to discourage the use and consumption of alcohol, alcoholic, spirituous, vinous, malt, brewed and fermented liquors and other liquors, liquids and beverages defined and set forth in the act, etc."

Here we have the aims and purposes of the Amendment leaders put in the law itself. They cannot deny this. Governor Comer approved it with its Temperance title, signed it in pomp and executive pride, surrounded by the women interested, and yet he is stumping the State daily with these startling words flowing from his lips: "Order a week's supply of whiskey for your home; order seven quarts. Suppose you want more than this, order 14 quarts or if you want a year's supply order 365 quarts, or order a barrel if you want it. The law is not going to hurt you, nor will it interfere with you. Hold a banquet, if you please, and invite any number of your friends and have champagne, high balls, cocktails, mint juleps and all other high-sounding things. You may make everyone of your guests howling drunk and you can send him home reproaching to his wife and children."

This is wonderful advice from the Governor of a state. In order to bolster up the failing cause of the Amendment the Governor and others whose political future depends upon the Amendment are prepared to adopt any sort of policy.

But it only proves the original character of this campaign that Governor Comer had seized on the Amendment as an issue to get an endorsement of his administration.

He begins all of his speeches with a defense of his administration, devoting two-thirds of his time to that and the rest to the Amendment.

The people already know well that if the Amendment were adopted it would mean Communism for another term. The revolt against his miracle, together with the breaking into a man's home without warrant, will sound the death knell of the Amendment.

We regret to learn that Congressman Craig is seriously sick at Selma.

MARRIED

Mr. M. D. Foshee, the popular Chief Clerk in the Probate Judge's office, and Miss Gene Greer, a charming young lady of Maple Springs, were united in marriage at the residence of Rev. W. H. Wilson, Sunday morning last. Rev. Wilson officiating. The Banner extends congratulations to the happy couple and wishes them a long and happy life together.

What about a Foto of your dwelling house? See ARCHER.

Mr. F. G. Fritz, Orono, N. Y., writes: "My little girl was greatly benefited by taking Foley's Orino Laxative, and I think it is the best remedy for constipation and liver trouble." Foley's Orino Laxative is mild, pleasant and effective, and cures habitual constipation. Upchurch Drug Co.

THE AMENDMENT.

Section 1. The manufacture, sale and keeping for sale of alcoholic and malt liquors and other intoxicating beverages shall be forever prohibited in this State; but alcohol may be sold for medical, scientific and mechanical purposes, and wine for sacramental purposes, under such regulations as the Legislature may have prescribed or may hereafter prescribe.

Sec. 2. Nothing in the Constitution of Alabama shall be construed to prevent the Legislature under the police power from designating places where such liquors may not be stored or kept.

Crushing.
Mrs. Newbridge (with an air of triumph)—Really, I was greatly surprised to get a wedding present from the Van der Gids. They are so exclusive, you know. Miss Johns—Yes, but they are very charitable, I believe.

His Only Reason.
Mrs. Jawback (angrily)—Since you stayed out so late, why did you come home at all? Mr. Jawback (drowsily)—To sleep, my dear—just to sleep—that's all!—Exchange.

Foley's Honey and Tar clears the air passages, stops the irritation in the throat, soothes the inflamed membranes, and the most obstinate cough disappears. Sore and inflamed lungs are healed and strengthened, and the cold is expelled from the system. Refuse any but the genuine in the yellow package. Upchurch Drug Co.

A 50-cent bottle of Scott's Emulsion
given in half-teaspoon doses four times a day, mixed in its bottle, will last a year-old baby nearly a month, and four bottles over three months, and will make the baby strong and well and will lay the foundation for a healthy, robust boy or girl.

be pleased to see the new colors and swell patterns which are shown this season in our HART SCHAFFNER

Many men who are older will want this younger stuff; some of it is a little extreme, but we have good styles for everybody. We want you to see the new Tans, Grays, Olives, Browns; the Fine Blue Serges, and Dressier Fabrics; want to show you the new ideas in Fall Overcoats.

Ladies!

We have a beautiful line of light weight suitings for fall, don't fail to see them before they are all gone we have some excellent values at 12½ to 25¢ per yard.

Nice line of wool and silk goods on hand.

We also have a store chuck full of new every-day-staples that have just arrived, we are selling them on last year's prices when cotton was $5 and 9¢ per pound; better buy early this time everything you need for fall and winter in cotton goods, prices will be much higher when this present stock is gone.

Have you noticed our Collars, Belts, Gloves, Laces, Embroidery?

When you want a real swell pair of Shoes come to this store and save walking; Tans, Green, Oxblood, Vici, Patent Leather.

A glance at our SHOW WINDOWS will convince you that this line of Clothing is in a class by itself; if you do not see the particular shade or model you are looking for in the Show Windows, step inside and let us show you, as it is impossible for us to put all the different styles that we carry in the Show Windows; every Suit that is not right, or not satisfactory, we are authorized to refund your money. Is it possible to guarantee anything higher?

It is also about time you were fitting yourself up with your Fall Hat, Shirts, Collars, Ties, Fancy Vest, Underwear, etc.

ATTENTION FARMERS.

Have you ever enjoyed before such
prosperity, high prices for cotton,
and good prices for your cotton seed.
We should be very thankful this
year, as all this is evidence convincing that the south with her crops
that others can not supply is certain to grow in wealth, and the indutrious farmers has the greatest advantage of all others to accumulate,
as he actually grows the products
that are worth so much. And to our farmer friends around Clanton,
we want to say that we are still doing all in our power to give you the very best results at our Gin at Clan-
ton. We try each day to do better work, and get more lint from the seed, than the day before. Won't you help us with your patronage
that we may help you by contin-
ing to improve our plant. Keep your cotton dry, and don't allow
trash and foreign matter in it, as it works a hardship on us trying to keep up the gin saws. We are preparing now to resharpen our saws
that we might be able to give you
last bales of cotton as good as the first bales, and it is necessary if we do good work for you, to keep our plant in as good shape on the last bales as on the first bales. Our work this year is better than last,
and if we can only get your hearty
co-operation and patronage we will certainly in the end give Clanton
farmers such results as no other communities get.

Thanking you for your patronage,
and trusting that you will speak to your neighbor in our behalf, we beg
to remain,

Very truly, yours,
CLANTON GINNERY,

HEAVIER-THAN-AIR MACHINE'S LONGEST FLIGHT.

Henry Farman in winning the Grand Prix de la Champagne for length of flight at Rheims, France, was in the air three and one-fourth hours and traveled a distance of 118 miles. It was dark when he landed and for some time the machine was invisible to spectators, who cheered the aviator for his successful voyage when he landed. He won $10,000 by the achievement.

DRAINS ON FORESTS

Yearly Output Is Twenty Billion Cubic Feet at Present.

We Are Cutting Our Timber Supply Three Times as Fast as It Grows—Exploitation Already Had Serious Effect.

Washington.—The total yearly drain upon our forests, not counting losses from fires, storms, and insects, is some 20,000,000,000 cubic feet, says R. S. Kellogg, assistant forester in charge of the office of forest statistics, in a publication just issued by the forest service on "The Timber Supply of the United States."

Our present forest area of 550,000,000 acres may be roughly estimated to consist of 200,000,000 acres of mature forests, in which the annual growth is balanced by death and decay, of 250,000,000 acres partially cut or burned over, on which, with reasonable care, there is sufficient young growth to produce in the course of time a merchantable, but not a full crop of timber, and 100,000,000 acres of more severely cut and burned over forests, in which there is not sufficient young growth to produce an other crop of much value.

Taken as a whole, the annual growth of our forests under these conditions does not exceed 12 cubic feet per acre, a total of less than 7,000,000,000 cubic feet. That is, we are cutting our forests three times as fast as they are growing. There is menace in the continuance of such conditions. While we might never reach absolute timber exhaustion, the unrestricted exploitation of our forests in the past has already had serious effects, and it will have much worse if it is allowed to continue unchecked.

White pine, for instance, which was once considered inexhaustible, has fallen off 70 per cent in cut since 1890, and more than 45 per cent since 1900. The cut of oak, our most valuable, hardwood lumber, has decreased 16 per cent since 1900, and that of yellow poplar 22 per cent. The same story will be told of other woods if they are not conserved.

The fact that timber has been cheap and abundant has made us careless of its production and reckless in its use. We take 250 cubic feet of wood per capita annually from our forests, while Germany uses only 37 cubic feet, and France but 25. On the other hand, Germany, who has learned her lesson, makes her state forests produce an average of 48 cubic feet of wood per acre. We have as fast growing species as Germany, or faster, and as good or better forest soil if we protect it.

The necessity for more farm land may eventually reduce or total forest area to 100,000,000 acres less than it is at present. It is entirely possible, however, to produce on 450,000,000 acres as much wood as a population much greater than we have now will really need if all the forest land is brought to its highest producing capacity, and if the product is economically and completely utilized. But to reach the necessary condition of equilibrium between timber production and consumption will take many years of vigorous effort by individual forest owners, by the states, and by the national government. None of them can solve the problem alone; all must work together.

MASONIC LODGE IN THE AIR

Meeting Held at an Elevation of 7,000 Feet—Being the First of Its Kind in History.

Greenfield, Mass.—Aerial lodge No. 1, A. F. & A. M., was formed the other day in the balloon "Massachusetts" at an elevation of more than 7,000 feet, this being the first meeting of the kind ever held. The lodge was conducted with all the Masonic observances possible under the conditions.

At the highest point recorded by the barograph, 7,200 feet, in the midst of dense clouds, the Masonic ceremony took place. The details were recounted by the party when it reached Greenfield, after considerable difficulty in getting the huge gas bag and its numerous trappings out of a forest where a landing was made with considerable danger to the balloonists.

PUR LINGBURGER IN HER SHOE

Rejected Suitor Adopts Novel Method of Getting Even with Fair California Waitress.

San Francisco.—Placing Limburger cheese in the shoe of the young lady who refused to accept his affections, was the manner in which William Linz, steward at the Sunset cafe, is alleged to have vented his anger on Miss Emma Schultz, a fair waitress working at the same restaurant.

Linz appeared before Justice Weller to face the charge of battery preferred against him by the young woman. When Miss Schultz took the witness stand, she was asked what the accused man had done to her.

"He tried to make me love him," she said, "and when I refused he put Limburger cheese in my shoe. Then when I became angry at this nasty thing, he struck me over the face and hurt me."

Linz took the stand and testified that he had done nothing to annoy the beautiful waitress and declared emphatically that he did not strike her.

ESCAPE BY A RUSE

Convicts on Siamese Border Gain Temporary Freedom.

Prisoners, After Many Perils and Dangers on Sea and Land, Secure Food by Pretending to Be Seeking Elephants.

London.—The three survivors of the five convicts who, escaped recently from the Andamans told the following remarkable story of their escape and the adventures which followed it.

Six convicts—Bissan Singh, under sentence of 15 years, a Bengali (term of seven years), and four Burmans, Nga Naing, Nga Tun, Nga Pya and Nga Po Lu, all "lifers," under the charge of two military policemen with two rifles and 100 rounds of ammunition were sent in a forest boat to a small island in the Middle Andamans with seven days' rations for each convict and the policemen.

On reaching the island Bissan Singh, Nga Naing, Nga Pya and Nga Tun were set to work, while the two policemen with Nga Po Lu and the Bengali went up hill in search of a "golden" bird that is highly prized in Port Blair and has a ready sale. The policemen, before leaving, took off the recaptured convicts state their bandoliers of cartridges and laid them with the rifles in the bottom of the boat, which had been hauled up on the beach and made fast. Po Lu, who was the convict overseer, professed to know where birds were to be found in plenty, and led the police men and the Bengali into dense underbrush, then gave them the slip, and made his way quickly back to the other men.

The men got the boat into the water and raising the sail started in the direction of the Burma coast. A strong wind, almost a gale, was blowing when they left the island, but the boat, which had both sail and oars, proved seaworthy, and after seven days' heavy weather they reached the Tenasserim coast only to have the boat dashed to pieces on the rocks.

They managed to save what rations were left, however, before the mishap occurred which prevented their continuing further along the coast as was intended. Nga Naing, Nga Tun and Bissan Singh were very ill during the voyage to the Burma coast. Po Lu and Nga Pya, who were well throughout, assumed command of the party and took charge of the guns and ammunition. The men went northward until the food supply gave out and one of the party returned to Ve to buy rice, where he explained the possession of government arms by saying that they were government elephant hunters.

The party received every assistance, then struck out for the Siamese border, which they reached after some weeks hard travel, privation and delays through three of the party being ill. They crossed the Siamese border, their food gave out and on the verge of starvation they recrossed the frontier to the little hamlet of Kyunchoing, Amherst district, to try and get food. They went to the house of a cultivator on the outskirts of the town to whom they said they were government elephant hunters. After they had been fed at the tea-house Goung was sent for, to whom they repeated their statement. He brought them into town and gave them shelter for the night.

The headman arranged a deer shoot with the two convicts who had guns and next morning shortly after they had gone shots were heard, but believing their companions and the Goung were firing at deer the three convicts left behind thought nothing of it until some little time afterward four Burman policemen entered the hut. The three convicts then learned that Po Lu and Nga Pya had been shot and were themselves arrested. The headman appears to have been in communication with the police from the beginning.

Biggest Snake is Whipped

North Carolina Farmer Tells of Battle Between Kingsnake and Rattlesnake—Former Is Victor.

Wadesboro, N. C.—While in Wadesboro a few days ago J. Frank Randall of Ansonville township gave a graphic description of a fight he saw a day before between a kingsnake and a big rattlesnake. The rattlesnake was considerably larger than the kingsnake, and to look at them one would not think it possible for the smaller reptile to swallow the larger one, but this, Mr. Randall states, is just what occurred.

The fight, which took place in the road near Mr. Randall's home, was witnessed by all the members of his family as well as himself. After the battle had been in progress some time the kingsnake managed to tie himself around the body of the rattlesnake about ten inches from the latter's head.

TAKE CARE OF GOOD HEALTH

Mistake Most People Make Is in Waiting for Bad to Come and Then Coddling It.

If we would take as good care of our good health as we do of our bad health we would have more of the former and less of the latter. We set our good health down in a draft and let it get its feet wet; we infringe on its sleep time and gorge it with unsuitable food at irregular hours. We load it with nerve-racking cares and duties, and reply to its frantic appeals for rest with, "You haven't time." We squeeze it with clothing, we distract its ears with noise and its lungs with bad air. But we put our bad health in a quiet room, on a soft couch. We robe it in a comfortable gown, we give it pure air at stated intervals, we put ice on its head and hot water at its feet, we feed it with food convenient for it. We take away all care and responsibility, we give it a soothing draught to rest it; and we pay a doctor $2 to come and leave it a scrap of paper and say that it will better tomorrow. One might think we preferred bad health to good health.—From an Article in Good Health.

"About two years ago I was troubled with my head being scaly. Shortly after that I had an attack of typhoid fever and I was out of the hospital possibly two months when I first noticed the loss of hair, my scalp being still scaly. I started to use dandruff cures to no effect whatever. I had actually lost hope of saving any hair at all. I could brush it off my comb by the handful. I was afraid to comb it. But after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and nearly a box of Cuticura Ointment, the change was surprising. My scalp is now clear and healthy as could be and my hair thicker than ever, whereas I had my mind made up to be bald. W. F. Steese, 5812 Broad St., Pittsburg, Penn., May 7 and 21, 1908."

Reaching Life's Goal.

If you want to be somebody in this world you must assert your individuality and assert it in the right direction, so that it may lead to a goal of honor for yourself and be an example for others. Find out what you ought to do, say to yourself: "I must do it," then begin right away with "I will do it," and keep at it until it is done.

Will Seek the South Pole.

A. Henry Savage Landor, the English explorer, who will soon make an attempt to reach the south pole, is of the opinion that Lieut. Shackleton failed through having a cumbersome and unnecessarily large expedition. Mr. Landor's theory is that a small caravan of trusted and hardy men, lightly equipped as in his expeditions through Asia and Africa, is best. Mr. Landor's activity in aeronautic investigations gives color to the rumor that an airship will be used by him in his expedition.

HIS DAUGHTER'S FIRST STORY.

The Old Colonel Was Positive It Would Win the Prize.

By DONALD ALLEN.
Copyright, 1933, by Associated Literary Press.

The Boulder Magazine was offering a $500 prize for the best love story, and when Colonel Sears, retired, happened to see the announcement at the pillage reading room he started right home to tell his daughter Phyllis. On the way he decided that her story should be a pathetic one. He so decided because he felt pathetic most of the time himself over being retired, over his half pay and over the fact that the army was going to the dogs without him.

Phyllis Sears was good looking, and she was smart. She had written and torn up two pieces of poetry, she had written and read numerous school compositions, and she had written one essay on the subject of Intemperance.

Miss Phyllis fully realized that she was literary, but she would not have pursued the line except for the enthusiasm and encouragement of her father. She continued to be good looking and smart and literary to please him. The mother doted on the girl, but stood neutral in details.

The story was begun next day, and as fast as a page was written it was submitted to the father. He weighed every sentence. Once the tears were started from the eyes of the reader he insisted that there should be no respite.

When the story had reached five pages the colonel wrote a letter to the editor of the Boulder. He gave his word in full and stated that his only daughter was writing a story to the sublimity in the contest. Thus far, his word for it, it had proved a tremendous literary effort, fully equal to Quind's best, and he could guarantee that the last half would be greater yet. He had cried over it, and the editor, the editor's wife and the pressmen, compositors and all others connected with the office would doubtless do the same.

AS PART OF A PAGE WAS WRITTEN IT WAS SUBMITTED TO THE FATHER.

By and by two or three things began to dawn on Phyllis. She found it difficult to keep up the tears. The story had gone all right to a certain point and then stuck. She was puzzled as to the end of it. She began to doubt and distrust her talent and finally ventured to say so to her father.

"Not take the prize?" the colonel exclaimed. "Why, girl, what has come over you? First, you are the daughter of a colonel who served his country for thirty years; next, you are good looking and smart; thirdly, your story is the only one to touch the editor's heart. Egad, if it doesn't I'll go down to the city and call him a ruffian! You'll win that prize in a center."

"But if I should fail after all?" she asked.

"But you can't." "And yet I may. You see, you have told most everybody, and if I don't take the prize I shall feel terribly humiliated. I shall want to go away for a year."

"Look here, daughter," said the colonel after a moment's thought. "I'll make you a promise. If you don't take that prize I promise to find a husband for you within a year. What do you say to that? You are sure of the prize, however, and will have to live and die an old maid."

And that evening as the colonel smoked his cigar on the veranda with a friend he whispered in confidence:

"Not a word to a living soul—not a word! There'll be thousands of stories sent in, but Phyllis will take the cake. Being so, sir-bound to. She's smart, and then she's the daughter of an old soldier. The first page made me hunch around on my chair, and the second brought tears to my eyes. It will be a story to set thousands weeping."

The story was finished at last, read and reread and then sent off. With it went another confidential letter from the colonel. He pointed out its many strong points to save the editor time, and he assured him that at least forty friends of his had pronounced it a gem and wanted ten copies of the issue in which it was printed. He also deferred again to his war record.

There was a month of waiting. During this time the colonel never faltered. He was sure his daughter's story would win the prize.

"Why, the editor must have time to recover from his emotion after reading your story. Bound to win—bound to. Thirty years in the service of my country, and this is the first story my daughter has written. You may receive a $500 check at any moment. If it had been a common story, something to laugh at, a balderdash love story, but it was pathetic, you see. Egad, but think of your old father weeping over a story!"

One day the pathetic manuscript was returned, and inclosed with it was a notice that such and such a story had won the prize. The colonel came home with the letter in his hand.

"But I was afraid it might fail," said Phyllis as she took it and went away to weep over it and wonder what everybody would say.

The colonel stalked into the library and sat down and wrote the editor a letter and told him that he was a man without sentiment, a numskull, a border ruffian and many other things and wound up with a lament that the days of the duello had passed away. That relieved him somewhat.

Two days had passed and the little family were sitting on the veranda one afternoon when a gentlemanly looking man of thirty descended from an auto and introduced himself. His card showed that he was the editor of the Boulder. Phyllis blushed, and her father arose to begin an oration. It was to be a speech, but before he had got out a word the caller announced that he had come down to make an explanation. He was perfectly at ease, and his manner was frank.

In the first place, the pathetic story had exceeded the limit set by over a thousand words. The circular had specified American stories, and this was laid in London. Phyllis had to acknowledge that she had been careless and the colonel that he had not read the circular at all. Then the editor good naturedly pointed out the absence of any plot and other things open to criticism. When he had finished the colonel didn't know whether to ask him to take a glass of wine or to order him off the premises.

It was the daughter who settled that question, however. She frankly acknowledged her literary errors. After that there was a friendly talk on literary matters, and for an hour after the caller's departure the old warrior sat buried in a sort of reverie. When the daughter at last aroused him he said:

"Phyl, I made you a promise, you remember."

"Did you?" she innocently asked, though blushing at the same time.

"And I guess I've found him. Let me say that I'm not going to butt in and tangle things up any more. I'm not literary, and I'm going to drop paths. I'm simply military, and I'm going to stick to that. Go ahead and paddle your own canoe after this."

And if the colonel had not been a wise father his son-in-law might not be sharing the house with him and his good wife today, and that son-in-law might not be the editor of the Boulder.

Going Berryling.

The pleasure of huckleberrying is partly in the season—the late summer time, from the middle of July to September. The poignant joys of early spring are passed and the exuberance of early summer, while the keen stimulus of fall has not yet come. Things are at a pause. The baying is over. The meadows, shorn of their rich grass, lie tawny green under the sky, and the world seems bigger than before. It is not a time for dreams nor a time for exploits. It is a time for—for well, berryling!

But you must choose your days carefully, as you do your fishing and hunting days. The berries "bite best" with a brisk west wind, though a south one is not to be despised, and a north one, rare at this season, gives a pleasant suggestion of fall, while the sun has still all the fervor of summer. Choose a sky that has clouds in it, too, for you will feel their movement even when you do not look up. Then take your pail and set out. Do not be in a hurry and do not promise to be back at any definite time. And, finally, go either alone or with just the right companion. I do not know any circumstances wherein the choice of a companion needs more care than in berryling. It may make or mar the whole adventure.—Atlantic.

The Weather.

For most of us the weather is still one of those minor unaccountable powers, too capricious to be either quite divine or quite devilish, whom our savage ancestors used no doubt to placate with offerings. We no longer do that, partly because we have learned to distinguish between religion and superstition, partly because we do not believe that the weather would care for any offerings of ours. But still we keep that primitive lingering idea of the weather as something with personality enough to make us angry with it, and we still get some satisfaction from telling it what we think of it. The poets pay their tribute to good weather and talk about the sun and the rain and the wind as if they had a wonderful and beautiful life of their own, and their poetry makes us love sun and rain and wind as if they were indeed living creatures. But there are many prosaic people who would despise such poetry for its unreality and yet who personify bad weather just as much as the poets personify good; to whom the rain, when they have no umbrella, is as much an enemy as the sun in which it was printed. He also deferred again to his war record.

There was a month of waiting. During this time the colonel never faltered. He was sure his daughter's story would win the prize.

"Why, the editor must have time to recover from his emotion after reading your story. Bound to win—bound to. Thirty years in the service of my country, and this is the first story my daughter has written. You may receive a $500 check at any moment. Arab Buttermaking.

Among the Arabs an interesting department of woman's duty is dairy work. This, like all other operations, is carried out on an old fashioned and patriarchal plan. To make butter, for instance, a small sheepskin is filled with milk and tied to a ring in the wall. The woman then sits flat on the floor and rocks it to and fro till little balls of butter begin to form within. These grow larger and larger and accumulate and are finally brought out as one big lump. The remaining milk is then boiled on the fire with bits of meat. The male members of the family now come together. A large dish of cooked rice is placed before them and the boiled milk poured over it. Then, making balls of the mixture with his hands, each member quickly swallows his share and rises to wash his hands. This done, the girls and mother sit down and eat what the men are pleased to leave.

Cowpeas as a Fertilizer.

In Kansas an experiment in raising cowpeas as a catch crop between crops of wheat was made. As soon as the wheat was off the stubble was worked up and cowpeas seeded. They were turned under for the next wheat crop. This plan increased the wheat crop four and one-third bushels on an average of five years. Where no cowpeas were used the wheat yield steadily ran down.

Treatment For Thoroughpin.

A thoroughpin is a distention of the synovial or bursal sheath of the tendon just above point of hock joint. Make a solution of two drams of tannic acid to a pint of water and bathe the part with this three times a day.—Rural New Yorker.

Croup is most prevalent during the dry cold weather of the early winter months. Parents of young children should be prepared for it. All that is needed is a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many mothers are never without it in their homes and it has never disappointed them. Sold by all druggists.

Keep Sheep Thrifty.

There is one thing the farmer cannot afford to overlook in sheep raising, and that is thrift. Thrift means health, gain in quality, quantity and productiveness, the elements out of which the profits are derived. It must be the first object of the owner to keep his sheep in thriving condition. The quality of the wool, as well as the quantity, and the general productiveness of the flock make this requirement imperative.

Percolated Fat.

Wm. Tieschbach of Glen Oak, Okla., was an exile from his home. Moun's air, he thought, would cure a lung ailment which had defied all remedies for two years. After six months he returned, cough doing his step. "Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery," he writes, "and after taking six bottles I am as well as ever." It saves thousands yearly from desperate lung disease. Infallible for Coughs and Colds, it discharges Hoarseness and Sore Throat, Cures Grip, Bronchitis, Hemorrhages, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Sore and St. trial bottles free, guaranteed by Upchurch Drug Co.

Elderly People Helped Free

The last years of life are the sweetest, and yet the most difficult to prolong. It is then that the greatest care is exercised in maintaining bodily health. But the chief care should always be with regard to the food you eat and whether you are digesting it properly. You should not allow yourself to become constipated.

No doubt you have tried salts and cathartic pills, purgative tablets, etc., and have come to the conclusion that they are violent in action and do but temporary good. Listen, then, to the voice of experience with regard to a wonderful and mild laxative, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is not new, only we are trying to find new friends for it.

A. A. Feltz, of Johnston City, Ill., suffered from stomach trouble for six years and found his cure in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. His wife used it too with success. We could name hundreds of others. Some heard of it first through neighbors or friends; others through the doctor's offer to send any sufferer from a stomach, liver or bowel complaint a free sample bottle for trial, without charge. If you will send your name and address he will send you a trial bottle direct to your home. If it proves itself of value, then continue the treatment by buying a 10-cent or 50-cent bottle of your drugstore, as all of them sell it. Old people, like children, should look for purity, and it is well to mention that the purity of this remedy is vouched for with the U. S. Government. Also, though the bottle is sent to prove its merits, results are always guaranteed from the regular bottles bought of druggists, who will refund your money if it does not satisfy you. Send at least for the free test bottle today.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 390 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Old Soldiers And Chiltonians Opposed

From the Montgomery Advertiser. A representative of the Advertiser spent Sunday last in the vicinity of Mountain Creek, visiting the Alabama Soldiers' Home, and, at the same time, feeling the pulse of voters both at the Home and in the vicinity of Mountain Creek precinct.

The old soldiers stand about eight for the amendment with the rest of them lined up against it. There are now about seventy-five men at the Home, of which number, probably not more than fifty will vote. So, it appears that "inside of the wire" the men are about eight for to fifty against the proposition. In the vicinity, that is, territory adjacent to the Home, the Mountain Creek beat, I was informed by Mr. Kicker, a worthy and reliable gentleman residing three-quarters of a mile from the voting place, that he could not account for more than six votes for the amendment, with the balance of the good people dead against the amendment.

Now Mr. Kicker is an observing, intelligent citizen, who has a son in the ministry there, and is also the head of an excellent family, so his statement to me is worth just what he says, so far as the complexion of the voters is concerned on this amendment question.

If the balance of Chilton County votes as does this locality, then Comer's amendment will be buried so deep on election day that, if it should have any life its friends better get on the other side of the globe, as it sure will have to "scratch out" through China in order to be on the surface of the earth again.

Mountain Creek is fast becoming a shipping point of considerable interest. The iron ore industry there is thriving. Thornton and Long are running about forty teams hauling iron ore for shipment to Gadsden and Shelby, Ala. Cotton will yield about three-fourths of a crop, and worth 14 cents, the ruling quotation, the farmers are contented. In fact, the price now, as compared with last year, is in favor of the grower so far as a money consideration is concerned.

Keep Sheep Thrifty.

There is one thing the farmer cannot afford to overlook in sheep raising, and that is thrift. Thrift means health, gain in quality, quantity and productiveness, the elements out of which the profits are derived. It must be the first object of the owner to keep his sheep in thriving condition. The quality of the wool, as well as the quantity, and the general productiveness of the flock make this requirement imperative.

Percolated Fat.

Wm. Tieschbach of Glen Oak, Okla., was an exile from his home. Moun's air, he thought, would cure a lung ailment which had defied all remedies for two years. After six months he returned, cough doing his step. "Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery," he writes, "and after taking six bottles I am as well as ever." It saves thousands yearly from desperate lung disease. Infallible for Coughs and Colds, it discharges Hoarseness and Sore Throat, Cures Grip, Bronchitis, Hemorrhages, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Sore and St. trial bottles free, guaranteed by Upchurch Drug Co.

Kodol
For Dyspepsia and Indigestion

If you Suffer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gas on the Stomach, Belching, Sour Stomach, Heart-burn, etc., a little Kodol will Relieve you almost Instantly

Kodol supplies the same digestive juices that are found in a healthy stomach. Being a liquid, it starts digestion at once.

Kodol not only digests your food, but helps you enjoy every mouthful you eat.

You need a sufficient amount of good, wholesome food to maintain strength and health.

But, this food must be digested thoroughly, otherwise the pains of indigestion and dyspepsia are the result.

When your stomach cannot do its work properly, take something to help your stomach. Kodol is the only thing that will give the stomach complete rest.

Why? Because Kodol does the same work as a strong stomach, and does it in a natural way.

So, don't neglect your stomach. Don't become a chronic dyspeptic. Keep your stomach healthy and strong by taking a little Kodol. You don't have to take Kodol all the time. You only take it when you need it.

Kodol is perfectly harmless.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a bottle of Kodol. Then after you have read the entire contents of the bottle if you are not satisfied that it has not done you any benefit, return the bottle to the druggist. He will refund your money without question of delay. We will then pay the druggist. Don't hesitate, all druggists carry Kodol, and it is guaranteed to be genuine. This offer applies to the large bottles only and is not made in a family. The large bottle contains four times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

OLDEST LOVE LETTER.

According to This Document Cupid's
Customs Are the Same Today.

A love letter 1000 years old has lately been discovered in Chaldean, says Current Literature. The lady to whom it was addressed lived in Babilonia, the Biblical Sennacherib. Her beloved was a resident of Babylon.

In contrast to the position which women hold at the present day in the orient they possessed in antiquity a greater degree of freedom. In many respects the oriental woman of antiquity was graced with as much privilege
as is the modern European woman.

Particularly in Chaldean she could participate in trade, manipulate her own property, be a witness before court and be the guardian of her own children.

Of the position of women in Egypt we know less, but doubtless it was much higher than that of the present Mohammedan women.

In one respect, however, it seems that custom has been changed very slightly,
for marriage was essentially an affair of trade between the parents of the bridegroom and those of the bride.

This is ascertained from the legal code of Hammurabi, king of Babylon, B. C.
2300. The future husband paid the price of the bride and her father provided her dowry and trousseau. Under these circumstances there was no such courtship as prevails marriage in accordance with occidental ideas. Still, one must believe that many a love letter on papyrus was passed secretly between the hands of the betrothed during the interval of their engagement.

The newly discovered letter is written in clay and probably dates from 2200 B. C. Though somewhat formal, the reader can feel the tenderness that lies hidden between its lines. It reads:

"To the lady, Kaskara (little eyes) says Gimil Marduk (the favorite of Marduk) this. May the Sun God of Marduk afford you eternal life. I write wishing that I may know how your health is. Oh, send me a message about it. I live in Babylon and have not seen you, and for this reason I am very anxious. Send me a message that will tell me when you will come to me, so that I may be happy. Come to Marcheban. May you live long for my sake."

CLANTON, ALA.

Mapleville, Oct. 30, 1909
To the voters and Christians of Clanton: I have wrote you little letter for the Banner and have not seen any reply worthy of note, so here I come again. I never saw such a mixup and confusion as the people are in. Some say they are for prohibition and oppose the amendment; some say they oppose prohibition but favor the amendment. Who ever heard such stuff? And I have ruminated it all over time after time and come to this conclusion: That a man that is opposed to the amendment is either deceived in his religion or is yet in the grip of bitter ass and the bonds of iniquity, for prohibition and the amendment and the religion of Jesus Christ, are one and the same principle. Your paper, nor any other one, can down the amendment, for if we fail to get it this election it will come some time in the near future, for we feel that God is for us, then who can prevail against us? You call our dear ministers political parsons. Well, we rejoice to suffer persecution as we know we are right, and, like our Lord and when He was crucified, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do." Your side may call it politics or what you please, we will talk it in the pulpit, on the streets, on the farm, at our tables, and after we lie down; we will teach it to our children and to our neighbors' children and you cannot stop us as long as we live. I know you don't want our pastors to preach it, oh no, don't preach it. Well, that is what we are doing, and will keep on even if we get defeated; we are determined to down the liquor curse as deep in perdition that it will stay where it belongs. We aim to take every clog out of the wheels of Zion, so she can roll on the conversion of poor ignorant sinners to taste and see that the Lord is good, and that our God is the Lord of heaven and earth and that there is one like Him in all the earth. Oh, this talk about searching a man's home for whiskey! That has been a law and a good one. I am willing any old time to be searched and so are you if you are not running a blind tiger. If you are, your house should be searched and you made to suffer for it. This is a fight between right and wrong—principle and money.

When a cold becomes settled in the system, it will take several days' treatment to cure it, and the best remedy to use is "Hau-be-lain's Cough Remedy." It will cure quicker than any other, and also leaves the system in a natural and healthy condition. Sold by all druggists.

THE COOK'S FAULT.

He Wonder the Bird Was Not Tender When Served.

One of the most amazing things about swans is that they live to an extremely great age and that it is impossible for the ordinary observer to guess what their years may be. President Cleveland once had an amazing experience with swans, according to a writer in the American Magazine. He had been in the south shooting and brought home a number of wild swans, one of which he sent to each member of his cabinet and to some other associates.

"All the boys," said Mr. Cleveland, "thanked me politely for having remembered them, but none of them seemed to have much to say about how they enjoyed the birds."

"Carlie, I found, had his cooked on a night when he was dining out. Another, when I asked him, said he hoped I wouldn't mind, but he had sent his home to his old mother. Thurber didn't mention his bird at all for two days. Finally I asked him about it."

"Thurber, did you get that swan all right?"

"Yes, sir—oh, yes. I got the swan all right, thank you, and he beat over his desk and seemed very busy."

"Fine bird," I said.

"Yes, sir, fine bird," and he went on working.

"Enjoy eating him, Thurber?"

"He waited a minute, and then he said: 'Well, sir, I guess they didn't cook him right at my house. They cooked him only two days.' And he went on working without cracking a smile."

Edible Flowers of India.
Many edible flowers. It appears, are to be found in India. One of the most appreciated grows on a tree about which we have very little information, but which in the country itself is named the "muhwah." The natives consume an enormous number of these flowers, whose pale yellow corollas are pulpy and thick, and they prepare them in various ways.

When they are fresh they are put in cakes, to which they give a sweet flavor, but they are more especially used for making bread after they have been dried and reduced to flour. By allowing them to ferment a kind of wine is produced, and by distilling them a brandy is obtained of which the Hindus are very fond.—Vulgarism-ation Scientific.

A Dandy of 1770.

From an English newspaper printed in the year 1777 is the following description of a dandy: "A few days ago a macaroni made his appearance in the assembly rooms at Whitehaven, dressed in a mixed silk coat, pink satin waistcoat and breeches covered with an elegant silk net, white silk stockings with pink clocks, pink satin shoes and large pearl buttons, a mushroom colored stock covered with fine point lace, hair dressed remarkably high and stuck full of pearl pins."

Dropsy

Given up by Doctors

"I had dropsy, and was given up by my family physician. There was no chance for me, but my family also gave me up. My limbs and body were one-third larger than water collected around my feet and I had to be propped up to keep from smothering. Took Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy until I was entirely cured. I was in 1902, and I am now able to do any kind of work on my farm. My cure was marvelous."

L. TURLEY CURTIS, Wilmore.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy has been wonderfully successful in relieving heart trouble. Its effect upon the heart nerves muscles is a great assistance in nature to overcome heart weakness.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold by all druggists. If the first bottle does not benefit, your druggist will refund your money.

MAN ON THE CORNER
of the Lights he has, and some he has not.

V. Higgins purchased four hundred and four grams of gold from Mr. W. Callaway last week. The gold was seen at Higgins' store at Clanton.

On the third time in two weeks, Higgins suffered from another attack. Friday night about midnight two houses, belonging to Ross Thornton, and occupied by negroes were destroyed by fire. The furniture of one house was destroyed, but the other scarcely any.

Wednesday of last week W. H. Foshee was sighting the train from Birmingham. A man, who at first gave the name as Phillips was accused as the train arrived at Elmore attempted to jump from it, but was arrested and carried to Wetumpka. He then gave the name as B. Murray and a trial was before J. P. Van Derveer, on behalf of Judge Reynolds. He was committed to the default of $1000 bail.

telling speech against the proposed amendment was made by Longshore Wednesday morning. A large crowd outside the house, and the hearty applause greeted his several points at the sympathy of his audience. A great speech, worthy of a man, and will help to swell the cry against the amendment. Judge also spoke to about one hundred voters in the court house, Friday night, meeting with a very reception.

Bethel.

After Banner—The speaking at Saturday night was enjoyed all present. The debate was led by Judge Reynolds, who in 36 minutes in favor of the amendment. Col. A. C. followed with a speech of 47 minutes against it. Then the Judge with a talk of 13 minutes. Speakers acknowledged that there was not a place in Alabama where whiskey could be manufactured or sold now under the present law, and that the amendment would not change the law. Now the question explained is, why our officers voted for in good faith were ready to spend fifty thousand of our money to try to put a stop to worthless literature in our situation? Why didn't they their war flag against whiskey when the dispensary was taken, dragging down the young and boys to degradation and along the hearts of mothers, sisters, and wives of the men? Why did they wait until people put it out of business? Why did they wait until the people the State rose up against it and drove it off the soil of Alabama and were ready to reject the great victory, and then to shoot their guns at it? Why? That reminds me of the man that ran up in the when he saw a bear coming. He saw a bear coming, and he wife met it with the ax and killed it. Then he came down with his revolver and shot at the dead bear, and said, I have killed the bear!

Now just a few words to the others that have been hypocrites. Brooks Lawrence. You remember the negro that was fighting in his sleep; when he found no bear. So when you will find no saloon, did you not preach saloon? When we had saloons? When the people will stop questions from a reasonable standpoint and then vote they think will be best. G. W. EDWARDS.

ON THE AMENDMENT.

Editor Banner—I see so much...
written in regard to the amend... ment, that I come asking for a...
small space to say a few words...
I notice that the amendment...
claim that the issue is saloon or...
no saloon, or a vote against the...
amendment is a vote for whiskey...
Now, I can't see why they should...
make such statements unless it is...
to catch the voters that let some...
politician do their reading, think... ing and, in fact, their voting, for...
there is not a saloon in the State...
and will not be until the present...
prohibition laws are repealed, and...
there is not the least chance in...
the world for them to be repealed...
any time soon. The amendment...
claim that the State is already in...
the hands of the prohibitionists...
If so, why did they call for this... amendment to the constitution? We... have the most drastic law ever...
passed by any State on the prohibi... tion question. Then why did they... call this election at this time? Why...
this expense of $50,000 to the tax... payers of the State, if we already... have a majority for prohibition? There... is something behind all this fuss...
Here is a story taken from Home and...
Farm, which shows the effect of... prohibition as a breeder of rank...
hypocrisy.

"About four years ago, shortly... after a certain town on Long Is... land went 'dry,' a housekeeper in...
this town received a letter from a... wholesale whiskey concern in Ken... tucky, reading something like this...
Will you kindly send us the names...
of any persons in your town who...
you think might be likely to pur... chase wet goods? We have a very... fine brand of whiskey (naming the... brand) that we should like to in... troduce in your town. We shall be... glad to extend to you the usual...
courtesy of ten per cent commission...
on all sales that we may make...
through the list you send us."

Well, the hotel man thought he... would have a little fun, and so he...
made a list of about thirty-five of...
the most rabid prohibitionists in...
the place and sent the list to the... whiskey firm. He thought it... would be a fine joke on the probi...
tionists to have them deluged...
with whiskey circulars, and it...
turned out to be a better joke than...
he thought for, at the end of three... months, he received a letter from...
the whiskey people thanking him...
for what he had done, and enclos... ing a check for $27 commission...
This story throws light on the cur... ious circumstances already referred...
to, that as the prohibition move... ment spreads, the consumption of... liquor increases. I fear that is the... case here. If the prohibitionists...
would let whiskey alone there...
would not be as much used as there...
is. The statement that the amend... ments make that a vote against the...
amendment is a vote for whiskey...
is false, for I have known men that...
have not tasted whiskey in fifteen...
or twenty years that are opposed... to the amendment. It is a shame...
that the preachers of the State have...
quit preaching the gospel and gone... to preaching politics. Well, I will... close for fear my article will find...
the waste basket. Success to the...
dear old Banner and the defeat of...
the amendment.

JUST A VOTER.

WHEN SUSIE POUTED.

An Adventure That Introduced Her to the "Poke."

By JOSEPHINE REARDON.
(Copyright, 1920, by Associated Literary Press.)

It was Miss Susie Cline's pouting day. Firstly, she had received a letter from a girl whom she had known for a long time, giving her the news of a matrimonial engagement. It was written to make her feel bad. Secondly, Miss Susie's Aunt Deborah, who was also her guardian, had charged her with carelessness in losing a piece of jewelry. Thirdly, she had expected a girl friend to come and pass the summer with her, and that girl was going off on a yachting party to Norway instead. The last could be strung out to tentatively without exhausting it. When things begin to go wrong with a good looking girl of eighteen, with a $20,000 estate coming to her at one and twenty, it's sure to be blue day. Miss Susie at first thought she would go to her room and have a good cry. Then she decided to sit on the veranda and let her eyes brim over with tears. The third decision was to go out into the orchard and climb a tree, but she had only started when she changed directions and wandered down the country highway without definite aim or object in view except to have her pout out. She had a stick in her hand as she walked, and the thistles and may-weeds lost their heads as she came within striking distance.

There are girls who look horrid when they pout and wish they had never been born; but Susie Cline was not one of them. Half a mile down the road stood what was called the old bachelor's place. The five acres and cottage were the property of Mr. Wayne Ashley, twenty-five and unmarried. He lived in the city in the winter and in his country retreat in summer. He was called a recluse, and there was a story to the effect that he had loved and lost and was the enemy of all womankind. Had Mr. Ashley chosen to explain to the country folks he would have told them that certain flowers and vegetables were fads of his and he was out there to grow them and communicate results to certain horticultural and agricultural societies. In fact, he was the partner of a leading florist in the city, though his name and money were hidden under that of "Co." No woman had ever broken his heart or smashed his idols.

Miss Cline and Mr. Ashley had never met. If she referred to him it was as a "poke." He didn't refer to her at all. As the girl reached his place on this day her chin was in the air. Had she belonged to the other sex it would have been said that she had a chip on her shoulder.

In the "poke's" front yard grew a blue hollyhock, the result of one of his experiments. Miss Susie opened the gate and walked in for a closer look. Seeing no one about, she walked to the rear of the house to look at the vegetable garden. A feeling of defiance was mingled with her pouting. Any other day she would not have dared to open the gate. On this day she was ready to defy the old bachelor.

"Urrr! Bark, bark!" Miss Susie looked to her left, to see a big watchdog coming for her through the sugar beets. Ten feet away was a small tool house, with the door swinging open. Scarcely conscious of what she did, the girl made two or three jumps, reached the shelter and pulled the door to. Five seconds later the dog was leaping against it and uttering growls to chill her blood. She had just begun to beg and plead with the dog to go away and let her get back to the highway when she heard a voice saying:

"Good dog, Dick! Hold him there! It's dollars to cents that you've got a tramp for a prisoner!" Miss Susie wanted to cry out that she was no tramp, but only a girl who had come out to pout; but she could not get the words out. The chip fell from her shoulder and her teeth chattered.

"Come out of that, you tramp!" called the man's voice after hushing the dog. "Oh, you won't, eh? Well, we'll see about that. Watch him, Dick!" The place was provided with a wind-fall and water tank and garden hose.

There was a small unglazed window six feet from the ground in the end of the tool house. The "poke" attached the hose, turned on the water and thrust the nozzle through the opening. Susie screamed wildly. If it was a tramp to there he had a falsetto voice. The hose was pulled away, the door opened, and there—

Susie had sunk down in a heap—a limp, wet heap.

"Great Scott! But what is it?" he exclaimed as he stood there holding open the door.

"It's—it's me!" came faintly after a moment regardless of grammar.

"Why, Miss—Miss—but I didn't know you were in here! I thought it was a tramp or a cat. I shall never forgive myself. Why didn't you call out? At low me, please."

Perhaps a girl crouching down in a toolshed with her arms over her head is a more handsome object than a girl standing outside after having had a dozen barrels of water washed over her. The peach basket hat—the linen dress—the chin that had been in the air—where had all the jaunty things disappeared to? And in addition to all the other wetness, tears were rolling down the girl's cheeks over her humiliation.

"So sorry—so sorry," the man kept repeating. "You—you are Miss Cline. I think I am Mr. Ashley. I wouldn't have had it happen for thousands of dollars!"

All of a sudden Miss Susie dashed the tears from her eyes and began to laugh. Her pout was over with, and her sunshiny nature had asserted itself. And Mr. Ashley laughed. She was laughing over the situation, and he was laughing because she laughed. "I am a trespasser, and I have been served right," said the girl. "Yes, I am Miss Cline. I know you will offer to see me home, but I thank you. I shall tell auntie that I fell into the creek. If you ever—"

"I never shall. If it were known that I set my dog on a girl and then tried to drown her, what would people say?"

"And if I don't tell auntie that I fell into the creek what'll she say?" A wan, wet, lone, limpy Susie, trying her best to walk with dignity, went out of the gate and up the road to tell Aunt Deborah how she was stooping over to look at the fish and tumbled into the creek.

That evening Mr. Wayne Ashley paid a call on the aunt and niece and formally made himself known. The accident at the creek was touched upon, but not pursued with any fervor.

Having found his way over to his neighbors, Mr. Ashley contracted the habit of calling frequently, and one day, when fall had come and he was ready to return to the city, Miss Susie said to her relative:

"Mr. Ashley has asked the privilege of corresponding with me."

"Yes?"

"And he says he may run down and call."

"Yes?"

"And—and—"

"And he wants to guard you in future from falling into creeks? Well, Mr. Ashley can talk very interestingly on horticulture, and I shall be glad to listen to his remarks at any time," said Aunt Deborah.

Music of the Telegraph.

Every one has put his ear to a telegraph pole to hear the wires hum, and most people have assumed that the wind was entirely responsible for the sound. So it is in many cases, but often the note is heard when not the slightest movement of the air is perceptible. A French investigator tells us that the sound in this case is due to the expansion and contraction of the wires from variations of temperature. As the wires are not perfectly uniform, they rub against the insulators, making a slight noise, which is amplified by the post acting as a sounding board. Another investigator is sure the sounds are due to electric waves, but he fails to explain how ordinary telegraph wires should be able to serve as wave detectors and in what way the electric waves are transformed into sound waves. The other theory seems more probable.

Some curious stories are told of this telegraph wire music. In Siberia the bears think that it is the buzzing of bees and would tear down the poles to look for honey if the contractors did not pile great stones about them to prevent this. In France, on the south side of the forest of Fontainebleau, the telegraph sounds are regarded as presaging rain. This is because the south wind in this region brings rain and the forest shuts off the north wind. In some districts the noise is popularly supposed to be due to the passage of messages, but it is hardly necessary to say that there is no evidence to support this view.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Elopement Sanctioned.

This is the way they marry in Busoga, on the right bank of the Nile, at Ripan falls. The man goes to some dance, generally given in honor of some departed Busogian, and, having danced and feasted with his charmer, the happy pair elope and go to the bridegroom's home. This ends all ceremony, except that the brother of the bride visits them the next day and is received by the brother or some other relative of the bridegroom, who makes him a present of a cow or whatever else he can afford to give. This the girl's brother keeps until he gets married and pays it over to the brother of some other girl. Men already married carry away another wife in the same way and with like etiquette and payment, and sometimes a married woman is carried off, but this breach of custom is generally condoned as "a mistake" and atoned for by the payment of a cow.

A Constipation Remedy Free

There is no action of your daily life of greater importance than to see that your bowels move. They should move at least once a day naturally, and by that is meant without any help. If they do not move at least once a day you can consider yourself constipated and it is time you did something about it.

You will be glad to know there is a way out of the difficulty. Samuel Landers, an old soldier at Quincy, Ill., Elmer McMillan, of Speed, Mo., Mrs. Monahan, of Stoneville, Miss., and many others are as you are now. But one day they awoke to the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin was curing their friends, so they bought it too and it cured them. Today they are loud in praise of it.

What Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin did for them it should do for you. Surely your constipation is no worse than theirs, one of whom had it since 1871. It only remains for you to realize that yours are of but temporary good, and what you want is a permanent cure, that purgative tablets, cathartic pills and such violent things make a great show of doing something, but do nothing that is lasting. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientific preparation, a laxative, a mild syrupy liquid that contains ingredients that not only cure the constipation, but tone the intestinal muscles so that they learn to work without help. A bottle can be bought of any druggist for the small price of 50 cents, and there is a dollar size for families who have already found out its wonderful value in stomach, liver and bowel troubles, in old or young.

Send your name and address to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent you so that you can test it before buying. If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service.

The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Billingsley.

The cause of the amendments received a heavy frost here last Thursday when a man who afterwards proved to be a non-voter together with exactly five women turned out to hear Rev. Mr. Gwathney, of Prattville, speak for the amendment.

The meeting had been announced in the churches Sunday by the ministers and had bills were distributed during the day preceding the coming of the speaker, advertising the meeting.

This section of the county is going to give a big majority against the amendment. The coming of the amendment speakers does not interest the constituents who seem to have made up their minds and wait a rest until election day when it seems that every qualified voter is going to attend the polls.

When you have a cold the first thing to do is have the bowels move. Do not take anything that may constipate—and most old-fashioned cough-cures do constipate. Try Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup. It gives the cold from the system by a free yet gentle action of the bowels; it stops the cough, it is pleasant to take. Children like it. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

Mountain Creek.

Thornton & Long are running about 25 teams hauling iron ore. They ship to Gadsden.

Cotton is pretty well picked here, with a few exceptions. Farmer Latham, whose large field adjoins the Soldiers Home, shows how a "clean farmer" knows how to gather the fleecy staple. There is hardly a boll to be seen on the stalk.

Corn's amendment, so far as it appears here will surely be snowed under by about five to one.

The old soldiers at the Home are going to the reunion at Montgomery on the 18th of the month, about fifty strong.

Where is the money coming from to pay teachers and pensioners, so that they will be able to make a financial noise? Being in sympathy and accord with the movement by the Educational Department to establish an annual "Library Day" throughout the State, the veterans of the Soldiers Home, held in conjunction with the school of Marbury, of which Miss Craig is principal, and Miss Law assistant, with Miss Jordan as musical director, a well attended meeting at the home executing a fine program last Thursday.

Forced Into Exile.

Wm. Upchurch of Glen Oak, Okla., was an exile from home. Mountain sir, he thought, would cure a lung wacking cough that had defied all remedies for two years. After six months he returned, death dogging his steps. "Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery," he writes, "and after taking six bottles I am as well as ever." It saves thousands yearly from desperate lung diseases. Infallible for Coughs and Colds, it dissolves Hoarseness and Sore Throat, Cures Grip, Bronchitis, Hemorrhages, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Sore and St. trial bottles free, guaranteed by Upchurch Drug Co.

Vinegar Season is Near.

Station No. 228 of the New York State station recommends vinegar as one of the most satisfactory methods of making from the cider is pressed from the barrels should be piled above the floor and the bung resealed with a plug of cotton, which will keep the vinegar from evaporating and keep out dirt. Where the quantity of vinegar is made is considerable the barrels should be placed in a room where the weather is warm and cold in the warmest room, and later placed in a dry cellar. The temperature of the stored vinegar should not fall below 45 degrees Fahrenheit. The sugar in alcohol is about six months, but the vinegar should be kept for a year or more before using. When the cider has been pressed the barrel should be dried and the vinegar should be added to it. The vinegar should be added to the cider in the proportion of one part of vinegar to four parts of cider. Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it, Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headache, dizziness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only

Gifts for Uncle Sam.

Enable the Government to Save Big Trees.

The most public spirited gift that can be made to the government is to save the big trees of the West.

Under the act of March 3, 1891, the President is authorized to accept of any person or corporation, any land or interest in land, which he may deem it expedient to reserve for the use and enjoyment of the people.

COMPARISONS OF CLIMATE.

Some in Both Hemispheres Are Quite Similar.

When two regions on different hemispheres possess similar climates there is nearly always a similarity in their native vegetation, and it is a demonstrated fact that many of the plants native to one of the regions find themselves perfectly at home in the other.

California conditions are markedly similar to those of the Mediterranean region, so that it is no surprise to find more than fifty plants from the latter region that thrive in California with marvellous vigor. It is conservatively estimated that over 75 per cent of the forage on the California range lands is made up of Mediterranean immigrants, mostly annuals, such as wild oats, bar clover, alfalfa, broom grasses, fescues, wild berries and many others.

The Great basin and the Columbia basin resemble California in one marked respect—namely, that the summers are dry and the winters wet. Indeed, the principal difference from California lies in the colder winters. The difference has not prevented the introduction and rapid spread of most of the European annuals now so conspicuous in California. It is really little short of amazing how rapidly and extensively some of these plants have occupied the range lands at the expense of the native vegetation.

The conditions in Arizona are not very favorable to the plants that have found California conditions so congenial, with the exception of alfalfa. Arabia of old world regions is most like Arizona, and from there, if anywhere, we should expect plants adapted to Arizona conditions.

Western Washington and western Oregon closely approximate in climate the British isles, and practically everything that thrives in the one region is at home in the other.

The middle and south Atlantic states are similar to Japan and China in climate. It has long been recognized that all Japanese plants, especially ornamentals, thrive in this region perfectly. A number of them are so at home, indeed, that they have literally taken to the woods and behave as natives. With the Japanese honeysuckle, Japan clover, allanthes, paulownia and the recently introduced Chinese violet.

The cotton states evidently have much in common with India and southeastern Asia, whence we have obtained cowpeas, crab grass, Bermuda grass, velvet beans and many weeds, and to a less degree with Argentina, where rice, sugarcane, corn, papaya, guava and a number of common southern weeds are native.

Of late years there has been increasing evidence that the high plains of northern Texas resemble the highlands of India. At least practically every plant introduced from the India highlands has succeeded better in the Texas Panhandle than elsewhere in the United States.

The great plains region lying east of the Rocky mountains and west of the one hundredth meridian finds its nearest parallel in climate in Asia. This is the region that gave us alfalfa.

Homemade Horsepower Pump.

The accompanying sketch shows a novel horsepower pump which is used on a northwestern ranch. This pump consists of a walking beam twenty to twenty-five feet long, which is connected at one end to the pump rod and at the other end to the shaft of an old mower wheel. This shaft is lengthened out to about twelve feet and bent into the shape of a crank near the end.

HOME REQUIRES NO DRIVER.

opposite the wheel. The bearings for this crank are made from a piece of bar iron, V shaped, with a flat bottom. This iron is bolted down loosely to a piece of timber fitted into the ground.

The horse is hitched on near the wheel. The V shaped bearing turns as the horse walks around in a circle, and the crank makes a double stroke for every revolution of the mower wheel.

Where a well is deep two mowers wheels may be put together to add tractive weight. A horse soon learns to operate this pump without a driver.

The Bug Nuisance.

Dr. H. T. Fennell of the Massachusetts Agricultural college says that five-sixths of all the living creatures of the globe are insects and that not more than one out of ten is friendly to man. He estimates that $2,000,000,000 worth of damage is annually done by insects and that known means of protection, properly used, could prevent two-thirds of this loss. He is therefore impressing the necessity of a close study by all classes of people of this question with the hope of saving forest and shade trees and crops.

How to Exterminates Fleas.

The following directions are given to those who are annoyed by fleas: Insect powder used freely in the house and about the clothing is recommended by one who tried it. For all outdoor buildings use air slaked lime. Scatter the lime about freely.

A sure way is first to clean all the loose rubbish out and burn, then take one quart of crude carbolic acid, four gallons of water and a spray pump and spray house and barn two or three times and you will get rid of them.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VII.—Fourth Quarter, For Nov. 14, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xviii, 11-31. Memory Verses, 28, 31—Golden Text, Rom. 1, 16—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

After three months at Malta of testifying of the Lord Jesus, the result of which eternity will declare, they proceeded toward Rome, tarrying three days at Syracuse, in Sicily, one day at Rhegium, in the extreme south of Italy, and seven days at Puteoli, where they found believers. The brethren at Rome, having heard of Paul's arrival at Puteoli, came out to meet him as far as Appii forum and the three taverns, thus encouraging him and causing thanksgiving to God. Then they returned with him to Rome. There is a suggestion here of the way it will be at the coming of the Lord. When He comes to the air on His way back to earth the saints shall all meet him in the air and later be manifested with Him in glory, when He shall come to the same Olivet from which He ascended (1 Thess. iv, 16-18; Col. iii, 4; Zech. xiv, 4). Arriving at Rome, the other prisoners were delivered to the captain of the guard, but Paul was permitted to dwell by himself with a soldier who kept him. For two whole years he dwelt at his own hired house and received all that came to him, preaching the things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ with the most perfect freedom (16, 30, 31). We shall meditate more fully on this delightful occupation presently. After these days in Rome Paul called the chief of the Jews together that he might state his case to them, which he briefly did in facts with which we are already familiar, and he added, "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain" (29).

In Joel iii, 16, we read that in the time of trouble the Lord will be the hope of His people and the strength of the children of Israel. In 1 Tim. i, 1, Paul says that he is an apostle of Jesus Christ by the commandment of God our Saviour and Lord Jesus Christ our hope, but in the New Testament I think we are safe in saying that "hope" always refers to the coming of Christ for His saints, as in Tit. ii, 13; Heb. vi, 18-20; Rom. viii, 24-25. The hope of Israel would then be the coming of Christ as Israel's Messiah to make of them a righteous nation and bless all nations through them. This fulfills Jesus, as the seed of David, risen from the dead, and also the resurrection of the saints according to Dan. xii, 1, 2. When Paul stated his case before these Jews of Rome they said that they had not heard of his troubles in Jerusalem, nor had any one spoken any harm of him, but they would like to hear what he had to say about this sect, which they knew was everywhere spoken against (22). It was foretold that it would be so (Ps. cxviii, 22; Isa. viii, 14, 15; Mt. 13; Luke ii, 34), and to this day it is so, for our Lord is still rejected and by the world disowned, but the strange thing is that, even among those who accept the Lord Jesus Christ as their Saviour and expect to spend eternity with Him and are with more or less zeal seeking to serve Him now, there is such antipathy to anything concerning His second coming or the future of Israel as a righteous nation to bring blessing to all nations.

It may truly be said that as the hope of His church or the hope of Israel He is still spoken against by those who, like these Jews, profess to honor His word. Well, they appointed him a day and came to his lodging, and from morning till evening he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus both out of the law of Moses and out of the prophets (23). For two years he continued to do this with all who came to him. He had but one topic—the Lord Jesus Christ and His kingdom. He had but one book—the Scriptures. If the Scriptures are not wholly and absolutely reliable, then preachers are simply lecturers, talking out of their own hearts their own messages, which are all vain words, for, apart from the word of God, which is forever settled in heaven (Mt. xxi, 30), we have no revelation of the will of God and the purpose of God; but, thank God, there are many left who, like Paul, believe God that all things shall be just as He has told us and who, like our blessed Lord, find in the Scriptures, the law, the prophets and the Psalms, the things concerning Himself (Luke xxi, 27, 44). The teacher of the Bible should be able to begin at Moses and from all the book point out the predictions concerning the sufferings of Christ and the glory that shall follow as they are set forth in shadow and symbol and in plain statements. Gen. iii, 15, has both in one verse; Gen. iii, 21, is full of the sufferings and the benefit to us; Gen. iii, 24, talks of the resurrection and the glory.

The story of Abel tells us in type of suffering and of the blood that speaks better things than that of Abel. The story of Enoch, tells of suffering and of the glory of translation. In Noah and Lot we learn, with our Lord's comment, of the judgments which must precede the kingdom. In Abraham and his son we see the great sacrifice and learn to look for the city. Joseph helps us to be patient and to believe that every step, however great the darkness, is a step toward the throne.

A Great Remedy

A. R. Silas, Peachtree, Ala., says: "I want you to allow me to recommend U-R-A-CURA. My wife has been sick every since we were married with kidney and liver troubles, and I had just about broke myself paying doctors' bills, and she could get no relief. We decided to try U-R-A-CURA, although we had lost all hope as we had been taken so much by patent medicines. I gave her a dose and she began improving, she took three bottles and is now doing her work singing like a bird. I think a man can save more money by keeping U-R-A-CURA than any medicine on earth." Druggists sell it at 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle.

WE DO BIG THINGS.

Some of the Masterful Achievements of Americans.

Americans founded the first government under which all men were equal before the law. Since the Declaration of Independence was published to the world the democratic idea has hourly received new impulse until now its march seems irresistible.

Americans were the first to demonstrate the feasibility of relying on a citizen soldiery to defend the land and its institutions against foreign and domestic attack.

Americans were the first to abolish titular distinctions and to deprive social eminence of any support save character or the consensus of those who choose to consider themselves as socially elect.

It was an American who invented the steamship. An American invented the telegraph. An American invented the electric light. An American invented the reaper, which makes it possible to feed the billion and more people on this planet. It was an American, too, who invented the sewing machine. Americans also were the conquerors of pain when they discovered how, by the use of sulphuric ether, the tenderest human nerve could be made insensible to the surgeon's steel.

A CURIOUS FLY.

This Wasplike New Zealand Insect Feeds on Spiders.

New Zealand boasts of a fly that feeds on spiders.

This fly is black and wasplike and, like the wasp, lives in a nest of clay built in a crevice, preferably in the upper folds of heavy window curtains. This is one of the great annoyances of the tidy housekeeper in New Zealand. Try as she will, it is almost impossible for her to keep these flies from setting up their homes at the tops of her curtains.

These nests of clay are made up of a series of separate cells, usually from five to eight in number. When the nest is built the fly goes after spiders.

It has no trouble in conquering the spinners of silky webs. They succumb more easily than do the American flies which are so unfortunate as to get tangled in a spider's weaving.

The fly carries the spiders to its home and imprisons each one in a cell. Here the fly lays a single egg, and when the grub hatches out it eats the spider that has been provided for it. When its food is all gone the mother fly goes out and catches another spider, and she keeps this up until the young fly is old enough to catch spiders for itself.—New York Telegram.

Emerson's Courtesy.

When Mrs. Mary A. Livermore was a little girl she was monitor at the Hancock school in Boston, and it was her duty to answer the door. One rainy day the bell rang, and she found at the door a tall, thin man, with a dripping umbrella, who inquired for the principal. She was just at the threshold and disreputable age, but there was something about this visitor which so impressed her that she led him in as politely as if he had been a prince, relieved him of his wet coat and umbrella, and after she had started to leave the room came back to draw a fire screen between him and the blaze for fear he would find it too hot. She afterward expressed to her teacher some surprise at the unwonted civilities she had felt impelled to show the stranger. He answered: "Ah, that was Ralph Waldo Emerson, and that is the effect he has upon everybody. He is so courteous himself that it calls out the latent courtesy in all others."

Bandages and Red Tape.

During the South African war Red-ward Kipling discovered at Cape Town a hospital without bandages and in desperate need of them. This, too, was in a city where bandages were for sale in many shops. He told an acquaintance that he was going to meet that want, and the gentleman at once offered to pay for all the bandages that Mr. Kipling would buy and take to the hospital. A cart was quickly loaded, and then the author was informed that under army rules the hospital authorities could not receive supplies from a private individual.

"Well," said he, "I will drop the packages on the pavement before the door and then tell them to come out and clear up the litter. Perhaps they can get them into the building in that way without tearing any red tape."

He drove off with the bandages, and the supplies were somehow smuggled into the hospital.

Just the Same.

"What is your name?" asked the judge of the prisoner.

"Easy, yer honor," answered the prisoner.

"Your full name?" asked the judge.

"Just the same, yer honor," answered the prisoner. "Full of sober 'Ladies' Home Journal."

The Outcomes.

Jack—Where is the pretty girl you were making love to a year ago?

Tom—Oh, she's married long ago.

"Jilted you, eh?"

"No, worse than that. She married me."

TREES IN HOLLAND.

All Streets and Canals Bordered With Elms or Lindens.

The average Dutch town is an attractive place in the summer months, since practically every street and canal is bordered with shade trees, which shut out the glare of the sun and offer cool and inviting avenues for the exploration of the tourist. The banks of these canals are generally terraced in two levels—the lower one for warehouses and the upper for shops or dwellings, but each elevation is planted with trees.

At best a city is an exceedingly poor location for tree culture. Narrow streets, with tall buildings, exclude the life giving sunlight; asphalt or closely paved walks prevent the necessary moisture from sinking into the ground and nourishing thirsty roots, and leakage from the gas mains is a deadly poison to all vegetation. For this reason care should be exercised in the selection of the variety of trees for street planting in order to get the best results. In Holland time has demonstrated that the elm and Linden should be placed in the first rank, for there are many examples of these species in Dutch towns which have withstood the ravages of more than two centuries. The elm appears to be the hardier of these two trees and will live under most adverse conditions.

The Dutch municipalities expend large sums each year for the preservation of their shade trees, but the results amply justify the cost for maintenance.—Harper's Weekly.

The following excerpts from the leading statesmen of Alabama are worth careful study and thought. Read, mark and digest them, and ask yourself, if such sagacious statesmen as these, as well as hundreds of others, see danger in the amendment, what reason have you to throw away your birthright for even less than a mess of pottage by voting in favor of it?

SENATOR BLANKHEAD.

"You may announce that I am opposed to the amendment. It is unnecessary and under conditions that exist in Alabama, extreme. The question of prohibition is not involved in this campaign. I supported prohibition whenever the issue was raised. But this is no prohibition or anti-prohibition fight. A useless and unnecessary fight has been forced on the people of the State."

"My opposition to the amendment is not new. No man who knows me well could have doubted where I stood. My friends knew where I stood. The campaign has become so warm, the people have become so stirred up over it, that I feel that both sides should know my position. I am no fence rider and I do not want any man to be able to say after the campaign, 'Yes, you said privately you were against it, but you would not come out publicly while the fight is going on.' I am therefore making the announcement that I am actively opposed to the amendment."

SENATOR JOHNSTON.

"I see no pressing need for this amendment. The first section adds nothing to the 'rigorous laws' we now have, and they need no amendment to support them."

"I do object to the second section. Whatever may be said in favor of it, the fact remains that if it does not confer power upon the legislature, and to the same extent strip from the people the rights now reserved, it is perfectly useless and should be rejected. If it does confer additional power, then we should reject it, because we are unwilling to surrender rights that we and our fathers have enjoyed from the foundation of our government."

"The issue is not open saloons or prohibition. If that were the issue, I should choose the present law instead of the old, although the Democratic party has always opposed sumptuary laws and laws of that nature, and stood in war and peace, for local self-government."

"If the amendment is defeated, the present laws remain in full force and effect, under which no saloons are possible. Every man must know that many who will vote against the amendment are unalterably opposed to the return of the saloon."

"If the amendment is ratified, it will be by greatly less than a majority of all the men who can qualify themselves to vote, and the agitation of this question will continue. It is a painful fact that probably less than half of the white men of the legal age to vote can participate in this election."

"The amendment is not self-executing and provides no penalties for its violation. Therefore the enforcement of prohibition in the state must remain subject to the action of each successive legislature and the providing by it of proper penalties. Therefore, in the end, even if the amendment is adopted, it must be left to the people to enforce through their legislatures; and I am persuaded that any attempt to drive them will not increase their readiness to insist upon a rigid enforcement of the law. For this reason, the hasty adoption of the amendment now urged upon us seems a mistake, even from the standpoint of those most zealous for prohibition."

"I see no necessity for the adoption at this time of the proposed amendment, and for this reason shall cast my vote against it."

"This is not a federal question, and I have been reluctant to express my views upon it, because I have many warm friends whose patriotism and integrity cannot be questioned, who do not agree with me; but in the past I never failed to take my place where my convictions led, whether with the majority or minority, and to fail now might be misconstrued."

"It is not my purpose to enter the campaign, for I believe the people entirely capable of deciding any question submitted to them and whatever their decision in this matter, I shall loyally accept it."

CONGRESSMAN CRAIG.

"I am opposed to the first section of the proposed amendment because I think it has no place in the constitution. Police regulations, such as those affecting the liquor traffic, should be left in the hands of people, acting through the legislature, to be modified or extended as the exigencies of the times and the will of the people demand. I firmly believe that the prohibition of the sale of alcoholic liquors, as beverages, is a good thing for Alabama; but I am not so bigoted as to believe that time and experiment may not prove me mistaken, and I would not be willing to tie the hands of future generations and legislature because prohibition now seems a good thing for the state."

"My next objection to the first section is that it absolutely prohibits the sale of whisky and all other malt or intoxicating liquors, except for medicinal purposes. This is going too far; and I do not believe that any reasonable man, be he prohibitionist or not, who will think over that phase of the proposed amendment fairly and sincerely will be willing to vote to forever prohibit a physician in Alabama from prescribing whisky or malt liquors for a patient, if he thinks the patient's condition demands it. Another objection to the first section is the well known and often cited one, that while it takes from the legislature the power to permit, license or regulate the liquor traffic in any way, it leaves it open for all of our present prohibitory laws to be repealed at the pleasure of any future legislature. If such repeal should be enacted it would leave the state in the ridiculous position of saying that the sale of liquor is unlawful, but prescribing no penalties for the infraction of the law."

The second section of the proposed amendment can mean but one thing: viz: that if it is adopted the Governor will call another extra session of the legislature for the purpose of passing a law, designating places where such liquors may not be stored or kept."

ed or kept. So far as I know the Governor has not said that he would not call an extra session, and judging the future by the past I take it that he will seize the first opportunity to call his legislators to Montgomery."

"Now under our present laws, which Judge Weekley gravely contends are constitutional, there is but one place where intoxicating liquors may be stored or kept, and that place is the home. What 'place' then, is left for the legislature to designate except the home? And if the home is only place that is now sacred from invasion, at what place can the second section of the proposed amendment be aimed? I can imagine no greater calamity than the enactment of a law which would lay open even the humblest home in this state to search for liquors stored or kept under provisions like that of the Fuller law, which allows search without requiring the necessary safeguards to protect the citizen from the informant. Whether the legislators will pass such a law or not I confess I am not to say; but I shall not vote to empower them to do it, nor shall I encourage them to do so by voting for the proposed amendment."

"Taken together, the two sections form a queer anomaly. In one, the fear of the legislature is so great that all power to regulate a formerly legitimate traffic is taken away from it; while in the other the trust and confidence in the legislature is so over-riding that it must be entrusted with the regulation and, if necessary, the invasion of that which is most dear to the heart of every freeman, and which has been sacred, even from the hands of kings, since our forefathers wrested the Magna Charter from royalty on the Field of Runnymede."

THE AMENDMENT.

Section 1. The manufacture, sale and keeping for sale of alcoholic and malt liquors and other intoxicating beverages shall be forever prohibited in this State; but alcohol may be sold for medicinal, scientific and mechanical purposes, and wine for sacramental purposes, under such regulations as the Legislature may have prescribed or may hereafter prescribe.

Sec. 2. Nothing in the Constitution of Alabama shall be construed to prevent the Legislature under the police power from designating places where such liquors may not be stored or kept."

THE CLANTON MILLINERY CO.

Is one of the latest additions to Clanton's business center, and is the most attractive and commodious places of its kind in town, situated on southeast corner of the square. They invite you to call on them when in town and make their store your headquarters. Their stock of Millinery is complete; their Trimmer from St. Louis is right up to date. If its quality, style and prices you are looking for, then this is the place for you. Mrs. Clara Mullins is general manager, and will glad to wait on you.

C. R. Mullins will continue his same old business, of Fire Insurance, Life Insurance, Sewing Machines, Pianos and Organs, in the new Company's store. He thanks you for past favors and solicits future business.

Yours truly,

THE CLANTON MILLINERY CO.

Job Printing cheap at THE BANNER

YOU'LL

be pleased to see the new colors and swell patterns which are shown this season in our HART SCHAFFNER & MARX clothes. It's going to be another lively season: with many smart fashions in weaves and model; new ideas in young men's styles; new snappy pockets, and finish of sleeves.

Many men who are older will want this younger stuff; some of it is a little extreme, but we have good styles for everybody.

We want you to see the new Tans, Grays, Olives, Browns; the Fine Blue Serges, and Dressier Fabrics; want to show you the new ideas in Fall Overcoats.

Ladies!

We have a beautiful line of light weight suitings for fall, don't fail to see them before they are all gone we have some excellent values at 12 1/2 to 25¢ per yard.

Nice line of wool and silk goods on hand.

We also have a store chuck full of new every-day-staples that have just arrived, we are selling them on last year's prices when cotton was 3 and 9¢ per pound; better buy early this time everything you need for fall and winter in cotton goods, prices will be much higher when this present stock is gone

Have you noticed our Collars, Belts, Gloves, Laces, Embroidery?

When you want a real swell pair of Shoes come to this store and save walking; Tans, Green, Oxblood, Vici, Patent Leather.

A glance at our SHOW WINDOWS will convince you that this line of Clothing is in a class by itself; if you do not see the particular shade or model you are looking for in the Show Windows, step inside and let us show you, as it is impossible for us to put all the different styles that we carry in the Show Windows; every Suit that is not right, or not satisfactory, we are authorized to refund your money. Is it possible to guarantee anything higher?

It is also about time you were fitting yourself up with your Fall Hat, Shirts, Collars, Ties, Fancy Vest, Underwear, etc.

Wegons, Buggies, Surries, Harness of all descriptions, International Harvester Co's line of Farm Machinery, including Gasoline Engines

If you have Cotton to sell, we are glad to buy or help you sell it; and if you have anything to buy, all we ask is a chance to show you.

THIS STORE IS THE HOME OF HART SCHAFFNER & MARX CLOTHES!

About Your Drug Purchases.

Few people have the opportunity to become competent judges of the real value of the majority of things sold in a drug store. Surely there is no class of merchandise upon which you must depend so much on the integrity and business honor of a store as when buying drug store goods.

The highest principles of business integrity are behind every transaction at this store, and when you trade here you have the comforting assurance that the goods are in every way exactly as represented.

So why not buy your drug store wants here? We have a large, well assorted stock of "quality" mer-

Business Men's League,

 COMMERCE BUILDING
FRANK P. CHAFFEE Secretary.
 You may have heard that Birmingham is a great city. WE WILL PROVE IT TO YOU

ATTENTION FARMERS.

Have you ever enjoyed before such
 prosperity, high prices for cotton,
 and good prices for your cotton seed.
 We should be very thankful this
 year, as all this is evidence convincing that the south with her crops
 that others can not supply is certain
 to grow in wealth, and the industrious farmers has the greatest advantage of all others to accumulate,
 as he actually grows the products
 that are worth so much. And to our farmer friends around Clanton,
 we want to say that we are still devating all in our power to give you the very best results at our Clanton store. We try each day to do better work, and get more out from the seed, than the day before. Won't
 you help us with your patronage
 that we may help you by continuing to improve our plant. Keep your cotton dry, and don't allow
 trash and foreign matter in it, as it
 works a hardship on us trying to keep up the gin saws. We are preparing now to resharpen our saws
 that we might be able to gin your
 last bales of cotton as good as the
 first bales, and it is necessary if we
 do good work for you, to keep our plant in good shape on the last bales as on the first bales. Our
 work this year is better than last,
 and if we can only get your heavy co-operations and patronage we will certainly in the end give Clanton
 farmers such results as no other
 communities get.

Thanking you for your patronage,
 and trusting that you will speak to
 your neighbor in our behalf, we beg
 to remain,

Very truly yours,
CLANTON GINERY,
 J. A. Maddox, Manager.

Editor Banner—Will you give me just a little space in your paper just what we mothers need about whiskey and wine in the home? I have kept household for four years and have never had any wine or had any about the house, and have been two or three years without campfire. Whiskey can very well do without. We would rejoice to see the last drop going in the ground. How many mothers lay a right after night, her heart aching on account of the children that can be made into the church purposes. People are wrong road anyhow for following Christ unless time of whiskey has been the ruin of your boys when the older ones were the cause of the trouble. You need not say they can't without a little wine or whiskey at home, they can if they try. Now, if we mothers can't get good towards making the boys are ready. If people are ready, take a dose of J. AUNT DIX.

When a cold becomes settled in the system, it will take a long time to cure it, and the remedy to use is Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will cure more than any other, and also the system in a natural and healthy condition. Sold by all druggists.

THE OFFICIAL BALLOT.

Following is a copy of the official ballot that will be handed to you on election day.

Shall the following be adopted as Article XIX of the Constitution of Alabama:

Section 1. The manufacture, sale and keeping for sale of alcoholic and malt liquors and other intoxicating beverages shall be forever prohibited in this State; but alcohol may be sold for medical, scientific and mechanical purposes, and wine for sacramental purposes, under such regulations as the Legislature may have prescribed or may hereafter prescribe.

Section 2. Nothing in the Constitution of Alabama shall be construed to prevent the Legislature from designating places where such liquors may be stored or kept.

Make a cross mark (X) as shown above.

But one more week from next Monday and this unwarranted and uncalled for election, with all its strife and bitterness, will pass into history, the amendment being buried so deep beneath an avalanche of votes that it will never be resurrected.

If anyone had any doubts about the intentions of the framers of the amendment in regard to the home, those doubts are now dispelled.

Senator Hambrugher, during a speech at Headland, unfolded the picture, as disclosed by Harry L. Martin, of Ozark, the trusted lieutenant of Governor Comer.

Senator Hambrugher declared that the affidavit shows in the clearest manner that it was the purpose of the amendment politicians to provide a law for searching the home, after making it unlawful to have whiskey in the home or on the person. Great significance is attached to the affidavit of Sheriff Andrews, who is a man of the highest standing in Dale county.

The affidavit follows:

"State of Alabama, County of Dale.

"This day and date came one B. L. Andrews, before me, J. W. Corbitt, Register in Chancery for Dale County, and after being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is Sheriff of Dale County, that he is a member of the Baptist Church, and that he was born in three miles of the city of Ozark, and that he has never resided out of Dale County; that he is a member of the Masonic order; that Harry L. Martin did have his office in the sheriff's office, and that during said time, he, the said Martin, did discuss the present issue with me as follows: Martin said to me, 'We can't stop the people from shipping whiskey into the State on account of the interstate commerce law, but if we can get the constitutional amendment bill through, then we will have another meeting of the Legislature next spring, provided the amendment is ratified, then we will pass laws prohibiting persons from carrying it on their person or keeping it in their homes; then, if they get it to the express office they can't get it out, and we will have them.'"

"This conversation took place after the amendment had passed the lower house and was pending in the Senate.

"Harry L. Martin is for the amendment.

"Signed this 10th day of November, 1909."

"B. L. Andrews,

"Sheriff Dale County.

"Subscribed and sworn to before me.

"J. W. Corbitt,

"Register in Chancery Dale County."

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Convention of the Fifth District, held at the Verbena Methodist church, Sunday, Nov. 14, was successful in every respect.

The following schools were represented: Corinth, Maple Springs, Evergreen, Messer's Chapel, Shady Grove, Salem, Verbena Baptist and Methodist. It was deeply regretted that delegates from Mountain Creek, Providence and Chestnut Creek were not present.

The devotional services of morning and afternoon sessions were conducted by Rev. R. J. Mills and Dr. H. W. Cuffey.

Very interesting and instructive addresses were delivered by Dr. A. Horn of Thorsby, Mr. W. B. Davidson of Montgomery, Judge L. H. Reynolds, and Mr. A. B. Wisingham of Marbury.

Under the capable leadership of Mr. D. S. Robinson, the district work is making good progress and the spirit of hearty sympathy and cordial co-operation manifest throughout the district makes it reasonably certain that the blue star on No. 5 is a "fixed star."

The superintendents made encouraging reports, indicative of improvement in their schools.

The following officers were elected: D. S. Robinson, president; W. T. Johnson, vice president; Mrs. Agnes Farr, secretary.

A vote of thanks was tendered the ladies of Verbena for the very bountiful dinner served at church.

The next meeting will be held in February, the place to be announced later. AGNES FARR, Sec.

ATTENTION FARMERS.

Have you ever enjoyed before such
 prosperity; high prices for cotton,
 and good prices for your cotton seed.
 We should be very thankful this
 year, as all this is evidence convincing that the south with her crops
 that others can not supply is certain
 to grow in wealth, and the industrious farmers has the greatest advantage of all others to accumulate,
 as he actually grows the products
 that are worth so much. And to our farmer friends around Clanton,
 we want to say that we are still doing all in our power to give you the
 very best results at our Gin at Clan-
 ton. We try each day to do better
 work, and get more lint from the seed, than the day before. Won't
 you help us with your patronage
 that we may help you by continuing to improve our plant. Keep your cotton dry, and don't allow
 trash and foreign matter in it, as it
 works a hardship on us trying to keep up the gin saws. We are preparing now to resharpen our saws
 that we might be able to gin your
 last bales of cotton as good as the
 first bales, and it is necessary if we
 do good work for you, to keep our
 plant in as good shape on the last
 bales as on the first bales. Our
 work this year is better than last,
 and if we can only get your hearty
 co-operation and patronage we will certainly to the end give Clanton
 farmers such results as no other
 communities get.

Thanking you for your patronage,
 and trusting that you will speak to
 your neighbor in our behalf, we beg
 to remain.

Very truly, yours,
CLANTON GINNEY.

THE THING THAT WAS BEST.

They Concluded It Was Above Even Music or Painting.

By VIRGINIA LEILA WENTZ.
Copyright, 1928, by Associated Literary Press.

He had not come to the little seaside place for idleness, although it was true, because he was tired and overworked. He had come for rest and recuperation. He had brought with him canvas and colors, and by permission of his landlady he was allowed to improvise a tiny studio in a building outside the boarding house.

She, too, because she was nervous and restless, had come for change and quiet. Like him, also, because she loved her art, the summer could not be enjoyed to the exclusion of that art. Hers was music. She had an exquisite voice and was studying for the operatic stage. The landlady considered them both an addition to her little seaside place.

To be a really great painter was the man's highest aim. To be a singer, in the same sense, was hers. And there was one other point of similarity—for the furtherance of their respective arts love and marriage had been quite laid by.

On the veranda of the cottage the ladies who knitted and embroidered called him hard names because he chose rather to be alone in the boat or strolling on the sands or cooped up in his six foot studio than to mingle with them. But this was before she came. The night that she arrived he did an unusual thing. He took a rocker on the veranda, and he kept it in the shade of the vines, whence he could see her face. Often, after that, he watched her furtively as he heard her practicing. Yet he evinced no interest in her voice.

His omission and his commission both were observed by her, and both were resented. If she was beautiful at all, she thought, she was a musician first and a beauty afterward. It gave her no pleasure to be admired for her appearance by one who had no appreciation of the music.

One day one of the ladies who knitted told her that Max Burgess had paid her a compliment.

"Yes," asked Judith, with a delicate upturning of her eyebrows. But it was with difficulty that she concealed her expectation.

The woman clicked her needle several times. "He said he would love to paint you as you looked when you sang," was her answer.

"Thanks!" returned Judith, flushing crimson and raising her dainty chin in the air. "I do not aspire to be an artist's model."

The next morning at breakfast Mr. Burgess inquired if she would care to come to his studio and look at some canvases. Now, if Max Burgess took little interest in her art, she, in turn, took as little in his. She knew nothing of pictures. Nevertheless she went.

"You say nothing," he observed, with a strange, slow smile after she had made a survey of his work.

"I don't know good pictures from bad," answered she. "To me, personally, they are equally unappealing."

"Not seriously?" The smile had disappeared.

"Oh, seriously. You see," with a provokingly exquisite gesture of her slender hand, "it's much the same as your indifference to music. Fancy your liking music, for example, simply for its visible effect on a singer's face!" She was rapidly growing indignant.

He felt the justness of her rebuke, but the artist in him was awake.

"Ah, it is as a singer that I wish to paint you!" he cried. "You know, people forgive artists for personalities. The other day, when you were singing that thing that made your color play and your eyes gleam, I veritably tingled for my brushes. Would you—perhaps—some time?"

"Decidedly not," answered she. "I could not dream of so degrading my art. You would like me to sing, to let my soul utter itself in my voice—so that you might get the effect on canvas?" There was no mistaking the ringing scorn in her voice.

"Indeed, I am very sorry if I have offended you," said he.

After he had seen her to the house he came back into the studio. One after another, slowly and discontentedly, he examined his pictures. One after another he laid them down with a sense of disappointment and unneeded longing.

"I wonder?" he questioned vaguely, going to the window and looking toward the sea. "I wonder?"

But the sea rolled on and on, under the expanse of enigmatical sky, and gave him no answer.

One day, some weeks later, Judith was on the solitary little pier when Max Burgess came for his boat. That morning she had happened to hear him speaking to a servant. He was giving some orders about the packing of his effects. And now, as she stood on the hot sands, a reckless impulse came to her.

"Why are you leaving?" said she. "My work here doesn't get on very well. I'm falling back, somehow." His eyes were on the horizon.

"Would you still care about painting me?"

"Would I care?" His eyes were no longer on the horizon. It must have been that which made the blood fly to her cheeks.

"Well," said she, "if you ask me to row out with you in your boat we might talk it over."

So they rowed out and presently they were far, far from shore. He must have been looking at her hands instead of the land, or he would have seen that they were getting into a very heavy sea; that each moment the skies were growing darker. Spray wet Judith's dark hair and gleamed there just for an appreciable fraction of a second like milky agates in the bed of a black stream.

"Isn't it glorious?" cried she, with sudden joy.

His eyes questioned her keenly. She challenged, and then he understood.

With an effort he brought the boat around and pulled for safety. His thin jersey showed the lines of his strong, supple body. The muscles of his arms and chest rose superbly. Judith watched him, fascinated. Then the rotten oak cracked.

She tore off a strip of her petticoat to bind it and make it strong enough for work.

He put an oolika about her. Her hair brushed his face. He kissed it furtively, but she detected him. Willfully she drew a damp curl forth from under the edge of the oolika where he had tucked it—and then she laughed at the look in his eyes.

"Attend to the boat!" cried she. And the oolika was new—rich yellow; the hood was scarlet lined, her hair was like midnight, and her face was a flower. Yet he, the artist, the lover of color, must needs attend to the boat!

When they were safe at last, when he was helping her ashore, he looked at her with a protecting tenderness she had never imagined him capable of.

"Ah," cried she, "if only you cared for my art!" She looked on at him. His hand masterfully sought hers, then:

"But there's something better, sweetheart—there's something better than even music or painting. Have we found it, do you think?"

"I think," she admitted, reflectively and demurely, while a smile was running riot over her plump face—"I think we've found the thing that is best."

The Sort of Table He Wanted.

The following conversation was overheard between a joiner and his customer a short time ago:

Joiner—Please, sir, I've brought the table you ordered me to make.

Customer—Well, put it down here, my man, and let's see what sort of job you've made of it.

The man set it down in the middle of the room, and the customer examined it with the air of a critic.

Customer—Why, my man, there is here a crack filled up with putty.

Joiner—Yes, sir, well, sir, I know about that, but it won't be noticed when it sets hard.

Customer (coming across some more putty)—But here's some more, my man. What is the meaning of this?

Joiner—Well, sir, you see, a little bit of wood chipped off the corner, and I just put a little putty there to fill up. It won't do no harm, sir, when it's set hard.

Customer (finding some more putty patches)—Look here, my man, this won't do. Why, here's a big lump right in the middle of this leg. What can you say about that?

Joiner (scratching his head and trying hard to find some excuse by which to retrieve his honor)—Well, sir, that's no harm whatever, and the putty when it sets hard will be firmer and harder than the wood. So, you see, it will be all the better if you wait a bit, sir.

Customer (sarcastically)—Here, my good man, just take this table home and bring me one made of putty altogether. I want a good strong one, and you can fill up the cracks with wood.—London Tit-Bits.

The Cent and Half Cent.

First coined in 1787 by the United States government, the federal one-cent piece was antedated by copper cents struck by several states. Very much before being admitted to the Union coined the first cents in the country in June, 1785, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey also put the copper coins into circulation. Under the constitution the first coinage act, passed in 1792, authorized a cent of 244 grains. In 1793 it was reduced to 208 grains and in 1796 to 168 grains. The 168 grain "copper" remained unchanged except in pattern, until 1857, passing through seven designs. Until 1857 half cents also were coined. In that year the half cent was abolished and a new cent was ordered, weighing only seventy-two grains and composed of 88 per cent of copper and 12 per cent of zinc. In 1864 the present bronze cent was authorized. This weighs forty-eight grains and is composed of 95 per cent copper and 5 per cent zinc.—Argonaut.

What Would You Do?

In case of a burn or scald what would you do to relieve the pain? Such injuries are liable to occur in any family and everyone should be prepared for them. Chamberlain's Salve applied on a soft cloth will relieve the pain almost instantly, and unless the injury is a very severe one, will cause the parts to heal without leaving a scar. Cures Dyspepsia; Trial Is Free

It is a popular mistake that only wealthy people who eat rich and highly-spiced foods suffer from dyspepsia, or, as it is also known, indigestion. The laborer in the street, the worker in the field also finds himself a victim of this disorder. Among the very greatest sufferers from it are women.

Dyspepsia is indicated by a constant feeling of lassitude, by loss of appetite and troubled sleep, by sour stomach and distress after eating, by bad complexion and listless nerves.

There is no surer and speedier cure for this trouble than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which dyspepsia have been using successfully for twenty years. This great herb-lavative compound cures Capt. Clark, of Buffalo, N.Y., of dyspepsia, and sour stomach that had had for forty years, or until the lucky day that he heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It cured Mrs. Adams, of Montgomery, Ala., after suffering continuously for sixteen months. These are only a few of the many. But it is not expensive to be cured with this grand remedy, as it can be bought at any drug store in a 50-cent or $1 bottle.

Your very neighbors are probably suffering from dyspepsia, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 509 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

YOUNG DUCKS.

They Have No Instinctive Impulse to Enter the Water.

It has turned out, under the searching experimentation of recent years, that much that we have supposed to be instinct in animals is not instinct at all. For example, the young duck proves to have no instinctive impulse to enter the water, does not recognize the element by sight and is, in short, in precisely the same situation as a chick until, by happy chance, it gets its legs wet. Wet legs, however, and the lift of the water on the body at once start up the swimming reaction, and away sails the duckling, as chickens and children do not.

The chick, on its part, has a definite instinct to peck at any small object that catches its eye. That takes care of its feeding. But the chick has no corresponding instinct to drink and would die of thirst before it would recognize water by sight alone. Drinking it has to learn for itself by pecking at dewdrops or spots of light on the surface of the water or particles at the bottom of its cup. Even the hen, contrary to general belief, proves to have no instinctive fear of the water for her offspring. A hen that has raised a few broods of ducks and seen them take to the water becomes highly distressed when a subsequent hatch of chickens do not swim. In fact, hens have been reported under these circumstances to lead their chicks to the water's edge and push them in.—McClure's Magazine.

NESTS IN GULF WEED.

Breeding Place of the Flying Fish in the Sargasso Sea.

In the middle of the north Atlantic there is an area of comparatively still water almost equal to continental Europe in extent and more or less covered with floating seaweed. It was known as the Mar de Sargasso to Columbus and the early navigators and is the Sargasso sea of modern geographers.

The floating seaweed was formerly supposed to have grown near the Bahama and Florida shores and to have drifted to its present position. It is now, however, known to grow and propagate itself where it is found. In it are found globular masses of weed containing fish eggs and known as fish nests.

Investigations show that the floating weed of the Sargasso sea is the chosen breeding place of species of flying fish. The eggs found in the nests were attributed to certain species of fish found resting on them, but careful examination of the eggs shows that they really belong to flying fish.

Apparently, however, the flying fish do not make the nests themselves. Each end of the egg of these fish is furnished with bunches of very long filamentary tendrils, and by means of these the finely divided patches of the Sargasso weed have been caught together in globular masses. The eggs may be said to have made their own nest.—London Field.

PRODUCE PLAGUES.

Stop Their Ravages of Crops and Orchards.

The annual damage caused by field mice in crops, nurseries and orchards in the United States has been estimated at $1,000,000. There are fifty species of mice.

With few exceptions the short tailed mice are readily distinguishable from other mice by their stout, chunky bodies, short legs, short, round tails, muzzles, short ears and rather small eyes. The species shown in the illustration are dark brownish or grayish in color and considerably larger than the common house mouse.

They live almost everywhere in open meadows, where their presence may be detected among the grass and weeds by small, well defined, crooked tracks, along which at intervals are small mounds of fresh grass or other material. In alfalfa or clover fields the numerous burrows are usually along ditches or about ditches, where dead plants are almost entirely evidence of their work.

In the past many methods of destroying field mice have been tried,
but the records describe no instance where well established plagues have been successfully suppressed. Failing to recognize the early stage of the plague, the people in stricken districts did not usually adopt vigor-

measures until after the fields were swarming with mice. The fallow, then, has been due partly to lack of cooperation and partly to lack of knowledge of quick, cheap and effective measures. Without witnessing a plague one can hardly form a conception of the almost incredible numbers of mice and of the magnitude of the task of destroying them.

Among methods of little value which have been tried in other countries to kill the mice are the use of poison bait and the use of traps. The use of poison bait is entirely inadequate for the purpose of well established plagues, especially where farms are as large as in the United States. Among such methods are digging trenches or pits around the bottom of the field, killing the mice by traps, clubs or dogs, burning the herbage in infested areas, flooded the fields. The elimination of these leaves as methods generally applicable for suppressing plagues is the employment of disease poisoning.

Wrapping Fruit in Paper.

Any method of handling apples that shortens the ripening after the fruit is harvested and shortens the period of commercial life. Any treatment that checks the ripening prolongs the marketing life. The value of wrapping apples has been tested in both seasons by the experiment station of the College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts. The comparison was made with duplicate quantities of fruit which were grown and handled in the same way. One lot was not wrapped, and the other each apple was wrapped in unprinted newspaper.
The same varieties like the Gano, Steen, Salome, Winesap and other hard, late ripening sorts the advantage of wrapping in paper was very apparent. But with tender varieties like the Clemens, Jonathan and Wealthy a wrapper was a disadvantage in extending the life of the fruit, preserving its natural firmness and lessening the amount of decay. A wrapper serves to reduce the amount of decay that may result from poor handling or from rough handling in transportation. It retards shriveling and adds to the value of the fruit by preserving its attractive appearance.
The wrappers cost about 20 cents per hundred for newspaper 9 by 12

Luxurious Beehives.

A German master in a small German village, being very fond of bees, resolved to build for them something novel in the way of a house. As beehives are usually of the same size, color and shape, it is sometimes difficult for a beehive to find his own particular home.
The German master decided to give his hives some distinguishing marks and so the buildings represent an estate, house, cottage, windmill, etc. There are also a number of animals, including an elephant, carved in wood, closely resembling their real brothers. The owner is naturally proud of his creation and is constantly enlarging it.

EDUCATION FOR THE BOYS.

Why Sons of Small Farmers Develop Managerial Ability.

The education acquired on the small farm broadens citizenship because it is a many sided education and gives correct impressions of many phases of life. All over the world the small, independent farmers are staunch supporters of conservative government.
They are intense lovers of home and opposed to radical changes.

Ultimately the small farmer learns to keep a reserve of cash against emergencies, and these aggregated accumulations become very important factors in the capital of the nation, for they are more reliable than deposits from commercial sources. The vast sums of money necessary to carry on the business of a nation are not derived from the deposits of capitalists, but from the aggregation of millions of thrifty small depositors. This is especially true in England, France, Germany and the United States.

It has been observed for years that the sons of small farmers develop managerial ability. From their earliest years they are compelled to do things and to act independently. It is from this source that the greatest number of managers of the various enterprises
of our country have been drawn.

The great value of educating and training youth for agriculture is so universally conceded that it does not require discussion. The necessity of presenting and impressing better types of husbandry upon adult farmers through demonstrations under their care is rapidly being accepted by the American people as a most important means of education for the rural masses and necessary to any general and rapid advancement.

If all is considered education that "leads out," develops or trains the individual, then the amount of education acquired in even the best schools is only a fraction of what the average man must know to succeed in life. It is, then, of the highest importance to the state that this greater mass of knowledge should be correct, broad, conservative and elevating. Liberal provision has been made for schools

by the state, by churches and by individual gifts, but the molding of this greater knowledge to the best interests of society has been mainly left to the caprice of individual effort. The state can with propriety specially foster such conditions of society, such lines of industry or such occupations
as evidently tend to mental and physical vigor, to breadth of understanding, to the best citizenship and to the stability of the state. For these ends no more potent influence has been found than an intelligent, prosperous and contented body of thrifty small farmers.

Picking and Packing Apples.

The harvest of the apple is here
and will continue for some weeks.
Here are some suggestions that may assist the growers:

Pick into baskets. They should be about half bushel and round, with drop handles. The baskets should be smooth on the inside—that is, free from strips around the inside or bottom, lined with burlap to prevent bruising, and a short iron hook should be attached to the handle to suspend the basket from the limbs, so as to enable the picker to use both hands.

The great advantage in using the basket lies largely in the fact that if

HARVESTING THE APPLE CROP.

the apples are carefully placed in the same they are not bruised.

Apples packed from the table and immediately placed in cold storage (if they are to be put into cold storage)
will give far the better results.
This method adds two to four months
to the keeping qualities of the fruit.
You cannot afford to let your fruit decay in the trees or in a building for two or three weeks before you barrel.

Early in the morning in a warm latitude or harvesting during a warm September or October must be quickly handled. But when properly handled at picking time there will not be much room for complaint. A good barrel is essential if you wish to store your fruit, have it keep well and sell. A tight barrel is the best, and the better it is made the better results you will have. There will be less loss from shrinkage of fruit, from rats and mice and other causes.

In hauling barreled apples to the car and in shipping the barrels on the side. Never stand them on end if you wish the fruit to remain tight in the barrels.

Keep Celery Growing.

Celery should be kept growing rapidly and without interruption. A check in growth will often make the plant go to seed instead of producing edible stalks.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VIII.—Fourth Quarter,
For Nov. 21, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, II Cor. xi, 21, to xii, 10.—Memory Verses, 24, 25.—Golden Text, II Cor. xii, 9.—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The topic of this lesson is "Paul's Story of His Life," and yet that seems to be more fully told in his testimony before Agrippa in chapter xxi, or even in his address from the castle stairs
in chapter xii, or more concisely in Phil. iii, or more fully by putting these three records together. The verses assigned as for today's study are rather a resume of his sufferings, with special reference to his being stoned to death at Lystra and his marvelous experience at that time. With such a record as that in chapter xi, 23-28, who is there today who has anything that can begin to compare with it in the matter of suffering for Christ's sake?
At the time of his conversion the Lord said to Ananias, "I will show him how great things he must suffer for my sake" (Acts ix, 16), and this seems in our eyes as if he had filled the bill quite fully. Let us understand a little more fully the service of suffering as set forth in Rom. v, 3; Phil. i, 29;
Col. i, 24; Rev. ii, 10, and elsewhere.
It is made unmistakably plain that by the suffering of Christ in our stead,
as our sin bearer, all who receive Him are made meet to be partakers of the inheritance, having in Him redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins (Col. i, 12-14).

There is, however, another phase of the suffering question in Heb. ii, 10, where it speaks of bringing us to His glory and of Him as the captain of our salvation being made perfect through sufferings. He is our high priest, who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, for He was in all points tempted like as we are (Heb. iv, 15). Now, since by His attainment He has made us kings and priests unto God, having washed us from our sins in His own blood, and we are to reign with Him on the earth (Rev. i, 5, 6; v, 10), we must remember that to be fitted to reign with Him we must suffer with Him (II Tim. ii, 12). By His attainment made fit for His presence, but by our suffering with Him here as His redeemed ones made fit to fill the place in His kingdom which He is preparing for us while He prepares us for it; hence we have a little light on the great mystery of the believer's sufferings as seen everywhere in greater or less degree.

If by His grace we are patient under all our trials we are winning for ourselves a special crown—the crown of life (Jas. i, 12; Rev. ii, 20), which we shall have to cast at His feet in that day. And not only so, but the power of Christ is seen upon us to His glory,
the patience under trial as it could not otherwise be seen. Paul therefore says, "Most gladly will I glory in my infirmities that the power of Christ may rest upon me" (xii, 9). This is something like Phil. i, 20, where he says,
"Christ shall be magnified in my body,
whether it be by life or by death."

While Paul had unusual fellowship in suffering, he had also some unusual revelations. Not only was his conversion unique, but the various manifestations of the Lord to him afterward were very remarkable, as was also the revelation of "the mystery" of which he so often speaks. He tells us that, lest the abundance of the revelations should unduly exalt him, there was given him a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan, to buffet him. He tells us that he asked the Lord three times to deliver him from it, but the answer was, "My grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness" (verse 9). I do not know how we can be quite sure as to what this thorn in the flesh was, till Paul himself shall some day tell us if it is best for us to know. Some one has said that if any one has a thorn in the flesh he may find a bit of comfort in supposing that that was just what Paul had. This certainly is true—that if any believer has a physical infirmity and cannot get it removed by prayer, or by the physician's skill
then the answer to Paul must be accepted and the Lord trusted for grace to bear it meekly for His glory, for,
while these words were said to Paul,
they were written for us.

As to the special vision and revelation of our lesson, it seems to have been about the time that Paul was stoned to death at Lystra, and it is quite probable that while Paul's dead body was being dragged out of Lystra (Acts xiv, 19) he was in the third heaven, or paradise, which he here describes, and saw and heard things that he could not put into earthly language.
We have no record of anything that Lazarus of Bethany said when he came back from the dead, probably because words could not utter it. The best thing I have ever read on these heavenly realities is "The Trance of Rev. William Tennent," once a minister at Freehold, N. J., who was dead for three days and afterward preached the gospel for many years. It is a little tract published by Miss M. E.
Munson, 77 Bible House, New York.
The foundation of all that is beautiful in this lesson is to be able to say, "I know a man in Christ" (xii, 2), for as less we are in Christ we are certainly lost, but being in Him all is well for time and eternity. Then to be able to say truly "Christ liveth in me" (xii, 5), as is the privilege of every true believer, insures the manifestation of His life in us.

A Great Remedy

A. R. Silas, Pocomoke, Ala., says:
"I want you to allow me to recommend U-R-A-CURA. My wife has been sick every since we were married with Kidney and Liver troubles, and I had just about broke myself paying doctors' bills, and she could get no relief. We decided to try U-R-A-CURA, although we had lost all hope as we had been taken so much with patent medicines. I gave her a dose and she began improving.
She took three bottles and is now enjoying her work singing like a bird. I think a man can save more money
by keeping U-R-A-CURA than any medicine on earth." Druggists sell it at 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle.

LIFE STORY OF JOHN G. CARLISLE

Kentuckian Who Ascended Ladder of Fame Step by Step

STUDIOUS EVEN AS A BOY.

Now Former Secretary of the Treasury Was Suddenly Cut Short in a Political Career by His Mother—Ready Debater and Widely Inform.

John Griffin Carlisle, former secretary of the treasury under President Cleveland and one of the most interesting characters in American politics, who was recently taken as a private patient to a hospital in New York city, has had a most distinguished career. He was born in Campbell county, Ky., on Sept. 5, 1825, and was admitted to the Kentucky bar in 1854. He served several terms in the Kentucky lower house and also as state senator. From 1871 to 1875 he was lieutenant governor of Kentucky, member of congress from 1877 to 1880 and from 1880 to 1883 United States senator. He was secretary of the treasury from

JOHN G. CARLISLE.

1883 to 1897 and has practiced law in New York city since his retirement from active participation in politics.

Fond of Reading and Figuring.

As a boy Mr. Carlisle was studious. He was raised on a farm, with much of the ordinary labor of farm life thrown upon him, but for this he showed little aptitude. His mind turned rather to reading and figuring, and many a task was neglected to give play to the natural propensities of the young student. One day when he had been sent to plow his mother was attracted by loud talking and shouting, and she found the boy standing on a stump making a political oration to a fancied assemblage. The field was unplowed, and the horse stood hitched to a fence close by. His mother suddenly cut the oration short and asked how much of the plowing had been done. The boy answered that he guessed he hadn't done much, as the horse was tired.

John Carlisle had a common school education, but at fifteen he became a teacher as well as student, devoting the time not given to his class to study and reading. In this way he advanced rapidly and at seventeen he was principal of the school.

It was not long, however, before his ambition took another turn, and he studied law with J. W. Stevenson and W. B. Kinkhead and at twenty-three was admitted to the bar.

Beginning of His Political Career.

While yet a tall, attenuated lad of nineteen he was taken by Governor Stevenson on a political tour, and it frequently happened that the governor incapacitated himself by overeating, to which he was prone, and that young Carlisle had to speak for him. It is thus seen that the future senator began his political career very early, showing great precociousness even in the early maturing western country of over forty years ago.

Then came his steady advancement, not only in law, but in politics. He was a member of the state house of representatives for 1850-51; was nominated for presidential elector on the Democratic ticket in 1854, but declined; was elected to the state senate in February, 1856, and re-elected in August, 1858; was a delegate at large from Kentucky to the national Democratic convention at New York in July, 1860; was elected lieutenant governor of Kentucky in 1871 and served until 1875; was alternate presidential elector for the state at large in 1876, and served in the Forty-fifth, Forty-sixth, Forty-seventh, Forty-eighth, Forty-ninth, Fiftieth and Fifty-first congresses; was elected speaker of the Forty-eighth, Forty-ninth and Fiftieth congresses and was elected to the United States senate in May, 1880, to fill the term of Senator Beck, who died.

Ready, Resourceful Debater.

Mr. Carlisle soon after his appointment in congress won a place for himself as a ready, resourceful debater and a man of wide information, especially on all questions of finance. He had courteous, dignified manners and admirable tact and discretion. He never attacked persons, but always principles. He never praised and never asked or expected it of another. Indeed, the only time he showed any feeling was under the fire of battery, which invariably met with an invulnerable and strengthened the strong nature and the strong principles of John G. Carlisle.

Exceedingly simple in his habits, unassuming, yet exquisitely sensitive and affectionate, Mr. Carlisle has been an imperturbable in victory as in defeat. Though a large reader when a young man, his great activity of late years has been to do much of his hard thinking while playing solitaire. He has also thought out many a speech while playing poker, notwithstanding

COAL MINE DISASTER HEROES

Story of Rescued Who Saved Stranded Miners of Cherry, Ill.

Best heroes were among the hundreds of miners who fought for life at the bottom of the St. Paul Coal company's mine at Cherry, Ill., recently the scene of an explosion, followed by fire. About 400 miners were entombed. Some of the rescuers died in the service of their fellow men, and others lived to tell of their experience.

One of the bravest was Ralph Eddy, an eighteen-year-old youth, employed as a fireman on the surface. When it was found that the mine was on fire young Eddy and several others volunteered to go down the shaft and fight the fire. Some made one trip down to the bottom of the shaft and quit, but Eddy made six descents in the cage in spite of a bad burn across his face, rescuing the first trip. At the end of each descent Eddy left the cage and fought his way out along the level, at one time penetrating as far as 175 yards from the main cage. He stumbled over men who had fallen and heard others far beyond his reach crying out for aid. On each return trip he dragged with him one or more helpless miners and lifted them into the cage.

"On the last trip I found two helpless men not more than eight feet from the main shaft," said Eddy. "The air fans had been reversed, and that caused a hot back fire around the foot of the shaft all the time helping to put the men into the cage. There was no light for place in the cage. The men who did not enter were not near it. I had to go out into the smoke and look for them, and they were failing about me."

A tobacco pouch was the means of saving the lives of John Phillips and Edward Surrock, miners in the second vein. Phillips on his way to the shaft found Surrock lying on the track in the main entryway. He dragged his comrade until he himself was almost overcome by the smoke that filled his lungs with every breath. He searched for something to cover his nose and mouth. The only thing available was the small sack in which he carried tobacco. Taking it from his pocket, he emptied the contents, and then, pulling one end in his mouth, he pulled the rest of it over his nose and fastened it about his head with a string. By crawling with his head close to the rail he reached the shaft, dragging his almost lifeless comrade with him.

One of the pathetic incidents of the rescue work was the saving of John McGill and his young son. They left the place where they were working when the alarm was given. Before half the journey was completed the boy grew dizzy. Clinging his father's hand, he sank to his knees, exclaiming weakly:

"Papa, I am dying. Leave me and save yourself if you can."

Although greatly weakened himself, the father raised the now unconscious son and, taking off his belt, strapped the boy on his back and struggled on. Within sight of the shaft he staggered and fell. Before losing consciousness he yelled for help, and his cries were heard. The rescuers bore the two to the surface, and they were hoisted to the surface.

Dr. L. B. Howe seven times before the other rescuers began to go into the burning shaft descended alone in a lift and each time brought to the surface his quota of saved. Twenty-five miners owe their lives to him.

MUSKRAT AS A "DELICACY."

Scheme to Protect the "Varmint" For Table Use.

If the petition that is being circulated along Chester Pike near Sharon Hill, Pa., is acted upon favorably by the legislature, to which body it will be presented by Frank S. Morris when a sufficient number of names are affixed, there will be a "closed" season for shooting and trapping muskrats, which at present are not protected by law.

In the petition it is requested that the open season be from Nov. 1 to March 15, inclusive. At present the flesh of the muskrat is considered a "delicacy," comparable to possum, which, together with the craze for coat linings of muskrat skin, it is said, will mean that the rodent will be exterminated unless some means are taken to protect it.

New Twelve Cent Stamp. Postmaster General Hitchcock has approved the issuance of a twelve cent postage stamp. With the increase of the registry fee to 10 cents such a stamp is needed to cover the registration charge and a single rate of letter postage. The new stamp will bear a profile portrait of George Washington from the obverse of the new series. The color has not been definitely decided. This stamp will take the place of the thirteen cent one now in use.

Apples For President Taft. Congressman John W. Dwight of Dryden, N. Y., ordered Mr. C. H. Burritt of Hilton to pack two barrels of the best Tompkins county apples for President Taft. The apples, 300 perfect ones, polished till they shone, were wrapped in tissue paper and put in the barrels. They average half a pound. The apples will be kept in cold storage till Mr. Taft gets apple hungry.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Farmer's Pumpkin Pie.

Take two cups of pumpkin that has been well cooked and mixed first through a sieve after it has been squeezed dry. Add one cup of cream or rich milk, the well beaten yolk of four eggs, one cup of sugar, a teaspoonful each of salt, cinnamon and ground nutmeg. Line a pie tin with a good rich crust rolled thin and fill with the above mixture. Bake in a moderately hot oven until the custard is firm, but do not bake too long or it will separate. Beat the whites of the four eggs to a stiff froth with half a cup of powdered sugar and when the pie is done and has cooled heap the meringue thus made over the top. Return to the oven a few minutes and brown a delicate color.

A Bacon Mint.

Soak bacon in milk for twenty minutes before frying it, then lift it out and dip it in flour and fry in a hot frying pan sufficiently browned. The soaking in milk gives a fine consistency to the bacon, and the flour insures a crisp crust. After frying remove the bacon, pour off all grease and stir into the frying pan one or two tablespoonfuls of flour, gradually adding the milk the bacon was soaked in, and season with salt and pepper. When the sauce is thick pour it over the bacon and serve at once. This is excellent with hot spider corn cakes for breakfast.

Grapes For Winter Use.

Carefully selected fruit may be laid away and kept very easily until February and March. Select large fruit that is fully ripe, but not too soft. Remove all loose grapes and lay the fruit in boxes in this way: Line the bottom of the box with paper, then lay in the grapes, taking care that the bunches do not crowd or overlap. On this layer place another thickness of paper and another layer of the fruit, and so continue until the box is full. Cover the top thickly with paper, tacking it well into the sides.

An Ironing Cabinet.

A Philadelphia man has invented a cabinet which holds the boards, irons and all the other incidental paraphernalia. This cabinet is a tall, narrow affair which does not take up much room and will scarcely be noticed in the corner. In the top is a shelf to hold irons, while on the inner sides are runways with slides operative in them. One end of an ironing board is pivoted to the runner carried between the slides, and on the other end of the board is pivoted a supporting leg. When the board is to be used the closet door is opened, and it is swung out into place. The irons and wax are there ready to hand, and there is practically no time lost in getting ready. Another advantage of this cabinet is the fact that it is not necessary to clear the kitchen table to get a space to support one end of the board.

IRONING CABINET.

Baked Cabbage.

Soak a cabbage in cold water for an hour, adding a little salt to the water. Cut the cabbage into quarters and boil in two waters. Drain, cut the cabbage fine, grease a pudding dish and put a layer of the cabbage in the bottom of it. Cover this layer with a well seasoned white sauce and sprinkle with buttered crumbs. Add more cabbage and more sauce until the dish is full. Bake the top layer of crumbs and bake for half an hour.

Sausage Cakes.

Mash finely cold potatoes in a good sized bowl and mix in sausage meat enough to make it tasty, according to the number of persons to be served. Add a little salt and pepper and a small lightly beaten egg. Make two round cakes, cover with bread crumbs and fry a golden brown. No fat is required for frying, as the sausage is enough. It makes a tasty dish for supper and is a nice one for leftover potatoes.

Preventing Flow of Blood.

In cases where a wound has been inflicted which bleeds continuously two dust will be found excellent to stop the flow of blood. Cover the wound thickly with the dust and bind a piece of cotton over it to keep it in place. Brown sugar is said by many persons to be excellent for stopping the flow of blood. When the blood has ceased to flow apply iodine to the wound.

Pickled Silver Skin Onions.

Peel silver skin onions, stick a clove in each, pack closely in jars and cover with boiling vinegar in which a level teaspoonful of salt to each quart has been added.

PURVEYORS TO ROYALTY.

Their Signs Constitute One of the Sights of London.

The American in London, on his first visit to that marvelous city, is struck by the number of signs over shops with the royal arms painted thereon and announcing that the tradesman is a purveyor to their majesties. Yet, when the matter is sifted, the number is not so large.

Officially, according to the London News, there are about 250 tradesmen in London who hold the royal warrant and are entitled to use the royal arms as a shop sign, with the accompanying words, "By royal appointment." The royal warrant has to be received, signed and sealed in due form; otherwise, if a tradesman styles himself a purveyor to a member of the royal family without this formal permission, he is guilty of an offense which is punished by a fine not exceeding £20. Moreover, he is liable to a similar fine if he uses arms so nearly resembling the royal arms as to lead people to believe that he is carrying on his business under the authority of royalty. Several instances have occurred of the enforcement of these penalties.

The warrants are exhibited in the shop windows, headed by the royal arms and bearing the signature of the lord chamberlain, the comptroller of the royal household, the treasurer of the interior, or of the master of the horse, etc., according to the circumstances.

SMOKING A PIPE.

It Is Said to Give the Face a Square Jawed Effect.

"There is one question I always ask a man who wants a job," remarked the business man who has to hire several hundred men for different positions each year.

"The question I always ask them is, 'Do you smoke a pipe much?' Of course the answers are various. Some of them smoke a pipe a great deal and others not at all.

"Why do I ask about the pipe? Well, not that I have the least interest in their habits or that I have any prejudice one way or another in the matter. The reason is that I want to know whether the formation of their lower jaws is natural or acquired.

"A man with a firm lower jaw is always a man of parts and of will. I say 'always'—anyway, most always. If he does not smoke a pipe his square jaw, look near where it hinges on to the upper one, is natural. If he is a pipe smoker the looks are deceiving, and I have to judge his caliber some other way.

"Pipe smokers always have strong muscles back on the face about the place a man stops when he makes the first stroke downward in shaving. These are the muscles that hold the jaws together. They often give a square jawed effect to a man who hasn't any square jaw characteristics. My men think I ask funny questions. But there's a reason."—New York Times.

THE BOROBOEDOER.

Temple Built In Java In the Eighth Century.

Unearthed by Sir
Raffles when the English
Java was built by the Hmlans in the eighth century and is by the example of their work standing on a hill in the valley, this impossible covering nearly ten acres.
A height of upward of a hundred feet above the summit of the hill.
A series of stone terrace on top of each other in direct magnitude so as to leave nothing but a series of crowning galleries and crowned entrance to the gallery
by four stairways—
east, east and west—
the ground straight up to the galleries, in the middle of the crowning cupola,
by numerous smaller laterons, from which one may ascend any of the intermediate birds' necks.

It's the Number of Bones In Them
That Makes Them Flexible.

The damingoes were making their afternoon toilet in the big flying cage
at the Bronx zoo the other afternoon,
says a writer in a New York paper.
A crowd of children and grown people were looking on and exclaiming with admiring wonder at the way these birds were twisting their long necks about into all sorts of corkscrews and curves when one of the ornithological experts came along and stopped to watch the performance.

"It's the larger number of bones in a bird's neck, not the length, that make it so flexible," he remarked. "There are twenty-three bones in the neck of a swan, for example, and a few more in that of the flamingo. It seems that the smaller the animal organism the larger the number of neck bones. The giraffe, for instance, has only seven bones in his long neck, which has a reach of nearly twenty feet from the ground. That little white throated sparrow over there is only three inches high, but he has fourteen bones in his neck and can almost scratch the back of his head with his bill. The swan has twenty-three neck bones and swings his head about with even greater freedom than a snake."

THE PLEBEIANS.

Their Secession From Rome and Their Rise to Power.

Plebeians were the commons of Rome, who were originally forbidden all political rights. They were for the most part poor and were not allowed to intermarry with the patricians.

They served in the army without pay and were sold into slavery for debt and could even be cut into pieces for distribution among their creditors.

Finding their condition intolerable, the plebeians in 497 B. C. seceded to Mons Sacer, near Rome, where they resolved to build a new city. But this step so alarmed the privileged classes that they granted to the commons the right of annually choosing from their own numbers two magistrates, called tribunes, with power to protect them against the aggression of the patricians.

After the lapse of about 200 years
the disabilities of the plebeians were almost entirely removed, and between the years 250-300 B. C. they secured the dictatorship, the censorship and the praetorship as well as the right to be pontiff and augur. Thus the Roman republic, after two centuries of existence, finally secured a democratic form of government. — New York

Sweat and Perspire.

Plantersville

As prohibition and the amendment are the order of the day, I first say that the people of this section have enjoyed the greatest feast of exaltation we have ever had.

At 12:30 p.m., Nov. 13, the admission of the high school building was opened for the reception of Gov. Comer and Hon. John Reese of Selma. With the room packed to the walls with hearers,
the speaking began with enthusiasm, and continued the entire evening. The amendment was discussed from start to finish; often the speaker was silenced by cheers and applauded from the great throng of people. So we all go home rejoicing in a day well spent and many converts to the amendment.

Now, dear readers, are you notice that this is a personal issue and not a political one? You charge the preachers with dabbling in politics. Oh brother, show me a minister that doesn't condemn liquor from his pulpit, from the highways, byways and hedges, and I will say from a B. ble standpoint,
that he is an impostor, a hypocrite,
and everything but a man of G. d.

I want to ask every church member to take up your Bible and read it enough to get the dust brushed off the lids, then go to the polls on election day and cast your ballot
according to divine inspiration, and then you can say boldly to your fellowman, your family, your fellowman, your country.

Now, just a word to those that don't care. I know and love many of you. Just think for a moment who started this campaign. Who the liquor dealers and manufacture-all over the United States are convinced and fighting prohibition, and especially the proposed amendment.
This election was called by our representatives for due respect they had for us. And the liquor men, knowing that if the amendment is adopted, their last spark of hope is watered out in Alabama, and other states are lining up with ours, so they one by one will go out of business. You know as soon as the election was called, the liquor gang called a convention and organized a campaign to fight prohibition, so we have now got to fight in self defense, and by the help of God we will win by a large majority.

Dear reader, do you realize that the liquor business in the United States has grown so large that it is taking most of our boys and girls to run it? Now, all parents that want to furnish the dram shops with customers, can vote against the amendment with a clear conscience. Oh, you say, girls don't drink liquor, they are too nice to do that. Ah, you are off, for I have seen some of as pretty girls as ever grew up in Chilton county, get behind the door with their beads, turn up a quart bottle and and try to stretch their necks a yard long and drink the fullness thereof. I wish I could forget such things; but the tick closer than good things do.
It is no wonder that the inspire writer said that "hell had enlarged herself and opened wide her mouth."
Yes, it's large and wide open for the reception of our boys and girls that we love so well, prize so high and esteem so much. The evil influences of liquor will drag them down in all the rugged paths of life, even to the bottomless pit, yet
they may never touch a drop of it.

With kindest regards to the Bu-per and its many readers, and to the success of the amendment, I believe to remain.

Yours sincerely,
S. A. BLOUNT.

THE OFFICIAL BALLOT.

Following is a copy of the official ballot that will be handed to you on election day.

Shall the following be adopted as Article XIX of the Constitution of Alabama:

Section 1. The manufacture, sale and keeping for sale of alcoholic and malt liquors and other intoxicating beverages shall be forever prohibited in this State; but alcohol may be sold for medical, scientific and mechanical purposes, and wine for sacramental purposes, under such regulations as the Legislature may have prescribed or may hereafter prescribe.

Section 2. Nothing in the Constitution of Alabama shall be construed to prevent the Legislature from designating places where such liquors may be stored or kept.

YES

X NO

Make a cross mark (X) as shown above.

MONDAY next will see the finish to the proposed amendment to the constitution—a finish that from all the evidence will be conclusive, and an indignant majority of the voters will register their protest against this proposed infringement on the liberty of the people and the sanctity of their homes.

Every man has a right to guide his own actions—always in conformity with reasonable laws—and so long as he conducts himself in accordance with the law and his behavior is decent and seemly, none have the right to dictate to him what he should eat or drink.

With all due respect to our prohibition friends, we venture to assert that not one of them ever thought of incorporating these existing drastic prohibition laws into the constitution until it was brought forth by calculating politicians, who imagining they had discovered a popular road to future honors, seek to foist themselves upon the people as saviors.

Let every prohibitionist, no matter how strong his proclivities, ask himself if he had ever thought of anything like the proposed amendment, and in every case he will answer "No!"—until it was suggested by Comer, Weakley, Lawrence & Co.

There is no doubt but that many good men, in the belief that they are right in denouncing the evils of strong drink, are ready to vote in support of the amendment, but before they do so, why should they not look upon the other side of the question?

That there have been too many inebriates, who would be benefited by the total prohibition of all liquor, none will deny, but compared with the millions of men who take an occasional drink for the benefit of their health, their number is small. Of course, you hear of the man who transgresses, but no mention is ever made of the man who "smiles" and smiles again.

You hear, with horror, of the man who commits murder, but who ever thinks of the millions who are not murdered? Murder is prohibited, but has it prohibited innumerable homicides? And is there any special clause in the constitution against it in the same way that is now proposed against whiskey?

If a man gets drunk, all the neighborhood talks of it—proof positive as holy writ, that all his neighbors are sober men, or his delinquency would not be noticed. It is this latter class who are going to kill the amendment—not the "whiskey soaks," not the "saloon men," or the "bar-room loafer," but the men who believe they have a right to take a drink when they feel the necessity for it, and who believe they should be allowed to have it in their homes whenever they require it.

The great evil of the liquor traffic has been the non-enforcement of law. A drunken man kills another man, and is let off with a light sentence because he was drunk. A drunken man assaults and dangerously injures another man, and some legal quibble saves him. A few just sentences would minimize this, but all the prohibition laws so far enacted have not been of any avail.

Every qualified voter, before he casts his ballot next Monday, should ask himself "How many of my neighbors take a drink occasionally without ever getting drunk?" And having satisfied himself, then can cast his ballot intelligently, and we have faith in the man who "thinks," and that he will vote against the amendment.

THE AMENDMENT.

Section 1. The manufacture, sale and keeping for sale of alcoholic and malt liquors and other intoxicating beverages shall be forever prohibited in this State; but alcohol may be sold for medical, scientific and mechanical purposes, and wine for sacramental purposes, under such regulations as the Legislature may have prescribed or may hereafter prescribe.

Sec. 2. Nothing in the Constitution of Alabama shall be construed to prevent the Legislature from designating places where such liquors may be stored or kept.

Croup is most prevalent during the dry cold weather of the early winter months. Parents of young children should be prepared for it. All that is needed is a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Many mothers are never without it in their homes and it has never disappointed them. Sold by all druggists.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The fall term of Circuit Court commenced Monday morning with a rather heavy docket confronting it.

His honor Judge W. W. Pearson, presiding with his usual grace and dignity, charged the Grand Jury in a clear and learned manner.

Solicitor D. D. Askew, urbane and polite, was on hand and is busily engaged with the Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury was sworn in, with T. J. Deason as foreman and W. F. Claughton bailiff, and court held up while F. Loyd Tate and Senator Reynolds addressed the large crowd present—Mr. Tate speaking against the amendment and Senator Reynolds in favor of it. The audience gave rapt attention to both speakers.

The following cases were disposed of up to Wednesday evening: Briggs Hardware Co. vs. Thompson and Huff, verdict for plaintiff in the sum of $144.50.

Horse Shoe Lumber Co. vs. Wadsworth Lumber Co. judgment by default.

J. P. Gentry and Son vs. M. C. Smith, jury and verdict for defendant.

G. D. Collins vs. G. A. Dawson, verdict for defendant.

P. D. Wilson vs. L. S. Giles, judgment for plaintiff.

Cannon & Sons vs. J. M. Burnett, judgment for plaintiff.

Goodall, Brown, Co. vs. D. L. Langston, judgment for plaintiff.

Court adjourned at 3:30 Wednesday afternoon until Thursday morning.

Hats and Old Age.

In opening the services one Sunday recently the pastor of one of the fashionable churches said: "For three Sundays I have asked the women in this church to remove their hats during service. My appeal has been unheeded, and now I see wherein I was wrong. I was inconsiderate of the comforts of the aged and infirm, so I have made a new rule. Hereafter all women of forty years of age or over will be permitted to wear their hats during the service."

Within twenty seconds every woman in the church was bareheaded.—Ladies Home Journal.

be pleased to see the new colors and swell patterns which are shown this season in our HART SCHAFFNER

Many men who are older will want this younger stuff; some of it is a little extreme, but we have good styles for everybody.

We want you to see the new Tans, Grays, Olives, Browns; the Fine Blue Serges, and Dresser Fabrics; want to show you the new ideas in Fall Overcoats.

Ladies!

We have a beautiful line of light weight suitings for fall, don't fail to see them before they are all gone we have some excellent values at 12 1/2 to 25¢ per yard.

Nice line of wool and silk goods on hand.

We also have a store chuck full of new every-day-staples that have just arrived, we are selling them on last year's prices when cotton was 8 and 9¢ per pound; better buy early this time everything you need for fall and winter in cotton goods, prices will be much higher when this present stock is gone.

Have you noticed our Collars, Belts, Gloves, Laces, Embroidery?

When you want a real swell pair of Shoes come to this store and save walking; Tans, Green, Oxblood, Vici, Patent Leather.

About Your Drug Purchases.

Few people have the opportunity to become competent judges of the real value of the majority of things sold in a drug store. Surely there is no class of merchandise upon which you must depend so much on the integrity and business honor of a store as when buying drug store goods.

The highest principles of business integrity are behind every transaction at this store, and when you
trade here you have the comforting assurance that the goods are in every way exactly as represented.
So why not buy your drug store wants here? We have a large, well assorted stock of "quality" mer-

ATTENTION FARMERS.

Have you ever enjoyed before such
prosperity; high prices for cotton,
and good prices for your cotton seed.
We should be very thankful this
year, as all this is evidence convincing that the south with her crops
that others can not supply is certain
to grow in wealth, and the industrious farmers has the greatest advantage of all others to accumulate,
as he actually grows the products
that are worth so much. And to our farmer friends around Clanton,
we want to say that we are still de-
ing all in our power to give you the
very best results at our Gin at Clan-
ton. We try each day to do better
work, and get more lint from the seed, than the day before. Won't
you help us with your patronage
that we may help you by contin-
ing to improve our plant. Keep your cotton dry, and don't allow
trash and foreign matter in it, as it
works a hardship on us trying to keep up the gin saws. We are preparing now to resharpen our saws
that we might be able to give you
last bales of cotton as good as the
first bales, and it is necessary if we
do good work for you, to keep our
plant in as good shape on the last
bales as on the first bales. Our
work this year is better than last,
and if we can only get your hearty
co-operation and patronage we will
certainly in the end give Clanton
farmers such results as no other
communities get.

Thanking you for your patronage,
and trusting that you will speak to
your neighbor in our behalf, we beg
to remain,

Very truly, yours,

SELECTING THE BRONZE TURKEY.

A Thanksgiving Story.

By PORTE JEFFERSON.

[Copyright, 1922, by American Press Association.]

Amanda Butler cautiously opened the door of the turkey shed and flashed the rays of her lantern until they fell broadcast on the clumsy form of a large turkey in the corner. He roused as she approached and stretched himself for action.

It was the work of an instant for Amanda's nimble fingers to flash up to his legs, and when she darted back there dangled from one foot a strip of bright red fannel. When Amanda looked the door and turned away the victim of her craftiness was protesting loudly against the absurdity of wearing red fannel in August.

Jeremiah sat on the doorstep in his shirt sleeves, smoking a peaceful pipe. "There," panted Amanda as she put out the lantern and sat down beside him and fanned herself with her sun-bonnet. "I've got one job done."

"What's that?" queried Jeremiah lazily. "Marked the Thanksgiving turkey."

"Which one?" "The big bronze one, I've had him in mind for some time. He always roosts in the shed, so I caught him asleep just now and tied a red rag on his leg. I'll shut him up come the 24th of November."

"The big bronze turkey always roosts in the walnut tree. That's why I elected him for Thanksgiving dinner," remarked Mr. Butler deliberately. "Him a-roosting out of doors shows he has wild tastes, and what tastes better than wild turkey, I wonder?"

Amanda received this unconscious witicism on her husband's part in stony silence. "Of course I mean the biggest of them two bronze fellers," added Jeremiah after a while.

"I marked the biggest," said Amanda acidly. Jeremiah whistled one stanza of "The Star Spangled Banner," knocked his pipe against the step and went into the house.

"PETE JONES IS COMING AROUND TO KILL THE TURKEY."

the house. A moment later Amanda heard him winding the kitchen clock preparatory to retiring for the night.

"A woman that's married might as well give up trying to have her way about anything," murmured Amanda discontentedly. "Just as if I didn't know that there turkey in the shed was the biggest of the two! If I don't eat that turkey I'll not eat any—so there! I'll show Jeremiah Butler I've got some gumption if I am a poor, miserable married woman."

Having delivered herself of these sentiments, Amanda felt more cheerfully disposed and in her turn retired to bed, where her husband was already breathing loudly and harmoniously.

The next morning when she went out to feed the poultry two big bronze gobblers were stalking about the yard, each with a rag about one leg. The red fannelled turkey ruffled indignantly every time his beady eye caught sight of the objectionable color on his foot.

The other one gazed mournfully at a piece of black tape that adorned his extremity.

Jeremiah crossed the yard with foaming pails of milk. "What's that there black rag?" demanded Amanda angrily.

Her husband looked quizzically at her and then went on. "That there turkey is in mourning because he's going to be killed for Thanksgiving dinner," he said dryly.

grinned openly and went back to his neglected garden.

At night a remarkable thing happened. The victorious wearer of red sought a roost in the walnut tree, while the mourning turkey indignantly found refuge in the shed, and, strange to relate, he chose the very spot vacated by his rival.

All that summer and early fall Amanda and Jeremiah avoided the subject of turkeys. After a while others noticed that the topic was a disagreeable one, and so it was tacitly avoided by every one.

The first of November two bronze gobblers nervously paced two narrow pens. The red fannel turkey was generously fed by Amanda, while the black tape bird was as conscientiously stuffed by her husband.

Amanda grew nervous and irritable as the weeks wore on toward Thanksgiving. She did not really care which turkey she ate, for it had been a prosperous year with them, and she was thankful in every sense for the fullness of their cellar and granary. What she really did mind was the giving in to Jeremiah. She had always been the one to give in, and this time—it did seem for once as if he might let her have her way. It was true she had her way about everything concerning the household, but—

She balked and boiled and stewed for a fragrant week before the great feast day. There would be cousins from neighboring towns to dine with them, and the turkey must be slain and prepared the day before. Such a huge bird would be plenty for the ten who would be present. Amanda wished she might invite more, so that there would be some excuse for killing both birds, and thus cut the gordian knot of contention without loss of dignity to either Jeremiah or herself.

On the evening of the second day before Thanksgiving, Jeremiah Butler and Amanda sat in the warm circle of light cast by the reading lamp. Jeremiah was reading the county paper, and his wife was sewing.

Suddenly Jeremiah looked up. "Pete Jones is coming around to kill the turkey tomorrow morning," he said, with assumed carelessness. "He'll get it all dressed and ready for you."

"I've been thinking," said Amanda slowly, "that you might as well kill that there black tape turkey of yours. He looks pretty well conditioned, and he's the biggest bird after all. I don't feel like as if I could have any contention this Thanksgiving. We've been so prosperous this year."

Jeremiah coughed dubiously. "Amanda," he began rather sheepishly, "I did kind of a fool thing last summer. When you tied a rag on your turkey I went out the next morning and changed them rags. That's why your turkey went to roost with a black rag and mine went back to his tree with a red one. I meant it for a joke at first. I thought I'd have my way about killing the black one, and when we was eating it I was going to tell you it was your bird after all, but it looks silly now."

"It was silly," said Amanda energetically. "I don't mind myself sick over them two turkeys. I don't know if I want to eat neither one. If I had known you was trying to joke, why, I don't know as I ever knew you to make a joke, Jeremiah."

"I never did before," said Jeremiah, with a sickly smile. "I guess I won't again. I'll tell Pete to kill the black rag turkey, and then I'll be the one you elected."

"I'd rather have the wild flavored one," admitted Amanda. "I'm partial to wild turkeys. Then it was your turkey that fit mine and made him run after all." She glanced at the bronze feathers above the clock.

"That there wild one was a gamy bird," chuckled Jeremiah, with another break into unconscious wit.

The next day when Pete Jones came to kill the turkey he found Jeremiah and Amanda busily engaged in cleaning silver.

"Which one of them two bronze gobblers shall I kill? One's as fat as 'other, and each one's got a dirty rag tied around his foot."

Jeremiah looked critically at a fork he was polishing, and then he turned a quizzical smile upon his wife.

"Kill 'em both, Pete, and take one home for yourself."

"And whichever one it is, Pete, enjoy it!" smiled Amanda at her reflection in a teaspoon.

Dear People of Chilton:
I notice that the good folks of Alabama everywhere are busy working hard for the amendment, and as they move about over the State they are heeding the command: "As ye go, preach." I greatly admire this spirit of activity in so good a cause, and will try to follow the good example and humbly offer a few lines to my old home paper on this all-absorbing and worthy subject of the amendment to the constitution for permanent prohibition.

Christianity has long since outgrown the old-fashioned theory that preachers and women should keep silent on political questions like this, for we know full well that such a theory was set on foot by Satan himself, who trembles at the voice and power of the holy ministry and the piteous wails of suffering womanhood.

Besides, the opposers of the amendment are trying to make it appear that the good wives and mothers of Alabama are so ignorant as to want to cleave to their little bottles of blackberry wine, at the sacrifice of our country's moral good. I think it high time that we speak for thousands of Alabama's suffering women and children and say "Let the home rights go if necessary, and the amendment pass."

I knew a wife and mother once who honestly thought she must keep a little whiskey in the home in case of snake-bites. She soon learned, however, as she had a drinking husband, there was an adder's sting in the bottle more deep and deadly than creeping reptile of earth could flit, for poison of its sting went further than flesh and blood, for it reached down into the human soul.

In view of this fact, why object to the cost of the amendment? Everything that is good is costly and can the value of a single soul be limited?

A Great Remedy
A. R. Silas, Pocomontas, Ala., says: "I want you to allow me to recommend U-RA-CURA. My wife has been sick every since we were married with Kidney and Liver troubles, and I had just about broke myself paying doctors' bills, and she couldn't get no relief. We decided to try U-RA-CURA, although we had lost all hopes as we had been faked so much with patent medicines. I gave her a dose and she began improving. She took three bottles and is now doing her work singing like a bird. I think a man can save more money and have better health in his family by keeping U-RA-CURA than any medicine on earth." Druggists sell it at 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle.

Forced Into Exile.
Wm. Upchurch of Glen Oak, Okla., was an exile from home. Mountain air, he thought, would cure a lung ailment, but he had defied all remedies for two years. After six months he returned, death-dogging his steps. "Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery," he writes, "and after taking six bottles I am as well as ever." It saves thousands yearly from desperate lung diseases. Infallible for Coughs and Colds, it dissolves Hoarseness and Sore Throat, Cures Grip, Bronchitis, Hemorrhages, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, 50c and $1, trial bottles free, guaranteed by Upchurch Drug Co.

Best Stomach Remedy Free

It is an old saying that if the stomach is sound the whole body is safe, because so much depends upon the proper working of the stomach. Many persons find themselves with a disorder of the stomach which produces dyspepsia or a peculiar state of biliousness.

If you suffer from both stomach trouble and constipation you are on the way to a very serious disease. From just such conditions come appendicitis, rheumatism, skin diseases and similar disorders, because the waste matter that should have been expelled from the system through the bowels has found its way into the blood and vitiated it. What is needed at this point is not simply a violent cathartic tablet or salt, which usually does more harm than good, but a gentle laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which people have been using for these ailments for nearly a quarter of a century.

It cured J. C. Lanham, of Warrensburg, Mo., of stomach trouble of long standing, also William Vail, of 902 E. 10th St., Louisville, Ky., who had the trouble for fifteen years.

However, if you have stomach trouble you want to know a free personal experience what Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will do for you. If so, send your name to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent you. You are urged to send for the free bottle, as the results from it will be the best recommendation of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Then you will do as over two million people did last year—go to your druggist and buy a regular bottle of 50 cents.

If there is anything about your ailment that you do not understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. R. Caldwell, 505 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Editor Banner:—One week from today we are to close one of the greatest fights the State of Alabama or any other state in the union, and I would like to say just a few words in this particular issue of the dear old Banner. And to me, this is the most vital subject we have ever had before us and it should concern every thinking man in the state of Alabama.

I do not know just how Chilton stands regarding this question, but fellow citizens, I believe every man should stop and consider how he is to cast his vote on the 29th of this month, ask yourself the question am I casting my vote for the good of my neighbor and those who are to follow me in years to come?

We have stood for everything that is uplifting to our great state and why not let us say on the 29th that we will not let the gambler, the robber, the breweries and the devil rule us. Each of us is to stand responsible for the vote we cast. Are you going to vote for the devil and his agencies and allow them to bring whiskey back into the state and home?

You say I don't like the second section of the amendment. Why? Because you have probably listened to some jack-leg lawyers who are trying to misrepresent the question in order that they can defeat the amendment, and thereby get the Probate Judge seat, or some other office which will be open in Chilton soon.

I had people to tell me while town home a few weeks ago that if the amendment passed, the homes would not be protected. Which is it that is trying to protect the homes, those who are trying to keep whiskey out, or the ones who are trying to get it back? I would hate to vote against the amendment and cause my brother to be cast into some hellish den, as it will be if we allow whiskey to come back.

I have been where saloons predominated in the most degrading scenes of our land, and to-day we have one of the best cities in the world. Why? Because we said to the devil we don't want you and we put him out of business; now he is trying to get back in harness again, but on the 29th we are to cast him forever out of the state.

Yours very truly,
SAM. R. BILLINGSLEY.

Assuring.
Have courage, count. Father won't hurt you! Why, he told me only yesterday that if he had to pay so much for you he certainly wouldn't do anything to damage you.—Life.

CEMENT WATER TROUGH

Plans for Construction of an Improved Water Trough. Watering troughs, like many concrete structures, may be constructed the same as when made of wood, but they are more apt to last longer and the capacity of the troughs for water is increased. The size and capacity of the troughs should be determined by the amount of water to be used, but for troughs up to 10 feet long by two feet wide the best deep the thickness of the concrete walls should be about 4 inches.

It is essential that a watering trough be water tight. The conditions of a trough which will be satisfactory are: First, a richer mixture of concrete than is required for ordinary work; second, enough water to give a sloppy concrete finish; third, the placing of all concrete in one operation. It is extremely difficult to make any structure water tight unless all three of the above conditions are complied with.

The best mix of concrete to use with the sand and gravel used, but generally speaking one part of cement to one and one-half parts of sand, coarse sand and parts of screened gravel or stone are advised, or if gravel the natural bank is used, screening one part of portland cement to three parts of natural bank. If sand alone is available use portland cement to two parts.

The amount of excavation for the foundation of a trough depends upon the size. For trough level off the earth at the ground level before placing concrete, but for a trough of a depth a foundation should be placed a two and a half inch concrete in the form and then after placing and before the has set place a sheet of wire or some other wire fabric the concrete, bending it up so will come to within an inch of the forms at the sides and Place two and a quarter inch of the concrete in the bottom lightly to bring the mortar to the surface and smooth it off evenly. The inner form all ready and as the base is laid and before begun to stiffen set it, taking keep it at equal distances of sides, and then immediately lay concrete between the outer forms to the required height. Time to remove the forms upon several conditions, such as the temperature, but such forms can be removed within 24 hours after removing the forms. The concrete thoroughly and inside surface with pure portland cement mixed as thick as cream. The trough from the sides wet for about a week.

CEMENT WATER TROUGHS.

Plans for Construction of an Inexpensive Necessity.

Watering troughs, like many other structures, may be made without steel re-enforcements, but if constructed the walls must be half as thick as when re-enforced, and even then are more apt to crack. The size and capacity of the troughs varies with the purpose for which it is used, but for troughs up to about 10 feet long by two feet wide by two feet deep the thickness of the re-enforced walls should be about five inches.

It is essential that a watering trough be water tight. The conditions for obtaining a trough which will not leak are: First, a richer mixture of concrete than is required for ordinary work; second, enough water in mixing to give a sloppy concrete, and third, the placing of all concrete at one operation. It is extremely difficult to make any structure water tight unless all three of the above conditions are complied with.

The best mix of concrete to use varies with the sand and gravel employed, but generally speaking one part of portland cement to one and a half parts of clean, coarse sand to three parts of screened gravel or broken stone are advised, or if gravel from the natural bank is used without screening one part of portland cement to three parts of natural bank gravel. If sand alone is available use one part portland cement to two parts sand.

The amount of excavation necessary for the foundation of a trough depends upon the size. For a small trough level off the earth and tamp the ground well before placing any concrete, but for a trough of large capacity a foundation should be used.

Place a two and a half inch layer of concrete in the form and immediately after placing and before the concrete has set place a sheet of woven fence wire or some other wire fabric over the concrete, bending it up so that it will come to within an inch of the top of the forms at the sides and ends. Place two and a quarter inches more of the concrete in the bottom and ram lightly to bring the mortar to the surface and smooth it off evenly. Have the inner form all ready and as soon as the base is laid and before it has begun to stiffen set it, taking care to keep it at equal distances from the sides, and then immediately fill in the concrete between the outer and inner forms to the required height. The time to remove the forms depends upon several conditions, such as the wetness of the concrete, the weather and the temperature, but generally such forms can be removed within two days. After removing the forms wet the concrete thoroughly and paint the inside surface with pure portland cement mixed as thick as cream. Protect the trough from the sun, keeping it wet for about a week.

Feathers in Place of a Hen.

If a hen can hatch a duckling why can't a bunch of any sort of feathers hatch a chick? As a matter of fact, they can, as has been demonstrated by the fearless brooder invented by a California man. In general appearance the brooder resembles other machines of the kind, but there is no space in it for the lamp or other heating apparatus used in the older types. Instead a number of bunches of feathers are fastened to the underside of the lid.

A FIRELESS BROODER.

These feathers are just long enough to reach the floor of the box, with a little left over. The eggs are laid on the bottom, just beneath the feather tufts, and when the lid is closed each egg is hatched in a cluster of down that makes a very good imitation hen. As each egg is hatched out the lid can be opened for a second and the chick removed without the difficulty that would attend its removal from the old style brooder. The interior of which is heated from one end.

THE TROUGH FOR THE FARM.

Many farmers are beginning to save their stable and lot manure and also to keep enough live stock to make large enough quantities to justify the use of a spreader.

There are few farmers even at this enlightened period who conserve all the available plant food on their farms. There has been much improvement along this line since the days when barns were built without basements and the manure from the stables was thrown outside, there to leach through summer rain and winter snow. Much of the richness of this exposed fertilizer is soaked away into the surrounding soil with the water from rain and snow. The land surrounding these manure piles was often so saturated with this waste as to be unable to support plant life. The strength of this absorbed fertilizer was more than plants could feed upon and live. Experiment has proved that manure thus exposed loses in a few months nearly or quite half its value.

With the building of barns with basement cellars a portion of this waste was prevented, but much of the liquid is still lost on most farms. Cemented manure cellars are the exception, yet they pay a big dividend on money invested. Cement is not expensive. Sand can be found on most farms, or at least would cost little, and any intelligent man can mix it and spread it. With a cemented cellar and a proper use of absorbents the liquid can be nearly all saved, and it is of more value than the solid, being more readily available for the use of plants. The illustration shows a manure spreader being loaded at the barn.

Sugar Beets and Beet Sugar.

Though sugar can be extracted from many plants, the world's supply of sugar comes at present from only two plant species—sugar cane and sugar beets—and it comes about equally from each. The former is grown only in tropical or sub-tropical climates, the latter only in temperate climates.

The great bulk of the beet sugar consumed is made in European countries, Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary and France being the leading producers. But in recent years the young and rapidly growing beet sugar industry of the United States has come into prominence. There are now sixty-four active beet sugar factories in this country, located in sixteen different states. Last year the farmers of these states harvested about 365,000 acres of beets and delivered to the factories 3,415,000 tons of beets. From these nearly 420,000 tons of refined sugar were made. The yield of sugar per acre of beets was 2,334 pounds.

LOADING A MANURE SPREADER.

With the building of barns with basement cellars a portion of this waste was prevented, but much of the liquid is still lost on most farms. Cemented manure cellars are the exception, yet they pay a big dividend on money invested. Cement is not expensive. Sand can be found on most farms, or at least would cost little, and any intelligent man can mix it and spread it. APPLES OF THE NORTHWEST.

Business Crop Purchased For Eastern and European Markets.

Contracts have been closed in Spokane, Wash., by an eastern firm for more than 500,000 worth of Washington and Oregon apples for eastern and European trade, and the purchaser expects to reach the $1,000,000 mark before returning home after looking over the orchards in central Idaho and western Montana. While in Spokane he bought the entire output of first and second grade grown in the Moscow lake orchards, estimated at 30,000 boxes, previous to which he contracted for 50,000 boxes in the Hood river and Mosier districts. In Oregon, buying also 35,000 boxes from the Dunes orchards at Walla Walla, Wash., and 15,000 boxes from the orchards at Garfield, Wash.

The purchaser said the prices received by the growers in the Hood river district were the highest ever paid for their fruit. His purchases there aggregated more than $300,000, and he paid as high as $2.50 a box, or 5 cents a pound. He also paid $2.50 and in several instances $2.75 a box for Washington apples of the first grade.

Much of the superiority of the western apple over the product of the New York districts is in the picking and packing. Growers fully understand these advantages, and that is where they are wise. Their fruit is picked ripe and carefully graded and honestly packed, the result being that buyers are pleased.

There is not the least danger that the growers in the northwest will overdo the apple industry. They could not do that even by doubling or tripling the present orchard area. The apple crop of the United States was about 67,000,000 barrels in 1906, and in no year since then has it amounted to more than 35,000,000 barrels. The present crop will not reach that figure.

When it is considered that the population of the United States has increased probably by 20,000,000 since 1896, while the apple production has fallen from 67,000,000 to 35,000,000 barrels, it can be readily seen that it is out of question to think that the apple growers in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Colorado can oversupply the ever increasing market.

Utilizing Barn Manure.

Many farmers are beginning to save their stable and lot manure and also to keep enough live stock to make large enough quantities to justify the use of a spreader.

There are few farmers even at this enlightened period who conserve all the available plant food on their farms. There has been much improvement along this line since the days when barns were built without basements and the manure from the stables was thrown outside, there to leach through summer rain and winter snow. Sugar Beets and Beet Sugar.

Though sugar can be extracted from many plants, the world's supply of sugar comes at present from only two plant species—sugar cane and sugar beets—and it comes about equally from each. The former is grown only in tropical or sub-tropical climates, the latter only in temperate climates.

The great bulk of the beet sugar consumed is made in European countries, Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary and France being the leading producers. But in recent years the young and rapidly growing beet sugar industry of the United States has come into prominence. There are now sixty-four active beet sugar factories in this country, located in sixteen different states. Last year the farmers of these states harvested about 365,000 acres of beets and delivered to the factories 3,415,000 tons of beets. From these nearly 420,000 tons of refined sugar were made. The yield of sugar per acre of beets was 2,334 pounds.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Rom. xiv. 18-21. Memory Verses, 18, 20—Golden Text, Rom. xiv. 21—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Bishop Meade speaks of this section of this epistle from chapter xiv. as a "present duties in the power of eternal facts." Some of the facts are the sin that is in man, the redemption that is in Christ Jesus for sinful man, the "no condemnation" and "no separation" of chapter viii. as a result of that great redemption and the far-reaching, glorious prospect for the whole creation with Israel as a righteous center bringing true riches to all nations. The effect of this upon the mind of the believer should be such a renewal that henceforth he is done with this present evil age and done with himself and determined to live wholly in the perfect will of God, as a new creature in Christ, old things passed away, all things become new (Rom. xii. 1, 2; 1 Cor. v. 17). Even Christ pleased not himself, and in the epistles we are taught how we ought to walk and to please God and to let every one of us, please his neighbor for his good to edification (xv. 1-3).

Now, it seems to me that the great point in our lesson is that each one should for himself get right in this matter and not misspend his time in seeking to get others right while he himself is all wrong. "Every one of us shall give account of himself to God" (verse 12). Therefore why judge our brother in any matter, and especially in eating and drinking, since all believers must stand before the judgment seat of God, or of Christ, for Christ is God? (Verse 10.) If we have received the Lord Jesus, then we are in Christ and are looked upon as having died with Him and risen with Him, so that our judgment for sin is past on Calvary, and we have His assurance that our sins and iniquities He will remember no more.

It is possible as His redeemed ones to walk in the light under the shelter of His precious blood and have conscious and unbroken fellowship with Him as we yield ourselves to Him moment by moment to walk in the good works He has beforehand prepared for us and to live the life of utter self-renunciation which He desires us to live to His glory, making it our ambition in all things to be acceptable to Him (Eph. ii. 10; 1 Cor. ix. 10, 11; v. 9). Although our Lord said to His disciples at the last Passover, "I appoint unto you a kingdom, as My Father hath appointed unto Me, that ye may eat and drink at My table in My kingdom and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Luke xxii. 29, 30), yet "the kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost" (verse 17), and the chief object of our thoughts here should not be what shall we eat and drink and wear, but how can we best make manifest and make known His righteousness, which He offers freely to all, and thus hasten His kingdom of peace on earth. We should think of every one on earth as "one for whom Christ died" (verse 15) and trust Him to use us to bring as many as possible to Him, that they might obtain and enjoy His righteousness and peace and then bring others to the same. When the kingdom comes and a King shall reign in righteousness, then on all the earth the work of righteousness shall be peace and the service of righteousness shall be quietness and assurance forever (Isa. xxxii. 1, 17). There can be no peace to an individual or to a nation or to nations apart from righteousness, and there is no righteousness worthy of the name except that which God has provided in Christ, the righteous one; but, believing in Him, we are thus justified and have peace with God and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

Through the comfort of the Scriptures we wait patiently for the hope, and the God of patience and comfort gives us the mind of Christ toward others, while the God of hope fills us with joy and peace in believing, making us to abound in hope through the power of the Holy Spirit, and the God of peace is with us and gives us peace always by all means (Rom. v. 1, 2; xv. 4, 5, 13, 33; 11 Thess. ii. 16). If it is thus with us the minor matters of eating and drinking will keep their right place and we will never be found insisting that we may eat this and drink that, no matter what others may say; but, being filled with thoughts of His kingdom and glory, we will live for the salvation and edification of others rather than for our own gratification. As believers our self life was crucified with Christ, and now we are to reckon that old life as dead and buried and live a new life wholly unto God (Rom. vi. 6-11), not in anyway tolerating anything for which our hearts would condemn us (verses 22, 23; 1 John iii. 21).

All that God works in us "to will and to do of His good pleasure will be approved, but all that is of or for self or to please men will prove to be wood, hay and stubble to be burned up" (1 Cor. iii. 11-15). This judgment seat of our lesson is for believers only, that they may be judged for their works and have their places assigned them in the kingdom, and must not be confounded with the judgment of Matt. xxv. or the great white throne of Rev. 22.

RESOLUTIONS

In memory of Our Brother, John Logan Stock.

Whereas death has again visited our community, and gathered around and settled upon another bright and happy home, and claimed as its victim our dear brother, John Logan Stock, and whereas, he was a faithful Odd Fellow, an excellent citizen, a dutiful son and an affectionate brother, therefore be it resolved, First, that we humbly bow in submission to Him that doeth all things, well. Second, that we endeavor to carry into our practical life the principles of Odd Fellowship that we may one day be permitted to meet the Great Grand Master above.

Third, that we commend to the sorrowing ones the following:

One by one earth's ties are broken,
As we near our love decay;
And the hopes so fondly cherished,
Brighten but to pass away.

One by one our hopes grow brighter,
As we near the shining shore,
For we know across the river,
Wait the loved ones gone before.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved ones, and a copy be spread on the minutes of our lodge books.

Men and Women and Money.

Divide $500 between a boy and a girl and start them on a vacation with it, and the girl will go twice as far, see ten times as much and come home with new clothes and money in her purse. But the boy will be dead broke and have seen less. This is the difference: A girl when out sightseeing will live on crackers and soda water, and the boy will stuff himself with three big meals a day. The same difference is apparent when the boy and girl are grown. Ever know that father spends a lot on eating when traveling and doesn't get to see as much as mother, who makes every time she misses a meal take her a few miles farther?—Acheson Globe.

What Would You Do?

In case of a burn or scald what would you do to relieve the pain? Such injuries are liable to occur in any family and everyone should be prepared for them. Chamberlain's Salve applied on a soft cloth will relieve the pain almost instantly, and remove the injury in a very serious case, will cause the pain to heal without leaving a mark. CLASHING STARS.

A Greenroom Guard in Which Marie Rose Triumphed.

Marie Hauck and Marie Rose had quarreled over "Carmen." One night "The Marriage of Figaro" was announced, with Rose as Suzanne and Hauck as Cherubino.

"At 8 o'clock that afternoon," writes Mr. Upson, "Hauck went into the theater and pre-empted the prima donna's room by depositing her things there. An hour later Rose's maid reached the theater and proceeded to the same room, only to find it filled with the hated rival's traps. Rose notified the colonel (Henry Mapleson). He was promptly on the scene and began moving Hauck's belongings to the opposite room and instructing his wife to be at the theater precisely at 8.

"At half past 8, however, Hauck went the other way (her husband) to the theater to see that everything was right. The chevalier found that everything was not right and ordered Rose's belongings to be removed, replaced his wife's and had everything, including the door, stoutly locked.

"At 8 Rose arrived, prepared to 'hold the fort,' but as she couldn't get into the fort to hold it she sent for the colonel, who sent for a locksmith, who opened the door. Hauck's things were unceremoniously bundled out. At half past 8 Hauck came to the room to dress, and, much to her surprise and to the chevalier's chagrin, Rose was in there calmly dressing. What passed between them probably no one will ever know, but Hauck went back to her hotel and notified the manager that she would not sing that evening. And she didn't."—Pearson's Weekly.

Wedding Horses.

An old fashioned man who wanted to hire a team for the afternoon saw a nice pair of bays which he thought he would like to drive.

"Can't let you have them," said the liveryman. "They are wedding horses."

"What's that?" asked the innocent pleasure seeker.

"Horses that won't shy at old shoes and showers of rice. Such horses seem prejudiced against matrimony. Anyhow they lose their temper if they happen to be hit by any of the good luck emblems that are fired after a bridal couple and run away if they get half a chance. Every livery stable, however, keeps two or more horses that take a more cheerful view of the wedded state. They may be literally pelted with old shoes without resenting it. Those bays are that kind. They are slated to head a wedding procession tonight and are resting up for the job."—New York Sun.

What an immense number of "chinks" there are in Alabama and good old Chilton has a thousand of them. Hurrah Chilton!

The cases of most interest in Circuit Court next week, and which special juries will be required, are:

Jim Harbin, charged with murder, set for Tuesday.

T. M. Murray, robbery, Monday.

Joe Wilson, murder, Wednesday.

Seven Good Rules.

Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today.

Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.

Never spend your money before you have it.

Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap.

We seldom repent of having done too little.

Nothing is troublesome that is willingly.

Trick With a Ball.

Take a ball in each hand and both your hands as far as you can from the other; then inform the pay that you will make both come into which hand they please. If any one doubts your performance this feat you must perform on the table, turn yourself and then take it up with the ball already contains a ball both the balls will be in one hand without the employment of them.

Two Kinds.

The spectators in a county room were waxing very demonstrative over the testimony of one of the names. The judge sternly admonished them to keep quiet, but to no avail. The offense was soon repeated. "Clear the courtroom!" called the judge to the bailiff.

The latter stepped forth promptly, striking a forensic attitude. "Them blackguards that ain't will have to get out. Them lawyers can stay."—Lippincott.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

No longer is he a COMER—
he's a GONER!

What an immense number of "comers" there are in Alabama, and good old Clanton has a full complement of them. Hurrah for Clanton!

The cases of most interest in the Circuit Court next week, and for which special juries will be required, are:

Jim Harbin, charged with murder, set for Tuesday.

T. M. Murray, robbery, Wednesday.

Joe Wilson, murder, Wednesday.

Seven Good Rules.

Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today.

Never trouble another for what you do to yourself.

Never spend your money before you have it.

Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap.

Pride costs us more than hunger, thirst and cold.

We seldom repent of having eaten too little.

Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.

Trick With a Ball.

Take a ball in each hand and stretch both your hands as far as you can from the other; then inform the company that you will make both balls come into which hand they please to name. If any one doubts your ability to perform this feat you must lay one ball on the table, turn yourself around and then take it up with the hand which already contains a ball. Thus both the balls will be in one of your hands without the employment of both of them.

Two Kinds.

The spectators in a county court were waxing very demonstrative over the testimony of one of the witnesses. The judge sternly admonished them to keep quiet, but to no effect. The offense was soon repeated.

"Clear the courtroom!" called out the judge to the bailiff.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Talk About Horses.

There is no kind of animal breeding that will pay better than the breeding of horses, but horses that will sell, not daughters or mares.

It will cost no more per pound to give a colt than a calf.

Any good type of colt will sell for more per pound when three years old than a calf.

Unless a man is especially adapted by nature to handle horses he should raise only the draft breeds and sell them unhandled.

Style and finish count in the market value of draft horses as well as in coach or driving horses.

Truck teams used in the large cities
are mated as carefully as coach teams.
Suits should be kept in the manglers.

It is a purifier and a mild tonic.
If we would all feed more grain and less hay to our horses they would be better off, and so would we.

Of all things a horse hates to lie down in a filthy bed. By nature he is a cleanly animal. He is worthy of a good, clean bed every day that he lives.

Put a blanket on the driving horse
now to keep his coat short and glossy.
—Farm Journal.

About Molasses Feeds.

The so called molasses feeds which are now appearing in our market in great number are a somewhat new thing in the feeding stuffs trade. Unfortunately most of them cannot be commended as being compounded wholly out of good materials. A careful study of several brands both this year and in 1908 reveals the presence in most of these feeds of a great variety of weed seeds, sometimes in generous proportions. Other inferior materials are also present. While out hulls, oat glumes, weed seeds and straw are found in the mixtures, no attempt is made to indicate the source of these inferior ingredients, and it is difficult to give the proportions in which they are present. They may have in part been introduced as such,

but in general this promiscuous combination of such materials shows the use of such wastes as mill screenings, mill sweepings, etc. Indeed, some manufacturers do not deny the use of these mill wastes. The heavy by-products that are used in many brands

often contain an appreciable quantity of weed seeds.—Country Gentleman.

Sound Shoulders.

How many a draft horse do we see laboring along with the farmer's burden, his shoulders raw and aching under the collar and the owner oblivious to it all. This is an unnecessary evil and is the result of carelessness and neglect. A few preventive measures when the heavy work starts will allow the horse greater ease and enable him to do better work. Above all, keep the shoulders clean. A good washing and rubbing when the collar is removed and the shoulders hot and chafed will relieve the soreness and prevent the sore which derides so much from his value and usefulness. See that the collar fits and that there are no cracks or rough edges to chafe the skin. A horse's flesh is not armored in sheet iron.—Farmer.

Lice in the Menhouse.

A good disinfectant for painting the rooms for lice and mites is made as follows: Shave one cake of laundry

soap into a pint of soft water; heat or allow to stand until a soap paste is formed; stir in one pound of commercial cresol and heat or allow to stand until the soap paste is dissolved; stir in a gallon of kerosene. Cresol is a coal tar product and may be obtained from the druggist. Care should be taken not to get any of it upon the hands or face, as it will cause intense smarting. For use as a lice paint apply undiluted.—Farm and Home.

About Your Drug Purchases.

Few people have the opportunity to become competent judges of the real value of the majority of things sold in a drug store. Surely there is no class of merchandise upon which you must depend so much on the integrity and business honor of a store as when buying drug store goods.

The highest principles of business integrity are behind every transaction at this store, and when you trade here you have the comforting assurance that the goods are in every way exactly as represented. So why not buy your drug store wants here? We have a large, well assorted stock of "quality" merchandise at the right prices.

A WORD TO MY MANY CHILTON COUNTY FRIENDS

I have just gotten in a line of Dry Goods, Notions, Shoes, etc. These goods are bought right, and priced to sell, not to keep. I especially invite the ladies to call and inspect my stock, as they will see that I remembered the wants and needs of the women, children and babies as well as the men and boys.

This store will be continually receiving fresh goods the year round. You will find many things here for sale that you will not find at other stores in the country. You will also be astonished at the very low prices on many articles that I am able to make you; money saved is money made. Come and be convinced that I can save you money on many things that you have to buy. There are several reasons why I can save you money on your cash purchases.

- 1st. This is strictly a cash store thus doing away with the expense of a book-keeper, which is a saving of from six to nine hundred dollars a year.
- 2nd. This store will not have any bad account to lose and to be put on to the price of goods that you buy.
- 3d. I will have no collection agency to pay.
- 4th. This is a low price store. goods will be sold to everyone at the same price.

When the people once find this out, half the force can wait on the same trade, which will lessen the expense of running any business.

This store is located next door to new Post Office building.

Yours, anxious to please,
W. D. SPIGENER.

On the morning of Nov. 15th, 1909, death entered the home of Mrs. Mattie Davis and took from it her aged mother, Mrs. Margaret Mawdy. She had been very feeble for some time, being in her 84th year. Her death was very sudden but peaceful as a little babe going to sleep. She was a daughter of Rev. Abraham Nabors, formerly of Shelby county, and had been a consistent member of the M. E. Church for 70 years. She leaves two daughters and a number of grandchildren and great grandchildren and friends to mourn her loss. But weep not, dear ones, for our loss is heaven's eternal gain, and may we all live so as to meet her in a brighter world beyond, for we feel sure that dear one is at rest; but, Oh! how sadly we all shall miss her here. She was laid to rest in Stanton cemetery on the 19th Nov., Revs. Martin and Radcliff conducting funeral services. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones.

The Young Oak.

Once as I was botanizing under an oak I found among a number of other plants of similar height one that was dark in color with tightly closed leaves and a stalk that was very straight and stiff. When I touched it, it said to me in firm tones: "Let me alone. I am not for your collection, like those plants to which nature has given only a single year of life. I am a little oak."

So it is with a man whose influence is to last for hundreds of years. As a child, as a youth, often even as a full grown man—say, his whole life long—he goes about among his fellows, looking like them and seemingly as unimportant. But let him alone. He will not die. Time will come and bring those who know how to value him—Schopenhauer.

An Imposter.

"Have you any skeleton in your family closet?" the prospective father-in-law asked of the titled suitor at the family hearing.

"None."

"Then perhaps you have a past?"

"I have not."

The parents whispered together a moment.

"You, of course, have debts?" the millionaire resumed.

"Not one."

The mother faintly. The millionaire towered.

"Sir," he thundered, "how dare you! This is no romance at all, but only a love match."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Enterprising.

An immigration official said recently of an immigrant:

"He was a bad case. He was an ignorant of government as the two Polish policemen were. Two new policemen were once put on the Warsaw force. They did good work. They arrested a lot of people; then suddenly they resigned."

"Why are you resigning?" the superintendent asked.

"The older of the two men answered respectfully:

"We are going to start a police station of our own, sir. Boris here will make the arrests, and I will do the flogging."—Washington Star.

A Blessing to Women

VIN O VITE is a valuable medicine in the treatment of all derangements of women. It is scientifically compounded from roots, herbs and barks and not from mineral poisons and drugs of doubtful value. VIN O VITE is reliable, harmless, and highly efficacious in correcting irregularities and drains. Restores health by giving strength to the entire system. For painful, profuse or irregular menstruation, chronic congestion, ulceration, displacement attended with kidney disorder. VIN O VITE is a wonderful passage. Druggists sell it at $1.00 per bottle—or send to the Granger Medicine Company, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Sinking Spells Every Few Days

"At the time I began having sinking spells every few days. My hands and feet would get cold. I could not breathe, and could feel gradually sinking away. I would be unconscious. MAN ON THE CORNER

With the near approach of Christmas, when everyone feels that there is "Peace on earth and good will to men," it is pleasant to note the preparations in progress for its celebration, and among the many attractions there is none more than the display of our merchandise of goods suitable more especially for the holiday season. Let us take a stroll through the stores of our friends, whose advertisements you will find in The Banner, and we shall need some money, so let us first step into the Clanton Bank or the Peoples Savings Bank and fill our pockets with the rock of gold.

Of all the pretty sights these cool evenings, a cheerful fire in a comfortable room, well lighted by one of those elegant lamps to be seen at the Gamble Hardware Co's store is certainly one of the most comfortable. They have a handsome line of crockery and glassware, and stores and heaters to suit everyone.

Step into the Upchurch Drug Co's store and admire the endless variety of toys and handsome presents for the girls and boys, with jewelry and other suitable gifts for older folks. Where is the grown-up who isn't just as pleased as the little ones with a Christmas present?

And across the street we look in at the Alred Drug Co., whose handsome store is crammed and packed with all sorts of Christmas gifts and handsome presents for both young and old. The children delight in the gorgeous display of toys, and eagerly discuss what they would like to receive for a Christmas present.

Our good friends, Cannon & Sons, have an inexhaustible stock of fine clothing, shoes, hats and overcoats, which they are offering for the holidays at a discount of 25 per cent. It will warm the cockles of your heart to see some of the bargains they will show you.

This way, ladies, and we walk into the abode of fashion—the Clanton Millinery Co., where our eyes are regaled with a sight of the latest creations in the millinery art. Mrs. Mullins is proud of her stock and is delighted to show it to us.

When not engaged in buying cotton, E. M. Pinckard & Co. have an elegant display of all kinds of merchandise in their large storehouse, a good and substantial stock from which to make a selection. Call in and look around.

Next door we find J. C. Jones, who has recently taken into partnership, W. A. Kemp, and they will show us a nice and complete line of goods as can be found anywhere. Dry goods or dress goods, material at reasonable prices, and what we find at this store, theemporium of fashion.

The headquarters of Santa Claus, according to the advertisement elsewhere, is at the Clanton Furniture Co's store, and for a beautiful display of toys, etc., we think Santa must have already made two or three trips here, but we suspect there will be a clearing out by Christmas day.

How d'ye do, Mr. Sartor? You make such a pretty showing in your window it entices us inside, where we are pleased to find a store of good things at "A live and let live" prices. (Continued on 2d column, page 6)

The greatest danger from influenza is of its resulting in pneumonia. This can be obviated by using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, as it not only cures influenza, but counteracts any tendency of the disease towards pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

West Chilton

Editor Banner. I wish to say that this amendment that was earnestly voted out the 29th was the worst thing that has ever come upon old Alabama since the secession in 1861. It has not divided States as the secession did, but it divided political parties and it divided denominations, and it divided churches, and it divided families. This I know by my own family and church. I guess Mr. Comer sees now that there is more skunks than he thought was in Alabama. Whiskey has always been here and will always be here. It is not going to the man; if the man will let it alone, it will let the man alone. There has been too much preaching by the ministers in the churches, which has done a great deal of harm among members. There is a great deal of hard feeling and malice and bitterness now existing between friends and families caused by this unnecessary amendment. Now we wish to say to all who did not vote with the skunks to lay down all bitterness engendered by the election on the 29th and bury the hatchet, as partisan strife is over. So now let each party and men of both sides generally strike hands and go forward with the determination to get closer together than ever before and as Christmas is close by, let us all fix up and make ready and have a big egg-nog Christmas. With peace and good will to all men and women, I am still

R. F. D. NO. 1.

Editor Banner—Permit me a small space in your columns to say a few words. The amendment question is over and it is dead for good now. The next question for the farmers of Beat 9 is stock law. I noticed there was a man circulating a petition for stock law at Thorsby. Now, boys, see if you want more trouble with your stock than they are worth to you, sign that petition and help him get that drastic stock law, for without stock law you have two privileges and with stock law you only have one: grass or no grass, you have to keep your cow in the pasture; no pasture, no milk and butter, no beef and meat. I know of one man in Beat 14 who whooped up stock law and said he could keep a cow on two acres of pasture and she would be mud fat. I know that this cow hasn't given over a pint at a milking and is dead poor. This shows what some folks know about keeping cows on a pasture. If you want your meat to cost you 25 cents per pound, just support stock law. Some put up an argument that stock law means no fence, but my experience is it means more fence and better fence if you get the benefit of your fall pastures. No man knows the trouble it is till he tries it. So boys get busy and down this thing in Beat 9 so that it never will be heard of again. Yours against stock law, THE OLD COON.

TEACHERS EXAMINATION.

The next State Teachers Examination for Chilton county will be held in the court house at Clanton beginning on the third Monday in December, 1909. The examination will open at 10 o'clock a.m. All applicants should be present at 9 a.m. that they may finish the preliminary work by 10 a.m. J. W. MOORE, Co. Supt.

NOTICE

Sardis

Editor Banner—Please allow us a small space in the dear old Banner to say a few words. Health of this community is very good. We are glad to say Mr. W. M. Post is improving fast.

The school at Vermont is progressing nicely under the careful management of Prof. Alph. Deason. We all like our teacher fine. We will move into our new school house Monday. We will all be glad when we get into our new house, we are tired of changing places so much.

Mr. G. W. Sansom and family have moved from Autauga county to Mr. Johnnie Chambers, where they will stay next year. We are glad to see them move back to old Chilton.

Bro. Honeycutt filled his regular appointment Saturday and Sunday at Sardis and preached an excellent sermon to a large congregation. Mr. John G. Minor and family have moved to Maplesville, and Mr. Preston Derramus has moved on his place to farm next year.

We think the wedding bells will be ringing up the road. Best wishes to the Banner and its many readers. Two Girls.

CHOYNSKI'S NEW BOXING RULES.

Ex-Pugilist Suggests Improvement in Queensberry Rules.

FOR JEFFRIES-JOHNSON FIGHT

Thinks His Code Will Be Acceptable to Both Fighters—Many Followers of Pugilism Said to Consider Choynski's Substitution Worthy of Note.

Joe Choynski, one of the cleverest heavyweights in the ring a dozen years ago, says the proposed fight between Jim Jeffries and Jack Johnson should be governed by a set of revised rules, and he has taken the trouble to draw up a code which he thinks will be acceptable to both men. Choynski's rules follow:

1. To be a fair stand up boxing match in a twenty-four foot ring or as near that size as practicable.
2. No wrestling, hugging, heeling, butting or gouging allowed.
3. The rounds to be of three minutes duration and one minute between rounds.
4. If either man is knocked down he must get up unaided inside of ten seconds, the other man meanwhile to move about ten feet away, so as to give the man who is down a chance to arise. When the fallen man is on his feet the round is to be resumed and continued until the three minutes have expired. If the man who has been knocked down fails to lie on his feet inside of the ten seconds allowed the referee shall give his decision in favor of the other man.
5. A man hanging on the ropes in a helpless state with his toes off the ground shall be considered down.

Only Principals and Referee in Ring.

6. No seconds or any other persons except the principals and the referee shall be allowed in the ring during the rounds. Any second or other person entering the ring during the rounds shall be ejected and the contest shall continue and no foul allowed on that account.

Should a Glove Burst or Come off.

7. Should a glove burst or come off the referee shall order both men to their corners, where the glove or gloves must be fixed to the satisfaction of the referee. The time consumed in replacing the glove or gloves shall not be counted as part of the time of the round.

A Man on One Knee is Considered Down.

8. A man on one knee is considered down and if struck is entitled to the decision.

Only Boxing Shoes, Regulation Style.

9. Only boxing shoes, regulation style, with either canvas, oilskin or rubber soles allowed.

Hitting in the Breakaway is Permitted.

10. When the referee orders the men to break they must obey instantly and release each other at once.

The Official Timekeeper of the Club.

11. The official timekeeper of the club shall only time the rounds and the referee shall be the only one to count on knock-downs in any manner deemed best by him.

If in the Opinion of the Referee the Contestants are "Taking."

12. If in the opinion of the referee the contestants are "taking," he may declare the bout "no contest," in which event the club need not pay the purse or any part of it.

Ruling of Fouls.

13. If a contestant commits a foul which in the opinion of the referee is intentional and does not incapacitate his opponent from continuing he shall be warned, but if the foul incapacitates his opponent from continuing or in the opinion of the referee destroys his chances of winning he shall be disqualified.

14. If a man commits a deliberate foul he shall be immediately disqualified and shall receive no part of the purse.

15. If in the opinion of the referee a bout becomes dangerous to one of the contestants or an inevitable knockout seems unavoidable he may stop the bout and render his decision.

16. If a second throws up the sponge when it is apparent to the referee that the principal can continue and have a chance of winning the contest shall not be stopped, but the second offending shall be ejected from the building and not allowed to act as second at any future time before any club.

17. Any controversy arising between contestants through different interpretations of the foregoing rules by each or relative to points not covered by these rules shall be decided by the referee and his decision shall be final and binding on both contestants as well as on their seconds and others connected with them in any capacity whatsoever.

18. Any principal, second or timekeeper who willfully violates any of these rules shall be deemed to have acted in a capacity of principal, second or timekeeper in future.

19. The foregoing rules shall be considered part of the articles of agreement between the contestants, with each other and with the club before which they are to box.

20. In the Marquis of Queensberry code there are twelve rules. In Choynski's code rules 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9 and 10 are practically taken from the Queensberry rules, though more clearly defined. Taken as a whole the Queensberry rules are out of date, and Choynski's substitution is worthy of note, according to many followers of pugilism. The National Sporting Club of London has recently adopted new rules of its own framing and has passed the Queensberry code up for all time.

Lion Skin Coats the Latest.

As a natural result of the success of a great hunter in Africa the lion skin coat has made its appearance. Few coats will be worn for the excellent reason that lions are scarce and imitation is impossible. The coats are for the automobile and come from London. The stitching is done with thread made from the lion's hair. The collar consists of the two fore-paws ornamented with the animal's claws. The pockets and leather buttons also are trimmed with claws, and the tail hangs over the sleeve as an added trimming.

New Photographic Lens.

A recent British invention of interest to photographers is a lens by which a picture may be taken on all sides at once.

TEST FOR EGGS.

Place One in a Glass of Water and Observe Its Position.

Placed in the water, an egg if fresh will remain floating at the bottom of the vessel. If not quite fresh it will float with the big end raised higher than the small end, and the higher the big end is raised the older the egg. As an egg gets older the water contained in the white of an egg evaporates.

WATER TEST OF EGGS.

rates, and this causes the empty space at the thick end of every egg to become enlarged. The larger that empty space becomes the more the egg rises in the water, till in course of time it floats.

WHEN PLANNING A HOUSE.

It's Foolish to Set Your Heart on Styles Beyond Your Means.

Half the pleasure in building lies in the planning. Later will come chronic warfare with builders and worry over increased estimates. Only in anticipation is the joy unalloyed.

This joy is heightened if one begins long before there is money in hand to plan systematically for the house that is to be.

Let it be the object of many expenditures. Whenever you see a house that appeals to you, or even one feature of that house, jot down details in a notebook. If possible, find the architect's name and the approximate cost. It is foolish to set your heart on styles beyond your means.

Soon you will be reading up on books of architecture so as not to be taken in when you "do come to build." Next there will be a magazine devoted to beautiful houses and their fittings.

If you are really an ardent planner, be systematic. Start a scrap book, and in it paste pictures, advertisements and furnishings that have caught your fancy.

Make this book of good size and preferably loose leaved. You can cover sheets of cardboard a size larger than the usual magazine form, say seventeen inches long by twelve wide. Choose a serviceable dark green tulle for the covering and on it embroider in red and gilt letters "The House That Jack Built."

Sheets of yellow paper an inch smaller each way can be got cheaply at wholesale paper dealers. These can be added to the book as needed. Often, too, it will be found that you want to weed out some of your old pages, and it is surprising how your ideas change and progress about "that house."

Even though the new home remains to the end a house of dreams you will have had pleasure, education and happiness in its planning, not to speak of health if you did much tramping in your zeal to see new models.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

The girls of the Boston public schools are to have an opportunity of taking part in outdoor sports on the same terms as their brothers. Outdoor games and gymnastics will be made part of the curriculum just as soon as playgrounds for girls can be fitted up.

The Duchess of Fife, better known as the princess royal, who is a daughter of King Edward, has started an earnest campaign for high neck evening dresses. The duchess has been appearing in court and at the opera in gowns unusually high, and her example is being followed by many women in London, including Americans.

From Germany comes an interesting story concerning three little girls. Herr Kressler, a mercantile clerk and the father of the children, was, it seems, some years ago staying at Borkum and while there chanced to save an elderly Japanese gentleman from drowning, and the latter proved to be Baron Wiyoshi of the Japanese embassy in Berlin. He has just died and left to each of Herr Kressler's little daughters the sum of 20,000 marks, or $5,000, provided that they dress like Japanese until they reach the age of fourteen.

The German empress has inaugurated many philanthropic organizations in Berlin, one of the most useful being that of the Central Association of German Actresses. The work of this society is to enable actresses to provide themselves with necessary theatrical costumes at the lowest cost. The empress gives this charity all her court and evening gowns, and many of the ladies in Berlin society follow her example. Those ladies who do not feel inclined to give outright sell their clothes to the association as cheaply as possible. The empress is president of this admirable society charity, and the pleasant intercourse established by it has done much to raise the standard of the social side of the German stage.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

New York's New Mayor.

Judge William J. Gaynor, Democrat, recently elected mayor of New York city, will serve a term of four years from Jan. 1, 1910, unless the unforeseen happens. Although the head of its ticket was elected, Tammany lost the board of estimate, which controls the city's purse strings. The board of estimate is made up of members chosen by popular election, and has very great power.

Judge Gaynor did not receive a majority of the ballots cast, the combined vote of his two chief opponents, Otto Bannard, Fusion, and William Randolph Hearst, Civic Alliance, far outnumbering that recorded for him.

Judge Gaynor is a native of New York state, is fifty-eight years old and has been on the bench nearly sixteen years. It has been said of him that never was there such a judge in Kings county for clearing up the calendar.

WILLIAM J. GAYNOR.

His capacity for work is prodigious. His elevation to the supreme bench came about in this way. The Brooklyn ring of that day had decided that the county of Kings should pay $1,500,000 for a waterworks. The waterworks were worth nothing like that, but they were to be bought from the machine itself. The deal was going through when Gaynor went to William Ziegler, a friend of his, and asked him to start a taxpayer's suit, retaining Gaynor as attorney. Ziegler lent his name and money to the cause, and Gaynor supplied the brains. As a result of the suit Brooklyn paid $250,000 instead of $1,500,000 for the waterworks. Then he attacked John Y. McKane, the "king of Coney Island," and sent him to state prison. Since then Judge Gaynor has been a power to reckon with.

The Gompers Contempt Case.

According to the decision recently rendered by the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, the jail sentences imposed by Justice Wright of the District of Columbia supreme court on President Samuel Gompers, Vice President John Mitchell and Secretary Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor for contempt of court are approved. Gompers was sentenced to serve one year, Mitchell nine months and Morrison six months. The case will be appealed to the supreme court of the United States.

The contempt proceedings grew out of an action taken by the Buck's Store and Range company of St. Louis to compel the American Federation of Labor from maintaining a boycott of centuries the Chinese women are at last awake and doing. They have abolished the custom of compressing feet, they have organized a chain of women's clubs throughout the empire, and even a princess of the royal blood, one of the six daughters of the present king, and a sister-in-law of the present emperor, is doing splendid work along educational lines for Chinese girls. The illustration shows the daughter of Prince Ching gowned in royal splendor.

The Newspaper Excuse.

Thrice foolish is the woman who is jealous of her husband's newspaper. Of all the pious, lame, weakening excuses for taking offense the newspaper excuse is the weakest.

There is that intolerable woman who thinks her husband has ceased to love her because he would rather read the morning paper than scan her countenance as she pours his breakfast coffee.

If she only knew it the newspaper is her best friend. It is a conservator of the peace in any home, and its presence should be welcomed and encouraged rather than scorned. Take the morning, for instance, when you thought to take those extra forty miles, which turned out to be more like forty minutes, and the breakfast is late—irrevocably, hopelessly late.

Then is the time for you to pin your faith and trust to the newspaper and say nothing.

Words are fatal at a time like this. Don't apologize; don't explain. Simply hand your husband the morning paper and put the coffee on.

Ignore the clock, and before he knows it that irate husband is plunged into an article that bridges him peacefully over that quarter of an hour before breakfast is ready.

Then, too, the newspaper is an excellent safety valve.

If John is in an irritable mood it is much better for him to vent his wrath on his pet abomination as depicted in the columns of the modern newspaper than to express his views on the shortcomings of his family. Better berate the slowness of the senate than the slowness of the cook, and far better decry greed and graft on the part of public officials than wanton extravagance on the part of his wife.

The newspaper, indeed, should be a savior and keeper of the peace instead of a stirrer up of jealousy and aggrieved feelings.

Then, too, think with how much more sympathy does the man well versed in newspaper lore view his wife's little excursions into shopdom. Those little jaunts after bargains that result in late dinners are heard with the sympathetic ear, for have not his own eyes scanned the screaming ads?

By all means encourage the newspaper habit in your husband. Read the paper yourself, too, and be able to talk to him about something else than why the pudding is burned. If you had been drawing him out tactfully on the latest sensation in politics or even on the murder trial on the front page he wouldn't have known that the pudding was burned, and if he had he wouldn't have cared.

Lord Greenfield, being asked to buy something by a smart young man who kept a table at a London bazaar, said that he wanted what was not for sale, a lock of her hair, whereupon she promptly cut off the coveted curl and handed it to him, naming the price.

—$100. Later the purchaser was showing his trophy to a little circle of friends. "She rather had you there," laughed one benedict. "To my certain knowledge she paid only $5 for the lock of hair."

THE WOMEN OF CHINA.

Political and Educational Movements Interest the Oriental Fair Sex.

The women of China have begun to assert themselves in earnest. A political meeting held by women took place a short time ago in Canton, and 10,000 were present. The object was to demonstrate the feeling of the women of China in favor of boycott against Japan. The platform was decorated and bands played. Women were the only speakers, and as speakers they were very good. It was the 10,000 to enthusiasm. "It was upon us," she said, "to contribute our portion of patriotism and loyalty to our country and emperor. I say women never lack such patriotism, and I call upon one and all to show that 'China can rely on us whenever there is a call.' THE LITTLE GRAVE.

Rocky is daddy's boy emphatically. They take rambles together, share confidences and popcorn impartially, and every place that daddy goes is Rocky sure to go, seeing the sights of the streets, taking excursions into mysterious regions and regarding with wonder and amazement the gorgeous and highly colored circus posters on the barns.

How warm it was that Sunday when daddy called a halt for a bit of rest, the generous shade of the statuary elm way out the Taylor mill road. It was in August, and the air was heavy. The locust and the cypress, and the peevish rain crow, were holding concerts of dissonance, and drowsiness was in the neighborhood. Here and there, and everywhere, ran Rocky, plucking the blossoms from weeds and the bloom from the clover, binding the plumes of the blue grass into garlands and crowning daisy with them, while in unbroken talk and laugh his pure, fresh voice played an obligate sweeter than flute could give. Suddenly the prattle ceased, and the little fellow stood looking up the pike, motionless, erect and rigid as a statue, his hands clasped and between them his little wooden dog.

Down the road three people were slowly walking with the stride, the manner, the dress and that indefinable something that belongs to the mountaineers and to the town alone. First came a man of about thirty-five, tall, erect, spare and alert, his broad shoulders of some color originally no doubt shading, but now concealing, eyes that had looked from birth on mist and mountain and tangled paths and mighty nature everywhere. They were stern eyes, yet kindly, true to the hand that pulled the trigger and never missed the revenue on his hunt for moonshine stills and fees. Behind him was a woman, his wife, full ten years younger, clad in faded calico, her sunbonnet thrown back to her forehead, the strings between her lips, pale of countenance, high of forehead, eyes of blue and step as graceful and as light as the deer of her native mountains. Then came a little girl, bareheaded, barefooted, shy as a fawn, with eyes of the hawk and hair the color of the winter sun.

They sat down on the edge of the road just below daddy, who could see, but not be seen, and the woman sighed, then throwing back her bonnet, looked listlessly round her until her eyes rested on Rocky. For a moment there passed lingeringly over her face the evidence of the pain that comes only from remembrance of the dead. Then, rising, she stretched out her arms to Rocky, who half started, partly poised himself on one foot and shot a glance in the direction of daddy. As a flash the mountaineer was on his feet, one arm outstretched across the woman's breast as though to warn her back. But the woman's heart knew better. Softly stepping forward and with her arms outstretched, with shining tears raining down her cheeks and a smile of heartbreaking sadness, she stood in front of Rocky and, falling on her knees, clasped him to her breast and kissed him again and again, while he, half frightened at first and gently striving to disengage himself, at last gave over for fear and, kissing her, broke from her embrace and ran to daddy with quivering lips and eyes all dimmed.

"Hil was we was" one little boy she is a thinker of," said the mountaineer in the slow and grave speech of his people, placing one hand on Rocky's head and the other on the woman's.

Suddenly the prattle ceased, and the little fellow stood looking up the pike, motionless, erect and rigid as a statue, his hands clasped and between them his little wooden dog.

Down the road three people were slowly walking with the stride, the manner, the dress and that indefinable something that belongs to the mountaineers and to the town alone. First came a man of about thirty-five, tall, erect, spare and alert, his broad shoulders of some color originally no doubt shading, but now concealing, eyes that had looked from birth on mist and mountain and tangled paths and mighty nature everywhere. They were stern eyes, yet kindly, true to the hand that pulled the trigger and never missed the revenue on his hunt for moonshine stills and fees. Behind him was a woman, his wife, full ten years younger, clad in faded calico, her sunbonnet thrown back to her forehead, the strings between her lips, pale of countenance, high of forehead, eyes of blue and step as graceful and as light as the deer of her native mountains. Then came a little girl, bareheaded, barefooted, shy as a fawn, with eyes of the hawk and hair the color of the winter sun.

They sat down on the edge of the road just below daddy, who could see, but not be seen, and the woman sighed, then throwing back her bonnet, looked listlessly round her until her eyes rested on Rocky. For a moment there passed lingeringly over her face the evidence of the pain that comes only from remembrance of the dead. Then, rising, she stretched out her arms to Rocky, who half started, partly poised himself on one foot and shot a glance in the direction of daddy. As a flash the mountaineer was on his feet, one arm outstretched across the woman's breast as though to warn her back. But the woman's heart knew better. Softly stepping forward and with her arms outstretched, with shining tears raining down her cheeks and a smile of heartbreaking sadness, she stood in front of Rocky and, falling on her knees, clasped him to her breast and kissed him again and again, while he, half frightened at first and gently striving to disengage himself, at last gave over for fear and, kissing her, broke from her embrace and ran to daddy with quivering lips and eyes all dimmed.

"Hil was we was" one little boy she is a thinker of," said the mountaineer in the slow and grave speech of his people, placing one hand on Rocky's head and the other on the woman's.

THE LITTLE GRAVE.

Rocky is daddy's boy emphatically. They take rambles together, share confidences and popcorn impartially, and every place that daddy goes is Rocky sure to go, seeing the sights of the streets, taking excursions into mysterious regions and regarding with wonder and amazement the gorgeous and highly colored circus posters on the barns.

How warm it was that Sunday when daddy called a halt for a bit of rest, the generous shade of the statuary elm way out the Taylor mill road. It was in August, and the air was heavy. The locust and the cypress, and the peevish rain crow, were holding concerts of dissonance, and drowsiness was in the neighborhood. Here and there, and everywhere, ran Rocky, plucking the blossoms from weeds and the bloom from the clover, binding the plumes of the blue grass into garlands and crowning daisy with them, while in unbroken talk and laugh his pure, fresh voice played an obligate sweeter than flute could give. Suddenly the prattle ceased, and the little fellow stood looking up the pike, motionless, erect and rigid as a statue, his hands clasped and between them his little wooden dog.

SPIGENER'S CASH STORE

A WORD TO MY MANY CHILTON COUNTY FRIENDS

I have just gotten in a line of Dry Goods, Notions, shoes, etc. These goods are bought right, and priced to sell, not to keep. I especially invite the ladies to call and inspect my stock, as they will see that I remembered the wants and need of the woman, children and babies as well as the men and boys.

This store will be continually receiving fresh goods the year round. You will find many things here for sale that you will not find at other stores in the country. You will also be astonished at the very low prices on many articles that I am able to make you; money saved is money made. Come and be convinced that I can save you money on many things that you have to buy. There are several reasons why I can save you money on your cash purchases.

- 1st. This is strictly a cash store thus doing away with the expense of a book-keeper, which is a saving of from six to nine hundred dollars a year.
- 2nd. This store will not have any bad account to lose and to be put on to the price of goods that you buy.
- 3d. I will have no collection agency to pay.
- 4th. This is a one price store. Goods will be sold to everyone at the same price.

When the people once find this out, half the force can wait on the same trade, which will lessen the expense of running any business. This store is located next door to new Post Office building.

Yours, anxious to please,
W. D. SPIGENER

Farm and Garden

AUTOMOBILES FOR POWER.

Pressure Cars May Be Utilized For Farm Work.

Automobiles are coming into use on the farm as a means of pleasure for the farmer and his family. There is nothing more natural than a desire to utilize the splendid power plant contained in a car for other purposes than propelling it over the roads. An ingenious farmer has solved the problem in a manner apparently satisfactory to himself. The farmer devised an arrangement whereby the act of putting the car in its shed places it in position and so associates the wheels with the machinery of the dairy that the engine when started will do the heavy work of running the separator.

The accompanying sketch shows this device so plainly that it is not necessary to describe it other than to call attention to the two rollers, one of which has its shaft extended outside the box to carry a pulley, from which the belt runs to an overhead shaft. It is easily apparent that the revolution of the wheels of the car will cause a reverse motion of the rolls, which is transmitted by means of the pulley and belt to the shaft and thence to the machinery. In this way the wear on the tires is rendered uniform. The grip on the rolls that these tires exercise is surprising.

A peculiarity of this arrangement is that the car shows a tendency to skid from side to side. This, however, is easily overcome by means of props or bumpers, which are put in place so as to limit the sideways motion of the car within the shed, the mere pressure of the hand serving to move the car easily when the wheels are revolving on the rolls.

In very warm weather or on long, heavy pulls it is sometimes necessary to connect the circulating system with the water supply in order to prevent heating of the cylinders.

For sawing wood, cutting feed or any work of an intermittent nature it is necessary for some one to control the engine on account of there being no governor. As a matter of fact, one farmer has a small boy at the throttle most of the time, as the separator is sometimes thrown off without warning.

All Around the Farm.

It is claimed by those who have trained many horses that, taking the colt when training first begins, they can be trained to walk over four miles an hour. The walking gait is the most important one to the farm and road horse. The mistake with many in training young horses is that they are too soon put to trotting, which is a gait they more readily learn than fast walking.

If the land is to be plowed twice before planting in order to make it thoroughly fine, it will be well to roll it before the second plowing in order to pack the surface somewhat and make the earth turn better without clogging the moldboard. The roller is also useful in breaking clods and in packing the surface to prevent excessive evaporation in dry weather.

In order to get hens in prime condition to produce fertile eggs you are required to follow as closely after nature's plan as possible. Provide them with a liberal amount of green food, together with animal food at least twice each week. If you cannot give them a large, roomy yard, release them from confinement at least an hour each day.

The day of the hog which is half wild fat is limited. Consul Webster of Niagara Falls states that the Canadian hog raisers and packers have been forced, through lack of demand for fat hogs, to produce the leaner bacon type which can be sold to advantage on the British market and is suitable for the export trade.

A heifer should be milked as long as possible during her first period of lactation even if she does not give much milk. When allowed to dry up at six months she will go dry every time at the same period when a cow. Heifers are very susceptible to education in this respect.

Provided the hen is cooped or tethered, young chickens may be allowed to run in the onion and asparagus beds.

Uncle Sam's Granary.

This country each year produces more corn than all other countries of the world combined—2,227,000,000 out of 3,588,000,000 bushels. It grows more wheat than any other country in the world—634,000,000 out of 3,108,000,000 bushels. It produces more oats than any other country in the world—754,000,000 out of 3,582,000,000 bushels. It is the third largest annual producer of barley in the world. 153,000,000 bushels—only 7,000,000 bushels less than Germany, with Russia leading.

AD FOR FARMERS' WIVES.

Uncle Sam's Extension of Institute Idea a Help For Women.

Extension of the Farmers' Institute idea to include the farmers' wives is the latest development of the policy of paternal solicitude for the great American agriculturist as pursued by the department of agriculture. The betterment of the home surroundings of the farmer, with particular regard for the advantages of good housekeeping, wholesome cooking, the observance of the laws of sanitation, the beautifying of the home inside and out, the economical administration of the women's side of the business of farming, pure water, ventilation and an endless variety of minor items which will tend to make the life of the farmer's wife and daughters more attractive are the purpose of this new division of the department.

Professor John Hamilton, formerly state secretary of agriculture of Pennsylvania, is at the head of the division of farmers' institutes.

The work of the women's institutes is perhaps broader in its scope than that for the men. It is certainly more varied. In twenty-one states of the Union they have begun the work already, and within a year or so every agricultural state in the Union will have organized institutes for the women folk.

The department of agriculture has just issued its first pamphlet on the subject of the farmers' institute for women. It is hoped that this will be but a forerunner of much more along the same lines. It is the hope of the department authorities that they will be able to put in circulation a comprehensive series of bulletins, similar to those in regular circulation on general farm subjects, which will prove of real interest and great value to the farm women of America—really worth while treatises on the art and science of living and being happy amid ideal farm surroundings.

The Beautiful Acacias.

The Australian acacias, or watties, as they are popularly called, form a valuable group of plants for greenhouse decoration during winter and spring, while for the mild districts in the south they are excellent for outdoor culture. When grown for the conservatory or greenhouse they are usually placed in pots or tubs, but where space can be afforded in winter gardens and similar structures they are first rate subjects for planting in borders. Planted in this manner, they grow rapidly into large bushes and flower profusely. One objection may be raised in planting acacias in borders, for in the event of a specimen getting too large for its position it cannot be successfully transplanted.

SILVER WATTLE.

without going to a great deal of trouble, for few shrubs or trees are more difficult to establish after serious root disturbance. By an annual pruning from the earliest years of a plant's life, however, it may be kept within bounds with little difficulty, while the selection of varieties of moderate growth is a point to consider. Although acacias will stand a very severe annual pruning it is unwise to cut it back to old wood, for it rarely breaks away again satisfactorily.

Little Facts For Farmers.

A government report says that in the United States 2,000,000 cattle die annually from disease, exposure and neglect. This country always feels uncomfortable when statistics of waste are brought up.

After ladders have been cut from the log they should be dried as rapidly and evenly as possible so as to remove the moisture and prevent checks. Wood should not be placed in contact with the ground until it has been thoroughly dried; otherwise some fungus will enter and cause rapid decay.

Here are some facts worth remembering: Fifty pounds of butter make one firkin; 100 pounds of fish make one quintal; 200 pounds of beef or pork make one barrel; 5 pounds make one keg; 100 pounds make one cask; 25 pounds make one barrel of soap; 250 pounds make one barrel of salt; four inches make one hand; 640 acres make one square mile, and 36 square miles make one township.

FOR THE CHILDREN

A Quotation Book.

This game is modeled after the old fashioned spelling bee, which used to be so popular and was always good fun.

Instead of words to spell, parts of sentences are given, and the leader of the party prepares in advance a long list of familiar quotations, proverbs, Mother Goose rhymes and the like.

One is teacher, and the rest sit in a row facing her. She gives out part of a quotation, instead of a word to spell, and the scholar must finish it out. The last half, instead of the first, may be given if the teacher chooses to make it a little more difficult.

Some very absurd attempts are made to give it correctly, as many people seem to take their knowledge in such matters for granted and are often very inaccurate. A time limit may be given for answering, and if the first scholar fails the question is then passed to the next. Those who miss go to the foot of the class; those who answer correctly "go up."

A book of familiar quotations or other suitable prize may be given the one answering the most quotations correctly.

Unique Old Book.

What is perhaps the most curious book in the world is possessed by the Prince de Ligne. This work is neither printed nor a manuscript, the text being formed of letters cut in vellum and pasted on blue paper. Notwithstanding this extraordinary method of presenting the text, the book is as easy of perusal as if printed in the boldest type. All the characters shown are cut with marvelous dexterity and precision. This unique volume bears the title "The Book of All Passions of Our Lord Jesus Christ, With Characters Not Composed of Any Materials." It is said that Rudolph II. offered no less than 11,000 ducats for this wonderful product of the bookmaker's art, but the offer was refused.—London Globe.

Clap In, Clap Out.

An old but favorite game is "clap in, clap out."

To play it the boys should all be sent out of the room and the chairs arranged in a line—one chair for each girl. The boy requested is brought in, but only a vacant line of chairs confronts him. Suddenly the doorkeeper claps her hands, and up behind the chairs rise a line of white ghosts. The boy walks up and down the room and finally chooses a chair. If it happens to be the chair of the girl who has asked for him he must remain there until all the chairs are filled. If it is not the right chair the ghosts shriek and clap their hands, and the boy is glad to escape from the room. Again the girls request a boy, and the game continues as before.

The Grand Mogul.

This is a favorite old game, which can be played to pass the time on a journey or while waiting out of doors as well as in the house.

"The grand mogul does not like 'E's,'" says one player. "What will you give him for dinner?" Each player answers in turn, but none of the dishes named may contain the letter E or the player using such a one must either "stand out" of the game or pay a forfeit. Thus the answer may be apricots, mutton or soup, but not apples, beef or potatoes.

Any letter may be chosen and continued till all fail, and the last one left is the winner.

Novel Way to Crack a Nut.

Stick a sharply pointed knife with a heavy handle lightly into the lintel of a door and place under it on the threshold a nut so that when the knife is released the nut will be cracked.

To make sure that the knife shall hit the nut squarely hold a cup of water so that it will wet the handle of the knife and then remove it. The water will form in a drop on the handle and be precipitated in exactly the spot where the nut should be placed.

This and That.

A confederate is necessary for this trick. The one performing the trick goes out of the room, and the confederate agrees with the audience to touch a certain article. The person outside is recalled, and his confederate begins to question him. "Did I touch this music book?" "No." "Did I touch this table?" "No." "Did I touch that fork?" "Yes." The secret consists in saying the word "that" before the article touched instead of "this."

The Pleasant Future.

It is not that I do not care for lovely summer hours. For fragrance of the clover fields and of the loads of hay. For clouds that roll up white and high, for sudden gleams and showers. For quiet shade at noontime and the lingering close of day.

But when I hear the pleasant tinkle, tinkle of the brook. I think of merry sleighbells, and I'm longing in a trice. For brother stamping off the snow, for cozy fire and book. And mother bringing something in all steaming hot and nice!

I love the yellow autumn time, when days are crisp and cool. Then, far and wide, we roam the fields. The corn's in whispering sheaves. The moon through half bare branches is reflected in the pool. And fires below add to the glow of thinning maple leaves. Now kindly through the early dark our window light shines out! The kitchen's full of spicy smells, and supper tastes so good! I love the fall; yet spring will come, and crows will speak. And glad I'll be when bluebirds sing and flowers bloom in the wood. —Youth's Companion.

NITROGEN IODIDE.

A Wonderful Substance That a Mere Breath Would Explode.

"What would be the consequences of trying a barrelful of nitrogen iodide it would be impossible to say," declares a writer in the London Strand Magazine, "simply because the stuff is too awful to be made in such quantities."

"It may sound like a joke, but it is nevertheless the truth, that the trend of a household is sufficient to explode this dangerous material. It is not necessary that a fly should walk over the compound. It has only to get one foot into contact with the explosive; when the jolt causes it to explode and to blow the insect into the air."

"Another manner in which the peculiar property of this explosive can be demonstrated is by scattering a small quantity of the dry powder over a sheet of clean paper. It then resembles pepper and only needs a few sharp breaths of the manipulator—just sufficient to make them roll—to cause each speck to ignite and explode, meantime giving off a long, thin column of dense purple smoke. If a barrelful of nitrogen iodide could be made it would have to be kept moist to prevent danger. By comparison gunpowder is a mild, innocent, inoffensive material."

STILTON CHEESE.

It Differs in the Making From the Ordinary Cheese.

Stilton cheeses differ from ordinary cheeses in the method of manufacture. Each Stilton is made in a circular mold, or vat, two feet deep and about nine inches in diameter, perforated at the sides and bottom. When the milk has been turned into curd by means of rennet it is transferred into the vat, which is lined with a coarse woven cloth, with a ladle. When a thin layer of curd covers the bottom of the mold a little dry salt is sprinkled over it. This is supposed to create the blue mold often found in Stiltons. Then more curd is added in layers until the vat is full. The whey gradually drains through the cloth and out of the holes into the pan in which the vat stands. After the curd has stood for twenty-four hours a tin disk is laid on the top and a weight applied to hasten the expulsion of the whey. When quite firm, the cheese is removed from the vat and placed on a shelf to dry. After some days the cloth is taken off and the cheese is left to ripen in a special room, the temperature of which never varies.—London Answers.

MAINE SPOOKS.

A Ghost House, a Phantom Light and a Mystic Woodchuck.

Bowdoinham boasts a veritable ghost house where it is said the chairs refuse to stay quietly in their places, but in the middle of the night walk out and draw together in groups just as if guided by visible hands. Then there is a spirit cane that goes walking all by itself just at midnight, tapping its way along from room to room and finally taking up its abode in the chamber where a member of the family sleeps. That this statement is true is affirmed by those who have seen the phenomena and who are not at all afraid of ghosts.

At another house in the village is a phantom light that shines each night no matter whether it be moonlight or darkness just above the closet door in the upper chamber. For years this light has disturbed the people who at different times have occupied the room, and some have been much afraid of the flickering gleam. From time to time different explanations have been offered, but none has proved satisfactory. The light continues to shine, and no one can account for the mystery.

Down at Lary O camp is a spook woodchuck which every evening, just at the sunset hour, comes out of an old family tomb, halfway between the camp and the home farm. There on the tomb he sits quietly, watching the sunset lights on the waters of Mery-meeting. Just as the sun sinks below the horizon he disappears. The tomb awakens him up, and he is seen no more until the sunset hour comes round again.—Kennebec Journal.

For that Dull Feeling After Eating.

I have used Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for some time. I can testify that they have done me good and that any tablets I have ever used. My troubles was a dull feeling after eating. I have used FREEMAN, Kempt, Nova Scotia. These tablets strengthen the stomach and improve the digestion. They also regulate the liver and bowels. They are far superior to all other tablets. ARAB FASHIONS.

Clothes the Natives Wear and the Tailors Who Make Them.

Conservative in all matters, the Arab is especially averse to change in the matter of clothes. Not only do the fashions of the Arabs never change, writes Graham Petrie in "Tunis, Kairouan and Carthage," but they are very restricted. Although every Arab wears a gandoura more or less richly embroidered, it is always worked in one of three accepted patterns, from which no deviation nor any combination is permitted.

The only matter in which personal taste is allowed to show itself is in the choice of color. In this respect entire freedom is permitted and taken full advantage of, although it is curious to note that the more delicate shades of pink, yellow and mauve are generally worn by elderly men, while rich red and brown are in favor with their juniors.

The souk-el-trunk is the souk of the tailors in Tunis, and here in numerous little shops the sartorial needs of the Arab population are fashioned and temptingly displayed. I call them shops for want of a better word, but they are as unlike the European shop as anything one can imagine. They are really recesses separated from each other by coupled columns painted with stripes of red and green, which served a continuous cornice, richly carved and colored. There are no windows or doors, and the shop is raised some four feet above the ground. To this elevation the tailor nimbly vaults, for there are no steps to assist him. Sitting cross-legged in orthodox fashion, he there cuts out pieces together and embellishes the gay silk waistcoats, gandouras and other garments beloved of the Arab.

The Crisis.

"Now, Tommy, you must go and wash yourself."
"Ma, if you keep on at this washin' business you'll queer me whole vacation."—Century Magazine.

ATTENTION FARMERS

Have you ever enjoyed before such prosperity, high prices for cotton, and good prices for your cotton seed? We should be very thankful this year, as all this is evidence convincing that the south with her crops that others can not supply is certain to grow to wealth, and the industrious farmers has the greatest advantage of all others to accumulate, as he actually grows the products that are worth so much. And to our farmer friends around Clanton, we want to say that we are still doing all in our power to give you the very best results at our Gin at Clanton. We try each day to do better work, and get more lint from the seed, than the day before. Won't you help us with your patronage that we may help you by continuing to improve our plant. Keep your cotton dry, and don't allow trash and foreign matter in it, as it works a hardship on us trying to keep up the gin saws. We are preparing now to sharpen our saws that we might be able to give you the best bales of cotton as good as the first bales, and it is necessary if we do good work for you, to keep our plant in as good shape on the last bales as on the first bales. Our work this year is better than last, and if we can only get your hearty co-operation and patronage we will certainly in the end give Clanton farmers such results as no other communities get.

Thanking you for your patronage, and trusting that you will speak to your neighbor in our behalf, we beg to remain,

Very truly yours,
CLANTON GINNEY,
J. A. Maddox, Manager.

Not So Bad.

"I asked my class of small boys if any could tell me the meaning of the word 'apprentice,'" said a teacher recently, "and all looked at me blankly until one lad arose.

"Can you tell me what apprentice means?" I repeated.

"Yes, it means practicing work."

Rich Men's Gifts Are Poor

beside this: "I want to go on record as saying that I regard Electric Bitters as one of the greatest gifts that God has made to man." writes Mrs. O. Rineault, of Vernal Center, N. Y. "I can never forget what it has done for me."

This glorious medicine gives a woman buoyant spirits, vigor of body and brilliant health. It quickly cures Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Melancholy, Headache, Backache, Fainting and Dizzy spells; soothes up the weak, ailing and sickly. Try them, 50c. at Upchurch Drug Co.

THORSBY, A.L.A.

The Largest is the Garrison Flag. Twenty by Thirty-six Feet.

The largest ensign made is called No. 1, and its dimensions are thirty-six feet on the fly and nineteen feet at the hoist, but this is very rarely used. The largest flag used in the army is the garrison flag, with a thirty-six foot fly and a twenty foot hoist, which is displayed only on holidays and important occasions.

To describe the various designs and give the different dimensions of all the flags used in our army and navy would require several columns of space. There is a considerable number of flags of various kinds that have peculiar functions to perform. The amount of bunting required for the outfit of one of our battleships is something enormous, for, besides our own flags, she must be supplied with a varied assortment (some forty odd) of foreign national flags for display, as naval etiquette demands, when the high officials of other nations come aboard or whose waters our ships enter while on a foreign cruise.

All of these foreign flags are made at the Brooklyn navy yard.—Manchester (N. H.) Union.

A Blessing to Women

VINO VITE is a valuable medicine in the treatment of all derangements of women. It is scientifically compounded from roots, herbs and not from mineral poisons and drugs of doubtful value. VINO-VITE is reliable, harmless, and highly efficacious in correcting irregular menstruation, chronic congestion, ulceration, displacement attended with kidney disorder. VINO-VITE is a wonderful panacea. Drug stores sell it at $1.00 per bottle—or send to the Granger Medicine Company, Chattanooga, Tenn.

A CARD.
Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 14, 1909
As the "report is out," and ap-to be pretty generally circu-in Clanton that I am engaged to be married to a certain young of that town, I wish to say, in to the young lady concerned,
that the "report" is not true.
There is absolutely no foundation in fact for such "report." I am not now, nor have I ever been engaged to be married to, or any other lady in Clanton or elsewhere.
And connection with the above
saying that I did not make a trip to Memphis, Tenn., nor Texas last summer, as has been "reported."
These are the facts in each of the above cases, the ever busy

of simple justice to the young lady in question, as well as to set myself right in the matter before my

ALASKA.

Land of Great Resources and of Amazing Distances.
Alaska on some near tomorrow is pected by an official of the United States geographical survey to have a million increase in population.
The metal and coal mining industries
should each support at least 100,000, and if a third of the land classed as unavailable is now available for farming it will furnish 20,000 homesteads, supporting over 100,000.
The tourist who travels to Glacier Park, the capital of Juneau, and the Scouterie Sitka must not suppose he has seen Alaska.
He could skirt another 5,000 miles of coast line to Cordova, Valdez and ward and then, writes a correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle, if he would see Alaska his journey is only just begun.
For the gold fields of Fairbanks would be 400 miles to the north, and those of Nome would be as distant as New York is from Chicago.
It would be a still greater distance to the seat rookeries of the Pribilof Islands and the great tundras of the north, with their herds of wild reindeer and their lonely Eskimo igloos.
To reach the westernmost Aleutians would require a journey
as long as that from New York to Seattle.
Should the tourist retrace his steps to the coast, cross the White pass and follow the mighty Yukon for 2,000 miles to Hering his knowledge of Alaska, while much enlarged, would be incomplete.

Editor Banner—Now that the great campaign is over and the amendment is crushed into oblivion and the white badge fellows are no more, we are content with the victory and to settle down to business.
But some candidate for State office has dropped his candy for next year, for we are not going to vote for any man for office who was an advocate of the amendment, and thus it will be all over the State.
Well, the farmers are all through per in regard to the death of my wife. After having consumption for two years, she died on November 6, leaving nine children to weep behind her. She said she was prepared to go and her request was for me and the children to meet her in heaven. This was a sad thing for me.

Yours truly,
ELIJAH KELLEY.

Jemison, Dec. 11, 1909
Editor Banner—Please let an old fogey have a little space in your valuable paper to say a few words in regard to what these prohibition-ists remind me of. They say that they can't keep the boys from drinking whiskey and going to hell,
but if you will let us have control of Alabama we can control all of the boys and girls of Alabama, and I think they could control their own boys without the whole State.
For that is a big job. They remind me of a man who went to a neighbor with a sack under his arm to buy some corn, and the man was out in the field plowing and when this man got there he said, "you are not doing this plowing right, I would have done it this way."
"Well," the man said, "if you are such a good farmer, why are you here to buy corn?" And that is what I think about these smart clerks that want to run this government, they are all the time complaining they can't control their boys, and I think they had better take that sack from under their arm and control their own boys.

A NOTABLE SERVANT HAS PASSED.
To mansions eternal Samuel Barksdale Mims, relict of the slaveholdings of the late James R.
Mims, died on Wednesday, November 17, 1909. He was a victim of heart failure. Mr. Mims bought him from C. Barksdale of Virginia on the 4th day of March, 1845.
Sam was then 12 years old, and served in his master's home faithfully till the day of his death. His master and his master's children had passed away and he was still faithful to the old home and to his Master's grand-children. He loved his God and his Bible with that faithfulness so characteristic of him. We thank God for this great and good servant for his excellent traits of character that passeth

poral world 76 years and died greatly beloved by all. So sudden was his going home that the shadow of death never settled upon his calm and peaceful face.

PAT SHEEDY, ART LOVER AND SPORT

Glimpses of the Man Who Recovered a Priceless Picture.

ONCE A FAMOUS GAMBLER.

It Was Sheedy Who Restored Gainsborough's Famous "Duchess of Devonshire" After Its Theft—Skillful as a Gambler While Still in School.

Patrick Francis Sheedy, the well known gambler and connoisseur of art, who recently died in his room over an art store he had owned in New York city, but who for years before was prominent in sporting circles of all kinds under the simple name of Pat Sheedy, began his career as an art connoisseur when he quit all his sporting interests three years ago and went abroad. He purchased many pictures, among them samples of the Barbizon school and of Reynolds, Vien and Sculbert, which he brought to the United States and installed in his New York galleries.

Sheedy had also been a manager of prizefighters and professional athletes and a go-between among thieves and detectives. He was one of the most picturesque figures the underworld has ever produced.

Expert Gambler at School.

"I became a skilled gambler while still in school," he has been quoted as saying. "At twelve I could bunko any boy in my class at a game of chance.
We used to play for the head marks
we got in school. My parents died, and I had to get out and stir for myself. I naturally turned to gambling, though it was in a small way at first.
I was encouraged by success, and the first thing I knew I was a professional.
I started first in Boston, where I won several thousand dollars, and then struck out for New York.

"There I opened a faro bank in 1870.
I reaped a golden harvest in two years and traveled extensively, crossing the Pacific ocean and taking in China and Japan. All the while I gambled there, and many were the times I got low in pocket.

"I settled in Chicago in the late eighties and ran a wide open house in that city for a long time. Next I became manager for John L. Sullivan.
After my capital overlapped the million mark I joined in the games and frequently wound up disheartened and heartless. Once I held $1,000,000 in the palm of my hand; an hour afterward I couldn't lay claim to a cent.
I sat three days and four nights in a poker game.

"When the so called gambling bella were suppressed in Chicago my purse contained something in the neighborhood of $500,000. I went to play at Monte Carlo, playing carefully at first.
But one night I went into the place with 200,000 francs in my pocket. I left Monte Carlo that night without the price of a supper.

Quickly Learned Russian and German.
"I went to Russia, Germany and Asia Minor and learned their languages in a few months' stay. Going then to Bombay, India, I introduced American gambling methods there. In the autumn of 1892 I left Bombay with a fortune and went to Cairo, Egypt. The casino was in a palace. It had cost $5,000,000 to build. I got a twenty-five year lease on it and so altered it that every traveler who passed through Cairo for years afterward patronized it.

"There were balls and receptions every afternoon and gambling in the evening. We played roulette and baccarat. Two hundred people came every night, no one with less than $250 in his pocket. The individual losses sometimes reached $40,000, my income from the place being about $25,000 a month."

Remarkable Incident in His Life.

Pat Sheedy's recovery of the famous Gainsborough "Duchess of Devonshire" painting stands out as one of the most remarkable incidents of his whole eventful career, and it is doubtful if the whole story ever will be known.

In 1876 the Gainsborough was stolen from the art studios of the Agnews in London—the canvas cut cleanly out from its frame with never a clew to the thief. For twenty-five years not a word was heard of it, and it was supposed generally the robber, finding it impossible to dispose of a work of art
so well known, destroyed it as a measure of precaution.

One day in April, 1901, Sheedy astonished the police of New York and of the world by announcing he would get the picture back on payment of $5,000. His only stipulation was that no questions were to be asked. The condition was agreed upon, and, true to his word, Sheedy restored the picture a few days afterward in as good condition as ever.

Some of its wanderings were made known subsequently. It had been stolen by Adam Worth, who hid it in storehouses in England for almost ten years. Then he brought it to the United States, but he found it as impossible as ever to dispose of it, and once again the masterpiece was tucked away in the obscurity of warehouses, sometimes in New York or Brooklyn, sometimes in Boston or Philadelphia. Exactly how it came at last into his hands was something Sheedy never told, and Adam Worth's connection with the affair was not made known until after Worth's death.

SPIGENER'S CASH STORE
A WORD TO MY MANY
CHILTON COUNTY FRIENDS
I have just gotten in a line of
Dry Goods, Notions, shoes, etc.
These goods are bought right, and priced to sell, not to keep. I especially invite the ladies to call and inspect my stock, as they will see that I remembered the wants
and needs of the women, children
and babies as well as the men and boys.
This store will be continually receiving fresh goods the year round.
You will find many things here for sale that you will not find at other stores in the country. You will also be astonished at the very low
prices on many articles that I am able to make you; money saved is money made. Come and be convinced that I can save you money
on many things that you have to
buy. There are several reasons
why I can save you money on your
cash purchases.
1st This is strictly a cash store
thus doing away with the expense
of a book-keeper, which is a saving of from six to one hundred dollars
a year.
2nd. This store will not have any bad account to lose and to be put on to the price of goods that you buy.
3d. I will have no collection agency to pay.
4th This is a one price store,
goods will be sold to everyone at the same price.
When the people once find this
out, half the force can wait on the same trade, which will lessen the expense of running any business.
This store is located next door to new Post Office building.
Yours, anxious to please,

WORLD ARMIES

Methods by Which Their Strength is Maintained.

THE CONSCRIPTS.

...of Dodge Are Adopted by the Eligible Young Men to Avoid the Military Service That is So
...to Them.

We hear a good deal about conscription, but few people know what it actually means. In no country is every man who is able to fight drafted into the army. All males who are fit to serve undergo a physical examination, resulting in only a certain number being passed as fit for service.
The government has sufficient funds to pay the whole of these men into the regular army, so a selection is made by ballot, the number of men enlisted varying according to the funds of the hands of the authorities.

The pay provided for the conscript is ...trifling indeed and
...compare with that paid to vol-
...soldiers. In fact, it is generally
...that the conscript must fall back on his private means.

The methods vary in each country.
...like the case of one European
...Every male subject not phy-
...incapacitated is liable to enter
...army at the age of twenty, al...though those who care to enlist may
...at eighteen.

A register is kept of all the youths
...reach the age of twenty in the ...year. Men under five feet
...inches in height are exempt from ...service, as well as those who ...suffer from natural infirmities,
...which render them unsuitable for ac...tive service.

Other men are also exempt if they ...have helpless dependents—thus the ...son of a widow or of a disabled
...father, the latter category also in...cluding the only son of a father who is ...above seventy years of age. Then the ...son of a family of orphans is ex-
...empt, and in the case of two sons only
...one is liable, there being various other
...exemptions.

The term served by the conscript is
...of twenty-five years, three years
...spent in the regular army, six
...and one-half in the army reserve, six
...in the territorial army and the re...maining nine and a half years in the ...territorial reserve, all liability to serv...ice ending at forty-five.

The service is frequently so hated
...that all manner of methods are adopt...ed in order to avoid it. In many ...cases substitutes are provided by the ...wealthy, though there are stringent ...regulations with regard to the pro...duction of the substitutes.

In most European countries military ...service is required in order to avoid com...pulsory military service has reached the ...stage of a fine art. In fact, a formi...dable list of new crimes has been added
...to the statutes as a result, and medical
...men frequently have to suffer for their ...assistance in this particular kind of
...crime.

Some time ago a number of
...these doctors were arrested upon a ...charge of having administered pills to ...young conscripts. These pills consist...ed of drugs which produced the symp...toms of heart disease so effectively as ...completely to deceive the military au...thorities, with the result that the con-
...scripts were declared unfit for service.
...In this case the fraud was brought to ...light by one of the conscripts dying as
...a result of an overdose of the medi...cine.

In Germany, where the conscript is ...frequently treated with the greatest
...kindness, there are very few towns
...where there are not specialists whose
...specialty depends solely in inducing such
...condition of affairs as will render
...young men exempt by reason of un-
...fitness.

In the French army it is quite com...mon for youths to feign all manner of ...defections being the usual ailment
...resorted to in order to escape the serv...ice. As a result the military doctors
...are made an especial study of meth...ods of detecting feigned deafness and
...to trap the cunning youth who acts
...the part of a deaf man.

Another common practice in France
...is to tamper with the eyesight, though
...this frequently results in permanent
...blindness. For instance, short sight is ...produced by wearing powerful con-
...cave glasses for a considerable time
...before the eyes are examined. It is no un...common occurrence for men to commit sui...cide rather than submit to forced serv...ice in the army.

RED CLOUD, THE SIOUX CHIEF

Anecdotes Told of the Famous Old Indian Warrior.

Red Cloud, the famous old Sioux Indian chief, who recently died at the Pine Ridge Indian agency in North Dakota, was formerly one of the greatest of Indian chiefs. He was born eighty-six years ago. He was brought up in obscurity, his father being a common Indian warrior and not one of the chiefs whom his son might have succeeded. By sheer force of will, bravery and intelligence Red Cloud rose step by step to be the chief of the greatest, most warlike and most brave tribe of American Indians. In his war of thirty years against the whites
Red Cloud became known to the government's Indian fighters as the boldest and bravest of Sioux leaders, and it was during those years that he gradually worked his way up until he was recognized as the leader of all the Sioux bands and tribes. Red Cloud's first notable victory is called the "massacre of Fort Phil Kearney." In this fight the Indian chief wiped out the entire government force at the little fort, losing several hundred of his own warriors in accomplishing this.

An amusing tale is told of a dream
Red Cloud once had. He dreamed that he was to be killed by lightning, and the dream so troubled him that he decided to assemble all the warriors and medicine men in council and mix medicine to be offered up to the Great Spirit in the hope of warding off the threatened danger. Accordingly the Indians were assembled in two large circles, one inside the other. Two medicine lodges were pitched within the inner circle, and, swinging two large kettles upon poles over a roaring fire, the medicine men threw several dogs in them and proceeded to boil them. When the canines were done
they were taken out of the kettles, carved, distributed among the assembled savages and eaten by them in behalf of their chieftain. The "dog feast" lasted two days, and at the end of that time Red Cloud believed the Great Spirit had appeared. He was not struck by lightning, and he attributed his escape from death in that form to the dog meat his people ate.

Red Cloud was once asked to tell the story of the most thrilling experience he ever met with. It was a tale of one man against seven, and the old chief's dim eyes grew bright and his wrinkled face lighted up with a strange light as he related it. A well known warrior was jealous of Red Cloud and with six of his followers lay in ambush for and tried to kill him. Two of them were armed with rifles, the others carried only bows and arrows, while Red Cloud had a Winchester.

At the first Red Cloud fell with a bullet in his thigh, but from where he lay wounded in the tall grass he contrived to kill every one of his assailants.

CAREER OF SENATOR RAINES.

New York Legislature Prominent as Author of the Raines Law.

State Senator John Raines of New York was born at Canandaigua, N. Y., May 6, 1840. He was educated as a lawyer and graduated in due course from the Columbia College Law school, but gave up his prospects of practice at the bar to take up the work of an insurance agent in his home town.

From 1861 to 1864 he served in the Army of the Potomac. After the civil war Mr. Raines entered the politics of the state of New York. He was elected to the assembly in 1880 from Ontario county, and in the following year he distinguished himself in his position in the almost endless contest for the United States senatorship. In 1882 Mr. Raines was defeated for re-election to the assembly, but in 1885 he regained his position.

Then he was elected to the state senate, a body with which he was always after intimately connected. In 1890 he was sent to Washington as a member of congress, but four years later he was again elected to the state senate.
In 1895 Senator Raines proposed and had passed the ballot reform bill known as the Raines blanket ballot act.

Shortly after this Senator Raines submitted the liquor law now in force
throughout the state of New York.
The public argument over the passage of this act, familiarly known as the "Raines law," brought the senator into a country wide prominence. He was attacked by both the press and the clergy.

For the past fifteen years Senator Raines has been returned regularly to the state senate. He gradually assumed the position of "boss" of that body.
In 1907 Governor Hughes rejected his proposed amendment to the electoral law to provide for a recount of the majority vote in New York city.

In a Coal Pit Seventy Years.
Joseph Walton of Durklands, Swad-thorpe, Burton, England, who recently retired to spend the evening of life in a house next to that in which he was born, has achieved the remarkable record of working full time in a coal pit when close on ninety years of age.
He has worked as a miner for about seventy years. He remembers the time when colliers worked twelve hours a day for half a crown (2 cents), and he was one of the first to join the British Miners' association. Walton was one of a family of seventeen and has two octogenarian brothers living.

New Post Hole Digger.
A Michigan man has patented a post

like a miniature clam shell dredge.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XII.—Fourth Quarter, For Dec. 19, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, a Comprehensive Quarterly Review—Golden Text. II
Tim. iv. 7.—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Lesson I.—Paul a prisoner—the arrest, Acts xxi. 27-32. Golden Text, II
Tim. i. 3. "Thou therefore endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." Paul knew that bonds and afflictions waited for him everywhere
—30-43 margin; but whether he uncertainly ran into some of them or not we cannot say. This was probably one of the three times that he was beaten with rods (II Cor. xi. 25). He accepted all as being in the will of that Just One for him and coveted only to be His faithful witness.

Lesson II.—Paul a prisoner—the plot,
Acts xxiii. 11-24. Golden Text, Ps.
xli. 2. "I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress, my God;
in Him will I trust." Beaten and his life sought by the mob, liable to be pulled in pieces by the frenzied Jewish council, how comforting must have been the visit of the Lord to him that night with those words: "Be of good cheer, Paul; thou hast testified of Me."

Lesson III.—Paul a prisoner—before
Felix, Acts xxi. 10-27. Golden Text, Acts xxi. 16. "Herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offense toward God and toward men." The topics of this chapter are the faith in Christ, righteousness, temperance and judgment to come, the hope of Israel, the resurrection of just and unjust and believing all things
written in the law and in the prophets.

Lesson IV.—Paul a prisoner before
Festus and Agrippa, Acts xxi. 30-32.
Golden Text, II Tim. i. 12. "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day." For the third time the story of Paul's conversion, the resurrection of the dead and the future glory of Israel, the present forgiveness of sins through Jesus Christ for all who will turn from the power of Satan unto God and the eternal inheritance.

Lesson V.—Paul a prisoner—the voyage, Acts xxvii. 13-26. Golden Text, Ps. xixvii. 5. "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in Him, and He shall bring it to pass." Paul's advice to tarry at Crete is unheeded. A two weeks' storm follows in which all expect to be lost—probably all except Paul and his party—but again the Lord comes to Paul either personally or by an angel and assures him that no life shall be lost and that he must be brought before Caesar.

Lesson VI.—Paul a prisoner—the shipwreck, Acts xxvii. 30, to xxviii. 10.
Golden Text, Ps. xxiv. 22. "The Lord redeemeth the soul of His servants, and none of them that trust in Him shall be desolate." Death and its master pursue Paul most relentlessly. The soldiers advise killing all the prisoners, and, that being avoided and all having escaped drowning, a deadly virus threatens his life, but the Lord delivered and used him to bless many during the three months' stay in Malta.

Lesson VII.—Paul a prisoner in Rome, Acts xxviii. 11-31. Golden Text, Rom. i. 16. "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." We now see Paul dwelling two whole years in his own hired house as a prisoner and continually preaching the kingdom of God and teaching the things which concern
the Lord Jesus Christ out of the law and the prophets and from morning till evening.

Lesson VIII.—Paul's story of his life,
II Cor. xi. 21, to xli. 10. Golden Text, II Cor. xli. 9. "He said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness." It seems a strange portion to be entitled "Paul's life story," but it does tell a marvelous experience of "a man
in Christ," who suffered all but death, or, as he says, "death oft," and finally a martyr's death, for Christ's sake. The appearances of Christ to him on the way to Damascus and afterward were most exalting, and this one above the rest.

Lesson IX.—Paul on self denial, Rom.
xiv. 10-21. Golden Text, Rom. xiv. 21.
"It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine nor anything whereby the brother stumbleth." The believer, being a citizen of a kingdom of righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost and being filled with all joy and peace in believing, is supposed to live far above the mere eating and drinking for which so many live and be ready to deny himself any selfish gratification which might offend another.

Lesson X.—Paul on the grace of giving, II Cor. viii. 1-15. Golden Text, Acts xxi. 35. "Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, It is more blessed to give than to receive." Again the lesson is one of being so conquered by Him who gave Himself for us that we cannot help giving ourselves wholly to Him for the benefit of others, even at the cost of becoming poorer by doing so. If only we can commend Him to others.

Lesson XI.—Paul's last words, II
Tim. iv. 1-18. Golden Text, Phil. i. 21.
"For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." What shall we say of giving when we see Paul at the close of a life of untold suffering saying, Now I am ready to give myself a sacrifice, a martyr, for Him whom I am and whom I serve? He could look back over a life of self denying service since that great Damascus day, and he could look forward to a kingdom of eternal glory in the ages to come.

DON'T BELITTLE YOURSELF.

Four Chapters Come to the Self Depre-ciatory Man.

"Henry," said Uncle Henry to his helpful young nephew, "I would not advise anybody to go around continually belittling his own worth. We live in a world where that's all they can do, blow."

"On the other hand, Henry, never belittle yourself; never be self depre-ciatory. Don't have a poor opinion of yourself, but if you do have such an opinion don't express it. The man who blows his own horns may seldom be taken at his own valuation, but the self depreciatory man almost invariably is."

"So never run yourself down or speak doubtfully of your own ability.
If the boss is thinking of advancing you and he should say to you some day, 'Henry, we are thinking of trying you on this thing—do you think you could handle this job?' you don't want to say, 'Well, I haven't had much experience yet in that way, and I really don't know whether I could do that or not.'"

"You don't want to say anything like that, for if you do he'll be likely to think it over some more and end up by trying somebody else, taking a blower maybe who can't really do the work half as well as you could, but who's got self confidence enough to say he can."

"You don't know what you can do till you try. Some men try and fail, but an astonishing number rise to occasions, developing strength or ability that others might never have thought them to possess."—New York Sun.

SPOILED HER DAY.

Why the Woman Looked Daggery at the Car Conductor.

"Oh, the brute!" exclaimed a stylish dressed woman who was riding
down town on a Tenth street car.
She plainly addressed the remark to the conductor, who smiled deprecatingly, raised his hand to his cap and said,
"Sure, I didn't think it was any use in the world."

All the way to Market street the aggrieved woman followed the unucky conductor, up and down the car with her eyes, "looking daggers" at him.
The poor chap had unwittingly spoiled
her day.

As she came into the car she saw lying near the door a woman's belt buckle. It was supposedly oriental in fashion, with a big "stone" set in it.
She sat down, with her eye on the buckle; rose, stooped and picked it up.
She had opened her bag with the intention of dropping her find within,
but glanced up and saw that the other passengers were watching her. Evidently she thought it might be wiser to ask the conductor if he knew the owner. She held it, therefore, until the conductor passed her, then handed it to him, with the question, "Do you know whether anybody has lost this?"
"I suppose some one has, ma'am," he answered. "Let me see it."

Then, after glancing at it a moment,
"Aw, that's no good," said he and tossed the treasure (?) into the street.
"Oh, the brute!" exclaimed the woman. And who can blame her?—Philadelphia Times.

The Purchase of New York.
When the letter announcing the purchase for 60 guilders ($24) of the 11,000
morgens of land constituting Manhattan island was read in the assembly of the states general on Nov. 7, 1626,
it was resolved that "no action is necessary on this information." Had their high mightinesses possessed prevision how strenuous might have been the resolution passed that the newly acquired island should be kept forever
under their control! Nor was the West India company, that money making trust which ventured this first speculation in wheat and in lands in the long line of enterprises known to Manhattan, more alive to the excellence of their investment. More than ten times the sum paid over to the Indians for about 22,000 acres, according to their estimate, has since been paid for a single square foot of New York soil. Probably there is no other sale on record where the advance in value has been so great.—Putnam's Magazine.

ORIGIN OF THE ROD.

Used in Driving Oxen, It Came Handy
in Measuring Land.
The origin of the rod, pole or perch as a lineal and superficial measure has been traced to the rod, pole or good used to urge and direct a team of oxen pulling a plow. So it came about it was used as a convenient and handy measure in feudal times by the lords in allotting plots of land for agricultural purposes to the vassals and others.

One rod wide and forty long built up a quarter of an acre. The furlong, or four poles wide and same depth—i. e., fourty poles, one acre—was a convenient length for a furrow before turning the plow. Of course in different parts of the country where soils and agriculture varied, but gradually the slight variations grew less, and finally the present accepted statutory acre was evolved.

Gunter's chain of sixty-six feet (ten square chains to the acre) was invented by the Rev. Edmund Gunter (1581-1626). He was a professor of astronomy at Gresham college, London, and ingeniously adapted it to facilitate decimal calculations in land measurements. The use of the rod in superficial measurements of brick work and lineally in hedges, ditches and fences followed as a convenient existing measure.—Builders' Journal.

Colors in Poetry.

As to color, Grant Allen maintained in an "Essay on the Color Sense" that only eight colors are recognized by the popular mind—black, white, red, blue, green, yellow, gray and brown. Educated people speak of scarlet, crimson, lilac and purple only under exceptional circumstances. In a prosaic hour Grant Allen went through "Poems and Ballads" on the quest for color and found that Swinburne used the word red 151 times, rose and crimson once each and sanguine, ruddy and scarlet twice each. Gold is mentioned thirteen times. Blue reaches twenty-five.
And the prosaic conclusion is "to adopt the statistical form, we might say, if we chose to reckon the unrec-onizable, that red is 500 per cent more poetical than blue."

Sleeping in Church.
"Charles," said old Mrs. Speckles to her husband, "I'm so ashamed of the way you go to sleep in church Sunday after Sunday that I don't know what to do. I can't hardly hold my head up and look the people in the face after the services. You are such a devout man on week days that I don't see why you show so much disrespect for sacred things on the Sabbath."

"There's no disrespect intended," answered Mr. Speckles. "I am like the little boy next door. All week he looks forward eagerly to the Sunday auto ride his uncle gives him. It is the crowning event of the week to him. Yet he goes to sleep invariably before he has ridden a mile, and he doesn't wake up until it is all over. Because Willie goes to sleep is no sign that the ride is not doing him any good, is it?"—Newark News.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

One of the Signs We Saw, and Some We Saw Not.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS to one and all, large and little, great and small—friends and foes alike, we wish you all a merry Christmas.
Rejoice and be glad, make merry
all you wish, but be wise withal.

It is a poor heart that never re-joices, and Christmas is essentially a time of gladness and a light heart. The year is drawing to a close, be thankful you have lived to see its finish; rejoice at the success you have attained; be proud of your accomplishments; be grateful for the benefits you have received;
be loving to your friends; forgive your enemies (providing you have any) and be hopeful for the coming year.

Again, our best wishes for a Merry Christmas!

"No, I never drink hard; for it don't suit me.
For toast my friends with a one, two,
three.
Merry and wise is the motto for me.
And up with the lark in the morning."

Last week was our unlucky week;
we got behind at the start and worse behind at the finish. Like the horse's tail we were all behind.
Did you ever notice how, when things begin to go wrong with you, everything follows suit, and the more you try to get them right the worse a muddle you get into. That was our fix last week, hope to do better in future. There's a moral to this, however: Don't get behind in the first place, then you won't have to hustle to catch up.
See?

Whether Cook or Peary discovered the north pole is a much mooted question, but anyway something has stirred up the elements in northern regions and has sent an arctic wave down in this sunny south land, making us shiver and shake and pray for a quick return of our genial climate.

Saturday night was cold and gloomy, looked very much like it was going to snow, but it didn't in this particular part of the country.
We were just below the snow line.
Sunday morning the trees and shrubs presented a pretty spectacle, being draped in an icy suit, while from the roofs of buildings icicles hung in cold splendor. It was pretty to look at through the window of a cozy warm room, but not a pretty morning to be out of door.

Steady or cold drizzling rain fell all day and the temperature kept about the freezing point.

On Monday there was a little improvement, the sun did show his cheery countenance but there was not much heat in it, and the prospects of warmer weather were not very promising for the near future.

Clanton is rejoicing in the elegant appearance of the new post office, which was opened last Saturday. A substantial brick building, well lighted, handsomely furnished, with ample space for employees and the public it is a building which reflects credit upon the town and upon Postmaster Dudley who was largely instrumental in securing this improvement for Clanton.

Much sympathy is expressed for Will Boyd, who was convicted of violation of the prohibition law at the last term of Circuit Court and who was serving his sentence in the mines in the Birmingham district, while his poor young wife lay dying in their home near Clanton.
His wife passed away last Saturday, leaving poor little twins a few weeks old to cry in vain for mother or father. Mr. Boyd was permitted

Editor Banner—I would like to express my thanks to Honorable Judge W. W. Pearson and the officials of Clanton county for their kindness shown to the jurors while on duty at court, and also the good people of Clanton for the kind and hospitable way in which we were treated. While we feel our unworthiness, yet we want to express our sincere thanks to one and all,
for we sure did enjoy our stay amongst you. We feel that we have made a host of new friends that otherwise we would not have made. Still we would like to have been at home killing hogs, but all that, duty done and new friends made, hogs are killed, and we have much to be thankful for. If you Editor could be here to eat backbone and sausage, what a time we would have.

Well, Xmas will soon be here.
Will close by wishing one and all
a merry Xmas.
T. L. ELAM.

Sardis
Editor Banner—Please allow us small space in the Banner to say a few words.

We are sorry to say Mrs. Mattie Pool is on the sick list; we hope
she will soon be well.

We have had two real bad days,
Saturday it rained all day and Sunday everything was covered with ice. We guess the preachers were disappointed Sunday, it was such a bad day nobody would go to church.

Christmas is drawing near; I guess everybody is to have a good time; we are hoping to have a good time.

We see that some of the people are trying to get stock law in old Chilton. We don't see what they are thinking about; we don't need stock law, it is the worst thing they could get up. There are plenty of poor cows here now.

Uncle Lewis Patrick has returned home after a visit to Prattville, where he enjoyed himself fine. We were glad to see him get back.

Some of the people have started a debating society, at the Vermont school house. Anyone wishing to attend, come to the school house
every Saturday night.

We guess some of the boys were disappointed Sunday as the weather was so bad they could not go to see the girls.

Well, for fear of the waste basket
we will ring off, with best wishes to The Banner and its many readers.
THE SAME TWO GIRLS.

NOTICE.
To Taxpayers of Chilton county:
We will be at our office in the Court House at Clanton each week day, except Christmas day, until January 1st, for the purpose of collecting and assessing State and County taxes, and we earnestly insist that the people meet us promptly, and not wait until the last ten days.

word their husbands say—unless they talk in their sleep.

NOTICE.

To the Brethren of the Unity and Chilton County Associations:
The next general meeting will meet with Pilgrims Rest church on the fifth Sunday and Saturday before. The program will be published about the middle of January.
Anyone having a question they want discussed, send it to me and we will put it in. We hope the churches will send delegates, and especially request that the preachers come. Take due notice and govern yourselves accordingly.
T. J. DEASON.

Health of our community is very good.
We are having fine weather for hog killing.

At the home of Rev. J. D. Dea-son, Sunday, Dec. 19, Mr. Keen-Roper and Miss Everette Ratliff were happily married. Rev. J. D.
Deason performing the ceremony.

Well, Xmas is almost here, and
as it is preaching day at this place,
let us all go and celebrate the day in a better way than we do sometimes.

We were sorry to learn of the death of Mr. Walter Abbott; he died at his home near Pletcher,
Dec. 18, with typhoid fever.

Mr. Alonzo Pool of Clanton visited homefolks here Saturday and Sunday.

Well, I will ring off by wishing you all a merry Xmas and a happy New Year.
A FRIEND.

The World's Greatest Battleship.
The North Dakota is the fastest battleship of the Dreadnaught type afloat, as well as one of the two most powerful battleships in the world. She has developed a maximum speed of 22.25 knots and an average of 21.88; both of which are in excess of the best performances of her sister ships, the Delaware of the country and the Bellrophen of the British navy.

CALL FOR DEMOCRATIC STATE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.
The State Executive Committee of the Democratic Party of Alabama is called to meet in the city of Montgomery in the city hall, at noon on the 24th day of January, 1910. The press of the state is requested to publish this above
call.

Frank S. White, Chairman.
In discussing the call, Captain
White said:
"I deem it proper that the Executive Committee should be called to meet at as early a date as convenient so that the requirements of the code may be complied with."
"Section 530 of the code provides that when a primary election is held that the State Committee, by action taken at least six months prior to any general election, shall prescribe a uniform date for holding such primary election for all State officers. (The 1st State Democratic platform also declared in favor of holding a primary election for all State and county officers on the same date.)"

The call, it is believed, will awaken political interest in Alabama, and the several candidate for Governor will get busy.

Governor Comer on Wednesday issued a parole to James E. Norman, who was convicted in 1905 in the Circuit Court of Chilton County for assault to rape and was sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary.

Very truly yours,
CLANTON GINERY,
J. A. Maddox, Manager.

ATTENTION FARMERS.
Have you ever enjoyed before such
prosperity; high prices for cotton,
and good prices for your cotton seed.
We should be very thankful this
year, as all this is evidence convincing that the south with her crops
that others can not supply is certain
to grow in wealth, and the industrious farmers have the greatest advantage of all others to accumulate,
as he actually grows the products
that are worth so much. And to our farmer friends around Clanton,
we want to say that we are still doing all in our power to give you the very best results at our Gin at Clanton.
We try each day to do better
work, and get more lint from the seed, than the day before. Won't
you help us with your patronage
that we may help you by continuing to improve our plant. Keep your cotton dry, and don't allow
trash and foreign matter in it, as it
works a hardship on us trying to keep up the gin saws. We are preparing now to resharpen our saws
that we might be able to gin your
last bales of cotton as good as the
first bales, and it is necessary if we
do good work for you, to keep our
plant in as good shape on the last
bales as on the first bales. Our
work this year is better than last,
and if we can only get your hearty
co-operation and patronage we will
certainly in the end give Clanton
farmers such results as no other
communities get.

Thanking you for your patronage,
and trusting that you will speak to
your neighbor in our behalf, we beg
to remain,
Very truly yours,
CLANTON GINERY,
J. A. Maddox, Manager.

Weak Throat—Weak Lungs

Cold after cold; cough after cough! Troubled with this taking-cold habit? Better break it up. We have great confidence in Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for this work. No medicine like it for weak throats and weak lungs. Ask your doctor for his opinion. He knows all about it.
His approval is valuable. Follow his advice at all times.
No alcohol in this cough medicine. J.C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Always keep a good laxative in the house. Take it when your cold first comes on. What is the best laxative for this? Ayer's Pills. Ask your doctor his opinion. Let him decide.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of Solicitor of the 15th Judicial Circuit of Alabama, subject to the action of the next Democratic Primary.

Respectfully,
F. LOYD TATE.

PAY your poll tax before the first of February—you will want to vote next year.

Hon. Emmett O'Neal has announced himself a candidate for Governor. An able man, the illustrious son of an illustrious father, who has been a hard worker in the cause of the people, wishes to further serve them in the capacity of Governor of this great State. Good luck to him!

Dr. Cook never went to the North Pole declares the University of Copenhagen, who have made an examination of his alleged proofs. Dr. Cook has disappeared—it is as much trouble to find him as it is to find the pole.

New Trial For Mrs. Pope.

Mrs. Hattie Pope, who was convicted of the murder of her mother, at the Spring term of the Circuit Court, and who is now in jail at Clanton, is to have a new trial—the Supreme Court having reversed and remanded the case on the ground that while the trial was held at a special term of court, a grand jury drawn for a regular term found the indictment. At the former trial Mrs. Pope was found guilty and sentenced to imprisonment for life. It is possible that new evidence at the forthcoming trial may put a new light on the case.

F. LOYD TATE.

With pleasure we announce in this issue of THE BANNER the candidacy of F. Loyd Tate, the well known lawyer of Wetumpka, for the position of Circuit Solicitor for this, the fifteenth district. As solicitor for the old district Mr. Tate made an excellent record for the prompt and fearless performance of the duties of his office, and his invariable politeness made him many friends which will stand him in good stead in this campaign.

STOCK LAW ELECTIONS.

The voters of Beat 13 last week held an election to determine whether or not stock should be permitted to run at large, the result being almost a tie—25 voting for stock law and 26 against. Lost by one vote.

On the same day (Wednesday) Beat 16 also voted on the same proposition and in this case stock law won the day, the vote being 30 for, and 20 against. Carried by 10 votes.

Beat 10 is next on the list, and will vote on stock law on January 13, 1910, starting the voting for the year.

Beat 9 has an election ordered for Thursday, February 3, when the question of stock running at large will be determined.

Remember to pay your poll tax before the first day of February, then you can vote in any election in 1910.

Nonsense.

Custom Officer—Miss, you will have to let me know what that blue trunk contains.

Miss Triller—Oh, nonsense!

Custom Officer—But I demand in the name of the law.

Miss Triller—Well, didn't I just tell you the trunk contains nonsense? It is packed with love letters I received all over Europe.

by the authorities to come home to the funeral of his wife, and we understand an effort will be made to secure his pardon. We believe it is a case entirely deserving of executive clemency.

A DREAM STORY.

The Jeweled Ring a Woman Saw Twice In Her Sleep.

In November, 1898, I awoke one morning fully impressed with the idea that I was receiving as a gift an unusually large gypsy ring set with a single sapphire with a brilliance on each side. The dream was a pleasant one to the female mind, and I was full of sleep again, happily in a state with a mild mannered impression that the jewel was actually in my hands. The curious was my conviction that on my next waking my room as I awoke I had lost one of the two dreams, and I also felt my husband to have written to the statement should anything follow to confirm the dream.

Two hours later the postman arrived, and on great were my excitement and anticipation at seeing a small, neatly done up packet evidently a ring case that I had eagerly opened it and decided to look up my maid to do so. Before breaking the seal I asked the maid to repeat the description of the ring that I had previously given her, and then the fitful picture was opened, and the joyful exclamation followed, "Why, my lady, here it is!" The ring was just the one by a friend to memory of his wife, who had died some months before, but I had absolutely no idea that I should be the recipient of any souvenir of her, and did I ever see her wearing the ring in Clanton.—London Spectator.

Effective.

A Chicago judge recently rebuked a person who was sitting in the courtroom with his feet placed upon the table by sending him, through a bailiff, a piece of paper on which he had written the following query: "What else boots do you wear?" The feet were at once withdrawn.

No Panic.

"We had a bad fire scare in church today."

"Good gracious! Was there a panic?"

"Not to notice. The minister preached on the infernal regions."—New York Journal.

Prodigal.

"That fellow seems to be extravagant."

"Hopelessly. He spends his own money just as if it were the government's."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Study Your Farm.

A farm is likely to be especially adapted to some particular line of work, and the farmer himself is likely to be able to do one kind of farming better than any other kind. As a general rule, it will pay the farmer to specialize—that is, to have some one crop or some one kind of stock which is made the main object of his farming, and to which the other crops and the other branches of farm work are subsidiary. If a man wishes to be a cotton farmer, he should plan to give his cotton every possible advantage, and his other crops should be laid out with a view to this end. If he is a trucker, the trucking crop should be the central figure around which his other operations are arranged. If he is a dairyman, the crops he raises and the other stock which he keeps should be disposed and handled with reference to the dairy work. Starkville (Miss.) Southern Farm Gazette.

GOLD KILLS WEEVILS.

Sleet and snow which have held the northern and north central sections of Louisiana and Mississippi in their grasp for the past two days, will be worth thousands of dollars to the districts infected by the boll weevil according to United States entomologists now in this section. With the winter treatments of the weevils encased in ice and with the temperature as low as twenty degrees in some portions of Louisiana and Mississippi, the experts say that untold inroads have been made on the hibernating weevils.

The census report shows 9,362,222 bales cotton ginned from the growth of 1909 to December 13, compared with 11,900,565 bales for 1908.

The proportion of the crop ginned to December 13, 1909, is 90.5 per cent of the crop on the same day of 1908. Round bales included this year are 139,967 compared with 215,059 for 1908. Sea Island 85,184 bales for 1909. 80,316 in 1908.

Cincinnati boasts the only church on wheels. It is a large electric bus which is loaded with singers and speakers and invades the slums every Sunday.

Jealousy is a key that opens many wedlocks.

Scott's Emulsion

is the original—has been the standard for thirty-five years.

There are thousands of so-called "just as good" Emulsions, but they are not—they are simply imitations which are never as good as the original. They are like thin milk—SCOTT'S is thick like a heavy cream.

If you want it thin, do it yourself—with water—but don't buy it thin.

One of Field's Jokes.

Edward Everett Hale greatly enjoyed a joke which was perpetrated on him by Eugene Field. Field celebrated one of Dr. Hale's visits to Chicago by giving a luncheon in his honor and inviting a number of prominent persons to meet him. "Field was aware," said Dr. Hale, "that I was a temperance man, and therefore I was somewhat surprised to see that the table on which the luncheon was served was very abundantly supplied with bottles labeled 'Whisky,' 'Brandy' and 'Champagne.' But when these bottles came to be uncorked they were all found to contain nothing but water!"

Embroidered Net Bands.

Nets of all kinds are among the novelties of the season, and net bands handsomely embroidered in floss or straw, when on a waist of the same color, look as though the pattern were done on the waist itself. Another device in flowers embroidered in dull colors here and there on ecru lace. Old rose, delft blue and green are seen on the same design. Narrow stripes are the newest style for tailored waists, with net bands of the striped material and bow to match at the throat. Small on waists which go under a jumper is a long narrow cravat caught at the neck with an ornament, the untied ends being finished with pendants.

A WORD TO MY MANY
CHILTON COUNTY FRIENDS

I have just gotten in a line of
Dry Goods, Notions, shoes, etc.
These goods are bought right, and priced to sell not to keep. I specially invite the ladies to
and inspect my stock, as they will see that I remember the wants
and needs of the women, children
and babies as well as the men and
boys.

This store will be continually receiving fresh goods the year round.
You will find many things here for
sale that you will not find at other
stores in the country. You will also be astonished at the very low
prices on many articles that I am
able to make you; money saved is
money made. Come and be convinced that I can save you money
on many things that you have to
buy. There are several reasons
why I can save you money on your
cash purchases.

1st. This is strictly a cash store
thus doing away with the expense
of a book-keeper, which is a saving
of from six to nine hundred dollars
a year.

2nd. This store will not have any bad account to close and to be added to the price of goods that
you buy.

3rd. I will have no collection
agency to pay.

4th. This is a one price store,
goods will be sold to everyone at
the same price.

When the people once find this
out, half the force can wait on the
same trade, which will lessen the
expense of running any business.

This store is located next door to the Post Office building.
Yours, anxious to please,
W. D. SPIGENER

John Whitson's Ambition

He Found a Work For Which He Was Fitted.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.

John Whitson gave up his ambition at eighteen, leaving college and taking up the reins which his father had dropped. It was not to be temporary. He understood that a complete renunciation of all his plans of his life as he had hoped to make it. There were six children and a run-down farm and a mother whose waning strength should be nourished rather than drawn upon. It was the only way; better to sacrifice his ambition than that they should be forced upon charity. In his own plans it would be years before he could educate himself and make a living.

So the books were laid aside, and he forced his energy to a study of the farm and its possibilities. His father had been content with the old methods and had fallen behind. He must push on into the new not only for the necessary livelihood, but for the growing needs of his brothers and sisters and their education. A city was but a few miles away, and gradually he fertilized the barren fields to renewed productivity in such vegetables as the market called for.

He was shy by nature, a scholar whose world was in retirement with his books, but now he forced himself upon a peddler's cart and sold vegetables and fruit from house to house, bargaining for the needs at home. He counted his earnings like a miser and planned for their shrewd expenditure, and he lost sleep in the study of converting soil and sunshine and labor into hard, necessary dollars.

But with it all the road was difficult and sometimes almost beyond his power of endurance. Ten years and he still wore the coat he had worn back from college, now frayed and patched; the mortgage on the farm remained the same, and he still went from house to house selling vegetables, not yet able to hire a boy to do the marketing. But on the other hand, the brothers and sisters were all he could have wished. The oldest boy was working his way through an agricultural college, with an ambition for a higher education beyond; the next was in a technical school at Philadelphia studying to be a civil engineer. One girl was at the state normal, another intending to be a nurse, while the two youngest were still too young to have thought much about their future. During vacations they came home and helped him, and from time to time all of them had entreated to be allowed to do their share in the support. But here he was firm. They should have their education, he decided, and it was too late for him to go back and take up life as he had left it.

So the years went on, and he toiled early and late and planned and bargained and improved, but for all that he was not a farmer and never could be, for it was his will in the work, not his heart. He never went to a house to ask trade but what he shrank back as from a blow, and long after his hands had grown hard and knobby his thoughts would wander surreptitiously to the books he had laid aside.

Perhaps it was his recognized distaste for the work that made him do it so thoroughly and conscientiously. There was not a farm in the country round that was better managed or that produced more for its size. John Whitson was a crank, the neighbors said, which meant that he was always on the lookout for weak, sensitive places in fence or seed, as in himself, that could be strengthened by timely renewal or patching or tending up. If there was any duty he shrank from, that was the duty he was apt to seek first and do most thoroughly.

By the time the younger children were ready for the dual studies which were to fit them for their chosen callings the college graduate and the civil engineer were at work and sending their mites to the home fund. And with the coming of these mites came John's first opportunity to turn his attention to the mortgage.

Of late years he had not permitted himself to regard the future as a personal problem. It was too far away. But with the lessening of the mortgage and the near establishment of the last of the children his own future was again drawing marvellously near. What should be done with it? How unite it with the books which had practically been laid aside for twenty years? He had no taste for farming, but he understood it and could wrest from even his few acres a comfortable living. Could he do as much with his books and dreams, of which he had made no test?

But even in his thoughts he did not hesitate. The books and dreams were his, and burden or banner, it was right that he should take them into his future when the future should be clear. He would lift the mortgage first and would train a boy to a competent management of the place and would put aside enough for household needs. Then he would be free to go. There would be no further necessity for his presence here. His mother was old, of course, and needing care, but Jane, the normal graduate, was at home from teaching now and would remain with her. They could get along just as well without him. His duty was elsewhere, with his true vocation. So he turned over such work as he could to the boy he was training and spent part of each day with his books. It would be three or four years, perhaps as many as five or six, before he could finish paying off the mortgage and getting things in the condition he wished to leave them. But in the meantime he would be preparing himself as thoroughly as possible for this second coming of his ambition.

But as three new years flew swiftly by, bringing him nearer and nearer to his future, the ambition began to separate itself somewhat from that of his youth. He studied himself for this work as he had for the farming and found there weak places that would need patching or perhaps obliterating altogether. Things that were an advantage then were no longer his, and even the maturity that made him stronger was in a way detrimental.

He did not spare his weakness nor magnify his strength. In those days he had dreamed of the work he would do in the pulp, ranging to it fresh and strong, firm in his convictions and thoroughly equipped in his studies. Now the equipment would be want, the freshness gone, and though the convictions would remain and perhaps the strength, the world had passed him by, and he could not push to the front with the new generation.

But he could not attain to the cultured eastern church and large congregation of his dreams there was still outside work in the far west which he could do in the isolated towns and among the camps of the miners and Indians. He would go there. It was not always the work one liked that was best, but rather the work where laborers were few. And in the west perhaps earnestness would be accepted in place of the culture to which he had not attained.

So he worked and studied and dreamed and counted the money that was bearing him on, and at length when the time drew near, he began to study the conditions of his body, as he had tried to those of his mind and faith, for the years that had bridged the chasm of his duty had sapped strength and out there on the frontier he would need sturdy health as well as sturdy faith.

One day Jane discovered that his bed had not been slept in the night before, and she wondered, but said nothing. But when the next day and the next went by and still the bed remained untouched her wonder became investigation, and the investigation soon brought out the cause of the prohibition to her own gray eyes. The fifth evening she listened until she heard him tiptoeing upstairs, then followed softly. He went directly to a bare room in an unused portion of the house, where she heard him raise a window. Moving noiselessly down the hall, she waited a few moments outside the door and then went in. He was lying upon the floor in his clothes, with his head near the open window. A flood of moonlight was streaming in. Jane crossed quickly to his side.

"John," she said severely as she bent over him, "what does this mean?" He started a little uneasily and opened his eyes, but almost instantly his face grew tranquil.

"I am fitting myself for my work, Jane," he said quietly. "I did wish you and mother to know my fear you might be worried."

"Fitting yourself for a death of cold more likely," she retorted. "For a practical farmer you are the most impractical man I ever saw, John." She closed the window with a bang and continued: "Now, I want a good long talk with you. I've wanted it ever since you've had this notion of leaving your head in the open window. A flood of moonlight was streaming in. Jane crossed quickly to his side."

Young Folks

THE MAGIC NEEDLE.

A Fairy Story About Dear Old Grandmother Tippy Toe.

Lost her needle and mended sew. Of course if it had been just an ordinary needle the dear old lady could have bought a new one at the store but this was a magic needle given to her by the fairies. She used it to make their dresses and used the butterfly wings.

All the fairies turned out to hunt for it, but it was nowhere to be found. The fairy queen was very sorry to know Grandmother Tippy Toe had been so careless, but finally promised that if grandmother would go to the magic tree at midnight and sew a new needle, which would be hers, growing there on the tree. In payment for it she must make the queen a new dress out of butterfly wings.

Grandmother was a little afraid to go alone, but to keep up her courage she happily hoped all the way to the tree. There she was so happy to see her new needle that she made a beautiful dress for the queen of butterfly wings, trimmed with cowslips, pansies and one of the most beautiful flowers of the garden.

But she did not know these beautiful flowers pleased the queen so much that she was so glad to give her the new needle that she gave her a magic needle, which would be hers, growing there on the tree. In payment for it she must make the queen a new dress out of butterfly wings.

THE FROG AND THE MOUSE.

A Fable That Teaches the Futility of Little Disputes.

One day there was a great argument between a frog and a mouse. Each pretended to be mistress of the earth. "Gossip," said the mouse to the frog, "you shall find me the best of it. I please. It is mine to be by right. I accepted it before you."

"Me yield you the point, surely you don't imagine that. Why, I have lived here for more than ten years. Learn to know yourself and be content with your little life."

The mouse, offered at the answer of the frog, gave her a challenge. It was accepted. The two creatures, and vengeance in their hearts, slipped out on the field of battle armed with poisonous pincers of fangs. The combat seemed likely to become cruel and bloody. But a hawk who was hovering in the air saw the two heroes and finished their quarrel by carrying them both away in his talons.

This is the fruit of petty disputes between weak people. They are usually the dupes of their own quarrels. From the French of Perrin.

Repartee in Doll Land.

First Doll—You are a silly, wooden headed thing! Second Doll—All right. You needn't be so waxy about it.

Some one who believes in teaching by example has concocted a lesson in the use of two little words which have been a source of mortification and trouble to many well meaning persons. A man, or woman either, can set a hen, although they cannot sit at her; neither can they set on her, although they can sit on them by the hour if they would allow it.

A man cannot set on the wash bench, but he could set the basin on it, and neither the basin nor the grammarians would object. He could sit on the dog's tail, if the dog were willing, or he might set his foot on it. But if he should set on the forehead tail or sit his foot there the grammarians as well as the dog would howl—metaphorically at least.

And yet the man might set the tall aside and sit down and be assailed neither by the dog nor by the grammarians.

What's the Answer?

What notes compose the sweetest tunes? Banknotes. How many tunes do they compose? (Four) Fortunes. What goes from Providence to Newport without moving? The railroad. What fruit is the most visionary? The apple of the eye.

Why is a woman's beauty like a banknote? Because when once changed it soon goes.

A Policeman's Testimony. J. N. Paterson, night policeman of Nauvoo, Iowa, writes: "Last winter I had a bad cold on my lungs and tried at least half a dozen advertised cough medicines and had treatment from two physicians without getting any benefit. A friend recommended Foley's Honey and Tar and two bottles of a bottle cured me. I consider it the greatest cough and lung medicine in the world." Upchurch Drug Co.

Laxative for Women Free

There is a great difference in the purposes to which a laxative should be put. Tablets and pills, salts, etc., are usually violent purgatives of cathartics, and altogether too powerful for the average person.

A woman at all times needs only a mild laxative—in fact, none other is needed by anyone, weak or strong though they may be, for the object is simply to move the bowels, and if a gentle laxative will do it, what is the use of a violent one?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has earned a well-deserved repute among women and children and old folks—people who must necessarily be careful of what they take. It is a liquid laxative tonic and admittedly the greatest stomach, liver and bowel remedy before the American people. The price is only 10 cents or 15 a bottle, as it comes in both sizes, and all drugs, as well as the doctor, find it a gentle action make it an ideal remedy for women in constipation, torpid liver, sour stomach, sick headache, nervousness and such like digestive complaints. Its use for a short time will remove the trouble entirely so that future medication will be unnecessary. Its tonic properties build up the stomach and intestinal muscles so that they act naturally again. That this is so is the experience of many heads of families, like Mrs. Brannan, of Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. K. L. Stout, of Louisville, Ky.; and numerous others, in fact, way out in Williams, Cal., as Mrs. J. B. Blackmore, of that place, writes, "The whole town seems to be using it."

If the remedy is new to you and you want to make a trial of it before buying, send your name to the doctor's address as below and a free test bottle will be sent you. Then, if results are satisfactory, you can buy it of your druggist.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. H. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

THE SPORTING WORLD

Lunghi, the Speed Marvel.
Emilio Lunghi, the fast Italian runner who beat Kilpatrick's record in the half mile, is getting ready to do some great work here next season.
Like Dorando, Emilio wants to make his pit, go back to Italy and settle down for the rest of his life.
Lunghi will not be seen in any of the indoor games during the present season.

EMILIO LUNGI.

season. The Italian has reached the conclusion that he will never be able to make fast time on a board walk.
At home he ran entirely out of doors, last year winning the Italian cross country championship. He is devoting all his time to training for the cross country runs to be held here this winter.

Another Indian Runner.
Reports from Canada state that a recent long distance race held in Canada unearthed a second Longboat in the person of Jimmy George, a Canadian Indian and a member of the Beaverton Athletic club, who won the race in such time that he has attracted the attention of Canadian athletic sharp.

George won from a very fast field. He won his race in such a creditable manner that his manager has decided to enter him in the Boston Marathon next spring. The Indian was a 15 to 1 shot on the betting books, and those who made a wager on his chances to win scored a killing.
Men who have watched George run declare that with more training he will become a record breaker. Had he been pressed at the finish. It is said, he would have broken Sam Mellor's record, made last year.

St. Louis Gets O'Hara.
William O'Hara, who played center-field for the New York Nationals last season, will be a member of the St. Louis club of the same league in 1910. Manager Roger Bresnahan of St. Louis having refused to let the player go to a minor league. It had been the intention of Manager McGraw of New York to place O'Hara with the Toronto Eastern league club next season.

Cartmell to Coach North Carolina.
The University of North Carolina has secured the services of N. J. Cartmell, the former crack runner of the University of Pennsylvania, as coach. Cartmell is one of the world figures in athletics and served on the first American team that attended the Olympic games in London last year. Cartmell will enter upon his duties next spring.

Judge to Lead Coast Ball League.
Superior Court Judge Thomas B. Graham of San Francisco was recently elected president of the Pacific Coast Baseball league to succeed J. C. Baving. The selection came after a protracted session of the league directors in annual session and was the most important business to come before the meeting.

Tony Asta Quits Turf.
Tony Asta, known as "the bootblack," has retired from the turf. He will sell his string of sixteen racers. He will retain a slight interest in racing by keeping Gold Lady, now a brood mare, and by sending Jacques, his fast filly of last season, to the stud.

AT COZY CORNERS

"Speaking of the garden"—said Miranda.

"I didn't know we were speaking of the garden," said I.
"Speaking of the garden," repeated Miranda in a tone which I have learned admits of no trivial rejoinder, "how much space did you think we would allow for the flowers this year?"

"Really, my love, I hadn't thought. I suppose a couple of acres or so will be about all we can afford to." I had glanced away from her and forgotten the topic.

"Curtis, I presume you know I was speaking seriously."

"Really, I beg your pardon," I said quickly—"as much as last year, not too much, possibly a little less, just about what you think necessary." My wife looked at me with a very searching deputy sheriff sort of gaze. Her father was the head of a vigilance committee out west during the fifties, and sometimes I see the old man's soul in the girl's eyes.

"I don't believe you care anything about it," she said.
Here was a domestic tempest to be settled, and I awoke to the occasion as a lazy man most always does when he thinks it worth while. I pulled a stool to her chair and for five minutes talked flowers and horticulture with enough zest, I am so conceited as to believe, to last several days to have won me a position of some sort with a seed store.

"My dear wife and fairy adviser, I assure you with all my heart," said I, "that ever since the wind has had in it the slightest warmth of summer's love I have been thinking about the garden and trying to form couplets containing both the 'rose of Sharon' and the 'bowers of cony corners.'"

"Umph," said Miranda.
"True," I continued undaunted. "You may not believe it. My countenance may not have shown it; even the milkman may not have suspected it."

She gave me a push, and I sat on the floor instead of on the stool.

"The milkman?" she exclaimed, with a show of indignation.

"A mistake," I cried. "You know I sometimes make them. As I was going to say when you interrupted me—"

"Suppose I did?"

"It's all right; but, as I was going to say, the flower garden has largely occupied my mind since the advent of spring. I had thought I would spade up the east corner of the lot for the small stuff. There on the little slope they will get the early sun and the shade during the hot hours."

"Not so bad," said my wife.

"We can put the roses under the trees again. Down near the creek is some black soil that will make them prosper as never before."

"Go on," she said, and this time she smiled.

"We will have the beds all protected by wire this season. You can order all you want from the catalogue, and we will make an expedition or so ourselves and incidentally waste our money on a few bushels of seed potatoes and the like. Out in the woods I have marked two new specimens for the rockery. Our collection of ferns can be increased by a visit to Randall's creek."

"Lorely," she cried.

"These, in brief, your ladyship, are a few of the suggestions that have occurred to me in connection with the adornment of our landscape. The snowball shall be mulched and trimmed, for its meaning is 'thoughts of heaven'; the calla lily, the violet, the daffodil, the dahlia, which means 'forever thine.'"

"Why the daffodil?" she said. "It means 'deceitful hope.'"

"It will," I replied, "grandiloquently remind me of the elusive visions of my youth."

"It's too bad," she replied, but she laughed as she said so. "And what else, Sir Gardener, shall we behold on your soil?"

"The jonquil, gladiolus and the clematis are among my favorites. The first means 'can you return my love?'"

"I know it. Why didn't you propose by wearing it?"

"I didn't want to be kept in suspense," I replied. "We will have the azalea for temperance, the bittersweet for truth, the daisy for innocence, the nasturtium for patriotism, the violet for faithfulness and raise a bed of flax for domestic industry."

Her laugh now rang out so clear that I felt myself to be a very great diplomat indeed.

"You're a dear old confidence man, after all," she said, "and I am only pulling your hair to make you wiser. You have nibbled very badly. You don't know just of those flowers when you see them. But the confiding wife loves the deceitful husband. It's the old story."

"She ran to the piano and struck up 'Marching Through Georgia.' Our dog, the faithful Aggravator, arose and yawned. It, it suggested that it was time to eat."

I opened the west door presently, and a storm was to be seen gathering. Great black clouds had assembled to pour their vials of replenishment upon the expectant earth.

"Oh, I'm so glad," she cried joyously. "It's going to be a good old fashioned thunderstorm. We won't have any callers, and we'll make a map of the garden. So hush, hush, hush, and get your work done."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XIII.—Fourth Quarter, For Dec. 26, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. 4, 1-12. Memory Verses, 11, 12—Golden Text, Matt. 4, 21—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

There is one great truth emphasized in this gospel and in the New Testament which is not made much of by preachers and teachers, as a rule, and that is that Jesus is the son of David, the promised heir to David's throne. See in Matt. 1, 1; Rev. xxi, 16, how the New Testament begins and ends with this and note how Paul uses it in Rom. 1, 3; 11 Tim. ii, 8. See Gabriel's use of it in his message to Mary in Luke 1, 32, 33, and Peter's reference to it in his great Pentecostal discourse in Acts 13, 23. Then take the question of the wise men in our lesson, "Where is He that is born King of the Jews?" Remember that that title in the languages of Jews and gentiles was placed over His cross and that when He shall come again in His glory and Israel shall say, "This is our God; we have waited for Him, and He will save us," it will be to make Jerusalem the throne of the Lord, that all the nations may be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem. Then, the Lord being King of Israel in the midst of them, they shall not see evil any more, and He will make them a name and a praise among all the people of the earth. Then shall all the nations bring their wealth to Israel, even as these wise men did, and Israel shall blossom and bud and fill the face of the earth with fruit (Isa. xlv, 9; Jer. li, 17; Zeph. iii, 15, 19, 20; Isa. lx, 5; margin xlvii, 6). I sincerely trust that every teacher may verify what I have said by these and other texts and thus have the best possible kind of Christ-mass lesson concerning Him of whom the prophet said, "Out of thee (Bethlehem Ephratah) shall He come forth unto me to be ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from of old, from the days of eternity" (Mic. v, 2), or, as it is in our lesson, "Out of thee shall come a governor that shall rule my people Israel" (verse 6). Such a king as Herod might well be troubled by the mention of a King of the Jews, for the time will come when the kings of the earth and the great and rich and mighty men shall call on mountains and rocks to fall on them and hide them from His face and His wrath (Rev. vi, 15-17). The chief priests and scribes knew prophecy well enough to be able to tell where the Messiah should be born, but their knowledge did them no good, for when He came publicly and in every way proved Himself the Messiah about thirty years later they rejected Him and killed Him. It is not a knowledge of Him nor of what the Scriptures say about Him that saves any one, but only the heart reception of Him, according to John 1, 12. Some day we shall know more than we can now about these wise men—who they were, how many there were, just where they came from, what they knew about Him or His star and how they came to know what they did. If the star led them all the way to His land we wonder why they turned from it to call upon Herod and inquire of him. We note that when they left Herod the star seemed to be waiting for them, for it went before them till it came and stood over where the young child was, leading them to the very house. This was therefore no ordinary star, but a supernatural light, a heavenly messenger, and it makes us more than ever interested in these men whom God so honored. When they saw the star again after leaving Herod they rejoiced with exceeding great joy (verse 10), and we do not wonder, for it must have been like passing from hell to heaven to come from such a presence into the presence of God's own messenger. When the angel brought the shepherds word the glory of the Lord shone round about them, and the message was, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." Peter says of Him, "Whom, having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see Him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory" (1 Pet. i, 8).

In the presence of this child and His mother these men fell down and worshipped Him, opened their treasures and presented unto Him gifts, gold and frankincense and myrrh (verse 11). This is no loose change or pocket-book story, but a record of treasures brought to Him. It makes us think of the woman who gave all her living and received from Him such commendation and by contrast of another woman who spent all her living on physicians in a vain search for health and then received it one day in a moment from Him freely. Mary of Bethany brought Him treasure when she anointed Him with very costly ointment (Luke xxi, 8-43; John xii, 3). Are we bringing Him anything that can be compared to treasure, a really sweet savor to Him, a willingness to suffer with Him? When there is no plain guidance given us in His word He will not fail to guide us in some way by His providence or by a dream or a voice if it is necessary. Ps. xxxiii, 8; Isa. xxx, 21, are sure words. I have often been helped by the fact that before they were ordered down to Egypt the gold was on hand to go with, and it was with His gold they journeyed. It had been given to Him. Notice the unexpected source it came from. Remember Hag. ii, 8; Ps. xlii, 5.

A ROYAL BED.
The Magnificent One That Was Used by Queen Elizabeth.

An interesting description of the magnificence of a bedstead ordered for Queen Elizabeth's use is found in a "wardrobe warrant" dated 1581 and quoted in "Gleanings After Time." It was of walnut tree, richly carved, painted and gilded. The eider, tester and valance were of cloth of silver, figured with velvet, lined with changeable taffeta and deeply fringed with Venice gold, silver and silk.

The curtains were of costly tapestry curiously and elaborately worked, every seam and every border laid with gold and silver lace, caught up with long loops and buttons of bullion.

The headpiece was of crimson satin of Bruges, edged with a passamayne of crimson silk and decorated with six animal plumes containing seven dozen ostrich feathers of various colors profusely decorated with gold spangles.

The counterpane was of orange colored satin quilted with cutwork of cloths of gold and silver and of satins of every imaginable tint embroidered with Venice gold, silver spangles and beautifully colored silks fringed to correspond and lined with orange sarcenet.

This was a queen's bed, but almost equally gorgeous ones were common for several centuries. In the reign of Queen Anne a bedstead put up as a prize in a lottery was reported to have cost over £3,000.—London Family Herald.

Graft in the Household.

The tipping system has become acute now that graft is boldly recognized as "business," and the world has no shame for the majority of workers in the vineyard. A charming young matron exclaimed the other day that graft had even invaded her household. She was asked how that was possible and replied, "I have discovered that my most trusted and faithful maid has been approached by some one who shall be nameless to advise the cook, who is another treasure, to leave me."

"But she did not?" "Yes, she did," said the young matron, laughing.

"Yes, she did, and I don't blame her for the price. My nice Julia was paid $20 to sell me out, and the cook's wages are about double what I can pay." "A case of bribery," "Not at all—plain, unvarnished graft," was the philosophic response.—Boston Herald.

Extras.

"I say," said the messenger boy, "that nearsighted man in 406 just fell over a broom and spilled a pail of water on himself."

"Take him up a towel," said the hotel manager, "and charge him for one bath."

FILIPINO WOMEN.

Their Cases Begin Early, and They Win Respect by Hard Work.

"Filipino women know how to win husbands," says an American woman who is living at Manila. "It is a common thing in the islands to see a girl, young and brown and strong, crushing rice with a heavy wooden mallet, while around her sit a number of admiring swains, looking on, but never dreaming of offering to help. And the girl doesn't expect it. She pounds cheerfully away, and by and by her reward comes in a husband to work for."

"Life accustoms the Filipino woman to labor at a very early age. As a tiny girl she is rarely seen without an appendage in the shape of a baby brother or sister perched on her little brown hip. When she grows a few inches taller and a few degrees stronger she is pressed into service as a water carrier, bearing heavy jars of water poised gracefully on her head from the river to her home. Now, too, she works in the fields, and a vivid bit of color she makes in her short kilted sarong and a woman at fifteen or before—she may have a small shop to tend, and there is the rice to beat and much other work to do."

"Marriage brings no vacation. She is pretty sure to have many children to care for. She tends the fields, cooks and frequently has a stall in the market for several hours a day. But when the women are really old then their rest time comes. They sit quietly by, looking on as life goes past them, but taking part no more. In spite of the hard labor they have had there is generally a very peaceful look in the brown, wrinkled faces of these old women."—New York Tribune.

Rank injustice.
Supers are very particular about the distribution of parts. In a fairy piece in Paris a set of dominoes was represented by men wearing on their backs boards marked with the different numbers. A discontented super gave in his resignation and told the management they must find a substitute. "Why, what's the matter?" asked the astonished director. "Don't you get your 15 sous a night like the others?" "It isn't about the sous at all. I am one of the oldest artists belonging to the theater, and they ought to have made me the double six. Instead of that I am the lowest number—the double blank. Rather than submit to such injustice I prefer to leave the theater."
